The Effect of an Unfounded Rumor-What Might Have Happened.

The commotion over the sudden building of that great piece of public improvement, the Belt railway, has not by any means died out. Since last Sunday open demonstrations have not been so actively made as at that time. The work of constuction is proceeding so rapidly as it did then. In fact to a casual observer it might seem that the matter was fast dying out. It might appear that the St. Paul company had concluded to remain helpless, and to quietly allow the ansconda to draw its coils more tightly when it got ready. There has not been much work done on the Belt improvement since Monday. But for all that, affairs have nat been entirely quiet. Neither party has been id'e. Assistant President Winter, of the St. Paul line, arrived in this city Tuesday. Some say that he is here inspect the Florence cut-off. Then again, it is said, quietly, that he is too late.
