New York, December 3.—(Ruggolo's review of Wall street in this morning's Sun is as follows: Though Wall street affairs remain distressingly dull from a business point of view, they present considerable interest from a philosophical standpoint. Two years have worked wonders. In 1881 every man, woman and child had stocks and cried for more. To-day nobody wants them, and those who have them are selling out as fast as they can. The Sun foresees it all, and predicted it accurately; but in 1881 nobody could say a word against the speculative craze without being proclaimed a member of the "syndicate of liars." Since then it has been amply demonstrated on whose side the lying was.

THE SLAUGHTER. Of the imbeciles was terrific, but it is almost over now for there is scarcely any left to kill. The few fools that are still willing to risk their money in speculative purchases of stocks are rich and their losses do not affect the community at large. It is quite immaterial whether they squander their money in stocks, in riotous extravagance or in shoddy ostentation. The important point is that fifty man have given up speculation and have learned enough through sad experience to keep away from the stock market till the whole business of the management of railroad and other joint stock corporations is put upon a more equitable basis. It is to be hoped that the opening of congress to-day will prove to be

THE FIRST STEP. In that direction. In any case, great stress is laid by all well-wishers of the country upon the forthcoming session of congress. The recent spasm in the prices of some stocks were nothing more than a supreme effort on the part of the manipulators to dispose of their holdings before congress had time to show its hand. "They play this cheap money racket and the Vanderbilt boom," said a shrewd old gambler, "for no other purpose than to sell out as much as they can, and don't you forget it." Vanderbilt can well afford to give them a little lift after having sold out on them some 20 or 25 points higher. He cannot make anything by letting things to pot at once, so he backs them a little. But the style of men they had to pick up to do the work, shows the desperate condition they are in. Fancy Hutchinson being intrusted with the manipulation of anything. The election of Carlisle for speaker of the house of representatives has been anticipated by Wall street men for some time. The big sparks of the speculative era do not like him at all, and the general impression among stock brokers is that his election will exercise a disturbing influence upon the market. Whether this be so or not there can be no question that he will have an ample field to work on if he takes up only a few of the questions which are now of vital importance to the future of the stock and bond business of our corporate institutions. The lack of business and the enforced idleness which overwhelm stock brokers, have developed a half literary, half critical spirit in some of them. The majority of them who, a few years ago, had not time to eat a sandwich in business hours, now spend most of their time in playing chess or checkers in the "long room" of the stock exchange, or discussing the near approach of the Christmas and the inroads it will make on

KEARNEY IN MOURNING.

The Death and Burial of Judge Samuel L. Savidge.

A Brief Sketch of His Life.

Special Dispatch to THE BEE.

KEARNEY, Neb., December 2.—The funeral of the late Hon. Samuel L. Savidge, this afternoon, was attended by over 2,000 people, many prominent citizens being present. But the Union Pacific and Burlington & Missouri railways brought in many people from surrounding towns. The Kearney bar, fire department and Masonic fraternity attended en masse, and took part in the procession. The services were conducted by the Knights Templar, Elder Lemon delivering the funeral sermon. The floral decorations which were presented by the executive and the Knights Templar of Omaha were very beautiful and appropriate.

Hon. Samuel L. Savidge was born November 24, 1846, at Clinton, Ohio, went to Minnesota in 1858 with his brother's family, graduated with honors from Cornell college, Mt. Vernon, Iowa, in 1873, immediately came to Kearney, and entered upon the practice of the law, without friends and without money; yet he rapidly acquired a lucrative law practice, and soon took rank among the foremost lawyers of Nebraska. Early in 1874 he married Miss S. E. Baum, a former classmate at Mt. Vernon, who with two bright children survive to mourn an irreparable loss. When the state was reconstituted, about one year ago, he was appointed judge of this district by Governor Dawes, and was emphatically endorsed at the late election. Judge Savidge was first taken ill while holding court at Plim Creek on the 19th ult., and was obliged to adjourn and return to his home on the following day. His complaint at first was inflammation of the bowels, soon followed by gastric and then typhoid fever. Despite the strenuous efforts of the ablest physicians he grew worse, and all hope of his recovery was abandoned on the evening of the 29th ult., on which evening he called his family around him and bade them an affectionate farewell and calmly passed away at 3 o'clock the following morning retaining perfect consciousness to the last.

THE DECEASED. The deceased was a member of the R. M. Morris lodge, No. 46, A. F. & A. M., Kearney Royal Arch Chapter No. 41, Mt. Hebron Commander, K. T., No. 12, and was an attendant of the Methodist church, in which church his father and brother are ministers. His death causes a deep gloom over the entire community. Business houses are draped in mourning, flags are flying at half mast, and the deepest mourning is expressed on every side. Resolutions of condolence and sympathy were passed by the Kearney bar.

IN THE DEATH OF MR. SAVIDGE this district loses an upright, honorable and conscientious judge. Though with but a few months experience on the bench, he had amply proven that his position was merited. His family mourns the loss of an indulgent father and affectionate husband. Kearney grieves over the removal of one of her brightest and purest lights, one of her ablest jurists, one of her staunchest friends and one of nature's noblemen.

O'DONNELL'S DOOM.

The Slayer of Carey Convicted and Sentenced to Death.

He Meets His Fate with a Curse and a Shout, "To Hell with the British Crown."

The Judge's Charge to the Jury and Their Deliberations.

O'DONNELL RECEIVES SENTENCE OF DEATH.

LONDON, December 2.—When counsel completed the arguments in the O'Donnell case yesterday afternoon, Judge Denman immediately charged the jury saying that the question was simply "Was the killing done in self defense?" The jury must decide the case regardless of what they may have read in the newspapers which he thought partially responsible for the shooting of Carey on account of their morbid and sensational paragraphs concerning him. The judge in the reviewing the evidence said he found the witnesses agreed with each other that up to the moment of the shooting, O'Donnell and Carey seemed to be friendly. As to O'Donnell's words to Mrs. Carey under the circumstances the judge thought the jury should adopt the version most favorable to the prisoner. It was plain that O'Donnell did not say: "I am sorry, but I had to do it. He attacked me first." The boy Carey, who was astute, over sharp, deeply interested in the result and likely to stretch the truth, contradicted himself and other witnesses. His statements should be narrowly watched and were not to be relied on unless corroborated. The absence of the woman called, but not proven to be Mrs. O'Donnell, was of great significance and open to the comment of counsel, especially as she came from the Cape with one of the witnesses. O'Donnell's threat to shoot Carey was of the greatest importance in view of the fact that he killed Carey the next day.

Referring to the testimony of Cubitt the judge said the giving of the portrait and sketches of Carey to O'Donnell was a dangerous proceeding and one likely to make him think the killing of such an infamous person no crime, but the foundations of society would be sapped if it was supposed the life of an infamous person might be excusably taken. O'Donnell's statement that he snatched the pistol from Carey's hand, if true, would not justify his acquittal or a verdict of manslaughter, for O'Donnell was then no longer in danger of his life, and had no excuse for shooting Carey three times.

Judge Denman next defined the terms murder and manslaughter, and said if the jury were satisfied self-defense had been proven they should acquit the prisoner. If they thought that the prisoner suffered a real provocation they should find for manslaughter. If, however, they were convinced the deed was not committed in self-defense or under grave provocation, they must pronounce him guilty of wilful murder.

THE SPEAKERSHIP.

THE DEMOCRATIC CAUCUS ORGANIZATION.

WASHINGTON, December 2.—The caucus of democratic congressmen held last night to nominate a candidate for speaker and other officers of the house was called to order by General Rosecrans. Mr. Goddes, of Ohio, was made chairman; Willis, of Kentucky, and Dibble, of South Carolina, secretaries; Caldwell, of Tennessee, and Stocklager, of Indiana, tellers. Carlisle, Randall and Cox absented themselves from the caucus, and occupied the rooms of the committee on appropriations, committee on ways and means, and committee on foreign affairs, respectively, as headquarters.

OPENING THE ROLL.

The roll call disclosed the presence of 184 members, and as soon as it was completed, Mr. Dorseheimer, of New York, offered a resolution providing that the votes in the caucus for nominating candidates for the speakership be viva voce. The yeas and nays were demanded, and the result was announced as 104 for the resolution and 80 against it.

Mr. Nichols, of Georgia, offered an amendment in the nature of a substitute, providing that all votes be by ballot.

The roll was called on the amendment, and it was rejected—75 to 113.

Dorseheimer's resolution was adopted without debate.

NOMINATING CANDIDATES.

The nomination of candidates for speaker was next declared in order when Mr. Morrison, of Illinois named John G. Carlisle, of Kentucky. Ex-Governor Curtin, of Pennsylvania, nominated Samuel J. Randall, of that state, and General Slocum, of New York, presented the name of Samuel S. Cox, of the empire state. The roll call by states followed and his progress was watched with keen interest. Frequent messages reporting footings of private tally lists from time to time were dispatched to the respective candidates' headquarters. It soon became evident that Carlisle had won the contest.

CARLISLE HAS 24 MAJORITY.

At the conclusion of the roll call the apparent standing of the vote was: Carlisle, 104, Randall 52, Cox 31, but the official count showed the exact figures to be: Carlisle 106, Randall 52, Cox 30.

THE VOTE.

Table with columns: States, Carlisle, Randall, Cox. Lists states like Alabama, Arkansas, California, etc., with corresponding vote counts.

Total, Carlisle 106, Randall 52, Cox 31.

When the result had been announced Governor Curtin moved that Carlisle's nomination be made unanimous, which was immediately done. The chair appointed Randall, Cox and Curtin as a committee to notify Carlisle of his selection by the caucus. Carlisle's entrance with the committee was greeted with long continued cheers.

REPEAL OF THE SUCCESSFUL CANDIDATE.

Mr. Carlisle was escorted to the speaker's chair and addressed the caucus as follows:

Mr. Chairman and Gentlemen of the Caucus: Your committee has just formally notified me of my unanimous nomination to the office of speaker of the house of representatives of the Forty-eighth congress, and I am here to thank you very briefly and very earnestly for the confidence reposed in me. If I had been a mere personal content between me and the distinguished gentlemen whose names were mentioned in connection with this nomination, I should have had little hope of success. They are all gentlemen of great ability, long experience and undoubted integrity, and I assure them and their friends that I regret to regret the act on of this evening, and when the labors of the Forty-eighth congress are closed, you may be injuriously affected by the administration of the office for which you have nominated me—in fact I may be advanced and promoted by the united efforts of the presiding officer and the democratic majority on the floor. Such a result will insure a victory in the great contests yet to come and guarantee a long line of democratic executives, with honest, economical and constitutional administration of public affairs. But you have yet much other labor to perform, and again thanking you for what you have already done, I shall say no more.

DUBLIN, December 2.—Orange bodies continue to pass resolutions strongly condemning the suspension of Lord Rossmore. Public meetings will be held in various parts of the county of Ulster, to pass resolutions of a like tenor. At Newry Protestants on the way to church were assaulted.
