A HORRIBLE DEATH.

A Workman at the Nail Works Wound Around a Shaft This Morning.

His Brains Spattered Against the Walls and His Bones Fearfully Broken

It really seems as if the season of horors had dawned upon this city to stay. One tragedy or sad accident has not had time to die away before another follows fast upon its train, and the sensational mind is being fed in a manner seldom seen in this city.

The latest horror occurred yesterday, at the Nail Works, on Sixteenth street near the Union Pacific track, and it resulted in the death of a workman by the name of Joseph Buckstale.

It appears that it was the business of the deceased to attend to the adjusting of the belts in the place, and also to keep the shafting well oiled. This morning, about 8:30, Buckstale went to adjust a Sights Which May be Enjoyed by belt upon a pulley upon the lineshaft which is beneath the floor, and the machinery is belted up from it. He had been below but a few moments when he was heard to utter a loud and horrible vell, and then all was silent except the soon stilled. When the big engine was brought to a halt the body of Buckstale was found wrapped around the line shaft in an altorn from his body, even his shoes and shirt having been ripped into pieces. His lifeless form was taken out and laid upon s planket, and soon after was conveyed to Jacob's undertaking rooms. Upon unwrapping the remains at the undertaking rooms a most horrible sight was presented. The skull had been pounded to a pulp and the brains were oozing out on every side, the limbs were as much pride in dr broken, the face and body were smeared their show windows in with blood and grease, and it was difficult to reconcile the object with the face

CHRISTMAS PRESENTS.

An Elegant Variety at Saxe's Drng

No More Elegant Display Can Found in Omaha.

Christmas shopping is now all the rage, and the show-windows everywhere present the most attractive appearance. The stores are all crowded, and purchasers are at a loss what to purchase, so great is against John L. Sullivan, Paddy Ryan, the variety of beautiful articles. To assist those who may find it difficult to decide upon their Christmas purchases, we will call their attention, as well as that of all others, to the fact that at Saxe's drug store, in Boyd's opera house building, there is on exhibition one of the finest collections of holiday goods ever seen in
