

ALL THE SAME IN THE END.

Gambling on the Green, and Gambling on 'Change.

Beaten By the "Kid"—The Denver "Kid" Playing in Chicago in Hard Luck.

Chicago Tribune.

The "Kid from Denver" is just now the wonder of the local sporting world. The "Kid" is a youth of the "can't-butcher" or "train-boy" order. He has large, gray eyes and brown hair, a pale, but well-kept look, is something of a dude in dress, an inveterate smoker, and is said to wear the finest diamond sported by any chap of his age in the west. The "Kid" has money, which is his most distinctive possession. Where he got it nobody knows, but, judging by the lavish way in which he scatters it around, one might suppose he had inherited a gold mine or discovered Aladdin's lamp. He has been a periodical visitor at the gambling-tables of Chicago for a week or ten days past, and yet he has formed no alliances and remains as much of a mystery as ever. A description of one of his visits will serve to illustrate his methods. One night in the early part of the week he entered a gambling-house on Clark street where a heavy game of faro is dealt, supposedly "on the square." In the midst of the game he pressed up to the table and threw down a $20 gold piece.

ing for a physician, as the march of the disease is always rapid, and its virulence increases every hour. As with most other diseases, diphtheria is more likely to attack those whose systems have been debilitated by illness, poor diet, or any cause whatever. Any irritation of the throat prepares the way for the disease. Any person affected should be taken to an upper room, into which no one should come except those in perfect health, and who have not the slightest scratch or sore on any part of the body, particularly the hands. The room should be ventilated all the time, the clothing frequently changed, and at once covered with water containing carbolic acid. Diphtheria taken from another person is more malignant than that generated by bad air.

TREATMENT OF DIPHTHERIA. One of the best plans of treatment is the following: Gargle—Chlorate of potassa, 2 drams; hot water, 6 ounces; alcohol, 4 drams; creosote, 8 drops; muriatic acid, 30 drops. This to be used as a gargle every thirty minutes.

Internally, use the following remedy: Chlorate of potassa, 3 drams; water, 6 ounces; sugar, 1 ounce; tincture of muriate of iron, 2 drams. Dose—A teaspoonful every four hours. It is claimed that the above treatment will cure ninety cases out of ten.

The principal point is to find out what will destroy the bacteria. Tannin will kill them in two hours. A solution of copperas, that is, sulphate of iron, will kill them; also chlorine water and diluted muriatic sulphuric and nitric acids. If copperas is used as a gargle, it should not be stronger than a piece half as large as a nutmeg, dissolved in a pint of water; or a level teaspoon of tannin dissolved in a teaspoonful of warm water; but it is better to rely on chlorine water, above named; and it would be a safe plan, should any member of a family have diphtheria, for each of the others to gargle the mouth every hour with chlorine solution.

Instead of using solutions, a few grains of either chlorate of potash, tannic acid or copperas, known as sulphate of iron, may be placed dry, far back on the tongue, to dissolve and spread over the surfaces. It is a more simple method of applying these remedies, and would be more likely to reach farther down the throat and to remain longer in contact with the diseased surfaces than when applied in gargles or swallows. These remedies are powerful to cure in proportion to the promptness with which they are used.

THE FURNISHING OF FURS.

Scarcity of the Buffalo Becoming More and More Marked—A Substitute Found in the Japanese Dog-Sea and Other Furs. St. Paul Pioneer-Press. The mild weather of the winter thus far has not especially affected the wholesale fur trade in St. Paul. Last winter's continued low temperature had the effect of placing all the available stock of the general dealers in the hands of consumers. As a general rule, the orders for new stock are taken and sales made by the wholesalers in June, July and August, and deliveries in September and October, or before any knowledge of temperature to follow can be had. In the northwest, of course, the buffalo was the principal producer of winter pelts, but the disappearance of this animal from its former haunts has been so rapid of late years that substitutes must be found, and Japanese dog skins (so-called) have now become the coats. They cost about 25 per cent more than the buffalo coats did when the latter were plenty. St. Paul dealers have reports of but one herd of buffaloes now in existence, and this is wintering about 160 miles west of Fort Yates (Standing Rock), sheltered by the ravines of the little Missouri Bad lands. The animals' horns have been seen to have disappeared, and with others who were wont to roam both north and south of the boundary. The Standing Rock Indians killed about 4,000 buffaloes this season, and their hides are now awaiting sale and shipment eastward. A few other spots report small lots on hand, but it is feared not more than 10,000 in all can be looked for from what is known as the Missouri River district. The Indian dressed robes are regarded as far preferable to those dressed by the whites. The latter are heavier, the hides is apt to get stiff when wet, and in some cases the preparation of chemicals used affects the hide in such a way that the hair falls out. Expensive tanning machinery in Bridgeport, Conn., costing tens of thousands of dollars, has been altered to fit it for other purposes. As an index of the scarcity of buffalo robes are quoted recent offers for single lots of $6 to $7.50 per robe, taking them as they run; and this, of course, means $12 to $15 to the next buyer, for choice specimens.

OTHER FURS.

Wolf and fox skins are made up in large numbers, though they are not as plenty as could be desired, and soon skins are very scarce. Beaver and other are in great demand and are much scarcer than suits the dealers. On these furs a rise of at least 10 per cent. over last year's prices is reported. Not long ago an offer of $3.75 per pound was made for Lake Superior beaver. Missouri river beaver and those from its tributaries are worth about $2 25 per pound. Bear skins are comparatively plenty, and the black variety is the favorite for robes. Carriage and house robes of Japanese goat are much in favor. They are imported in many sizes, and in colors ranging from white to dark, mixed gray. The fur is long and silky and the price reasonable, ranging from $6 to $10 per robe, according to the color and quality and the style of the trimmings. The London market fixes the price of seal and the Alaska seal has recently reached fully 50 per cent. The Alaska Seal company, of which Senator Miller is president, has a governmentally-granted monopoly of the market, and by killing few or many can raise or lower the price at will. By far the greatest bulk of seal skins come from Alaska, those of the South seas not amounting to more than 10 per cent of

12 WOMAN'S SECRET.

She is over-worked, poor thing! Proud, honorable, faithful, womanly, she determined to keep expenses down, and do the work herself. Right nobly has she done it, but at terrible cost. The sparkle that was in her eye when she was a bride is gone, her once plump and rosy cheeks are now hollow and colorless. She used to step lightly and gracefully, but now she drags one foot after the other, with painful weariness. For the sake of the family she does not mention her aching back, her acute pains, her dizziness, her rheumatic twinges, her dyspeptic troubles, or the heavy weight she feels in her right side, that tells her her liver is going wrong. She thinks nobody knows about all that, and she will suffer on in quiet and unrepining patience. Alas! her secret is an open one, for it tells its own tale. Whisper this in her ear, she ought to know it: Madam, Brown's Iron Bitters will heal your back, calm your nerves, kill your rheumatism, drive out your dyspepsia, and correct your liver. Dollar a bottle. the yearly product. The Shetland seal is considered the finest in the world, both from its color and texture, but these are growing rarer in the market, and consequently more expensive.

They're Away His Crutches. "Suffered from rheumatism so badly had to use crutches, but threw them away after applying Thomas' Electric Oil to my limbs. I now feel better than I have for years." F. L. Gibbs, 309 Elk St. Buffalo, N. Y.

Pruning Transplanted Trees. An eastern nurseryman who has had great experience in planting trees writes: A tree in full life may be compared to a powerful pump, the roots absorbing water from the soil, which is carried upward through the stem and exhaled from the leaves in the form of vapor. This exhalation from the leaves is really the primary operation, however, being simply a process of evaporation. If, now, the principal portions of the roots be cut away, and especially the fine rootlets which are farthest from the stem, and through whose extremities nearly all the water is absorbed, the leaves, if allowed to grow, will exhaust the water from the stem and roots more rapidly than it can be supplied by the remnant of the latter, and the consequences will be the destruction of the tree. Hence, in transplanting, trees the leaf-bearing twigs should be cut away in proportion to the loss of roots, and it should be remembered that the root surface is generally equal to that of the twigs; consequently, the safest rule is to remove nearly all the branches, trimming to bare poles. It is hard to do this, but the aftergrowth of the tree will be more rapid to compensate the apparent loss. In moving large trees it is an excellent plan to dig down and cut off a large portion of the roots a year before transplanting, removing a portion of the top at the same time. This will cause the formation of new rootlets near the stem, which may be preserved in the final transplanting.

Hood's Sarsaparilla is designed to meet the wants of those who need a medicine to build them up, give them an appetite, purify their blood and oil up the machinery of their bodies. No other article takes hold of the system and hits exactly the spot like Hood's Sarsaparilla. It works like magic, reaching every part of the human body, purifying the blood, giving to all renewed life and energy. $1 a bottle; six for $5.

Construction of Carp Ponds. A carp-breeder in Pennsylvania says a proper system requires three ponds. They must all be shallow in the main, but each must have a deep place next to the outlet. Each must have a collector in the deepest point made of wood or masonry. This is a sort of trap in which to collect the fish, eels, etc., which are sure to get into all ponds. Connected with the collector must be a sluice which will drain the pond dry at will. This should be done early in the spring and late in the fall. All wood and masonry should be avoided in the construction of embankments except the simple sluice referred to, and this sluice should answer the double purpose of holding the water to its standard level and of drawing it all off when desired. In regions where the water freezes, a liberating ground should be prepared adjoining the sluice, where the carp can burrow in winter. This should be the deepest place in the pond excepting the collector. The bottom of the ponds should be muddy, so as to produce a rank growth of aquatic vegetation, preferably lilies, but an indigenous growth. This makes the pond an aquatic pasture in which the carp will subsist without artificial food, which should not be given them till a short time before marketing, or preparing for the table, and then only in fashionable boxes or vats which can be kept clean and which will keep the carp from the earth. The regular discharge of water must be from the bottom instead of the surface. There must be no other fish with the carp. Geese, ducks and all domestic fowls and animals should be kept away from carp ponds.
