

Mischiefous Malaria. To say that malaria is mischiefous is to put it very mildly. It is all that and more. It is cunning, deceitful, treacherous, sly, and underhanded. It does its work in the dark, and in such a sly way that much of the mischief is done before it is discovered. It saps the foundations of a healthy system. It robs the blood of its vitality, demoralizes the liver, confounds the stomach, and makes the victim wish he were in his grave. It is sad to see people sit down in their misery, content to be the victims of mischiefous malaria, and thinking that nothing can be done for them. The power of BROWN'S IRON BITTERS over the mischiefous malaria has been so amply proved that there is no reason why anybody who can procure a bottle of this Prince of Tonics shall suffer. Great is the power of malaria, and great are its disastrous effects. But greater far is the beneficent influence of BROWN'S IRON BITTERS. The preparation of iron in this favorite family remedy can be taken without ruining the teeth or producing constipation and headache.

WALTER LOGAN'S BRIDE. The Story of a Romantic Marriage. A Cincinnati's Wedding at a New Mexican Indian School. Cincinnati Enquirer. Mr. Walter T. Logan of this city and Miss Johnnie Stinson of Topeka, Kansas, were married several days ago by the Rev. James A. Menaul at the Indian school at Albuquerque, New Mexico. The groom needs no introduction. He is a well-known son of a better-known sire, and comes from a family that has been famous in both the east and the west. A fondness for the stage led Walter to forsake the attorney's office some years ago and adopt the stage instead. He did not make the metropolitan ring with praise for his merits, and some months after he landed there he met his paternal on the street. It was the first time he had seen him since his disappearance from Cincinnati. Walter had not been living in luxury, and he abandoned the glare of the footlights and returned his to first love, Blackstone. The marriage was a romantic one, and the Morning Journal of Albuquerque gives the story in full. "Among the society young ladies of Topeka was one Johnnie Stinson. Her father is dead, but her mother, two married sisters and a brother reside in the capital city of the state of Kansas. Logan had met Miss Stinson some few years ago, and as their acquaintance became better, love showed its wings, and he was at last induced to time forward. Miss Stinson's family were approached with the secret of the lovers, but a stern no was the answer to every proposition. An engagement followed, despite those "high in authority."

One of the married sisters of Miss Stinson favored the suit of young Logan, while all the remaining members of the family would not even listen to his pleadings, and thus matters stood, when a month ago Mrs. Senator Logan obtained for the young man an appointment as superintendent of Indian schools at the Navajo reservation. Before leaving Chicago the young gentleman notified his parents of his intention, and he was amazed to find the name of the then commissioner of internal revenue neatly pasted therein, and upon examining that the messenger bore, was astonished to find in it the bold signature, "John A. Logan."

The best laid plans of men and mice oft go astray, however, and so it was in the case of the two operators, for Agent Rioridan soon telegraphed to Logan: "Bring your wife." The dispatch was never delivered to the anxious young man, and he left Chicago with a very heavy heart, knowing full well that he should only have an opportunity to say "How do you do" and "Good-by" to the young lady as the train stopped for a few moments at Topeka. The young man came west, and after stopping in this city for only a day or two, went on out to the field of his labors, the Navajo country. It was then that he found out for the first time of Agent Rioridan's telegram, telling him to bring his wife. No time was to be lost now. He hurried back to Albuquerque, and after writing "W. A. Logan, Fort Wingate, N. M., upon the register at the Windsor, almost lost to the telegraph office and notified his anxious wife that she should start immediately and that she should be ready to greet her at the depot in this city.

The now very happy gentleman started out to hunt Prof. Bryan, who he presides so ably over the affairs at the Indian school in this city. Happily the professor was not far away, and he was quickly informed by the would-be married man of the state of affairs. The professor had just gone through a similar siege himself, and he promised all the assistance in his power. It was arranged between Prof. Bryan and his wife that the wedding should take place at the Indian school, and forthwith Rev. James A. Menaul was applied to and readily consented to tie the knot. When Miss Johnnie was ready to leave her home a little stratagem had to be resorted to in order that she might meet him whom she is hereafter to "love and obey."

"I am going to Sterling," said the would-be bride, "and I don't know just how long I may be away." This was the ruse, and it worked to perfection, for when the north bound train arrived Miss Johnnie Stinson was one of the passengers, and at the depot to welcome her were Prof. and Mrs. Bryan, Rev. James A. Menaul, and last, but by no means least, the happy, happy man. The whole party were driven to the Indian school, and there Walter and his Johnnie were married. After the ceremony the bride sent the following telegram to her married sister at Topeka: "Mrs. C. B. Hamilton, Topeka, Kansas: We are ready to receive congratulations. WALTER AND JOHNNIE." The happy couple are still registered at the Windsor at Albuquerque. Both bride and groom have Indian blood in their veins, Miss Stinson claiming to be descended from the Shawnees, while the claims of Senator Logan's family are well known all over the United States.

FARM MATTERS. Nebraska Notes. If you wish to drive boys away from the farm, send them out to cut green wood at the back door, and tell them they must get up at 5 o'clock and make a fire from it. It is stated as a fact that the seed of the sunflower is the best remedy ever discovered for the cure of founder in horses. Immediately upon discovering that young horses are foundered, work a pint of the whole seed into his feed, and it will work a complete cure. J. Orr Brown came to Fillmore county twenty-two years ago, and rented on the Gray farm in Hamilton precinct. He began at that time with one pair of pigs, has killed eight for meat, sold eleven, and has on hand to-day as the result of the increase from the first pair 103 head. —[Fairmont Signal.]

CONGRESSMAN HOOK'S HAT. The Strange Fatality That Pursues a Tennessee Congressman's Silk Tie. Nashville American. Judge Leonidas C. Hook, who has represented the second district of Tennessee in congress for several terms, is one of the most prominent gentlemen in the house, and a great favorite with everybody. There is a peculiarity which pursues him however, which creates fun wherever he goes. Mr. Hook always wears the regulation silk hat, and hardly a day passes that he does not change head-gear with some one. One day last spring he dropped into the office of an eminent treasury official with a glossy new tie, which he deposited on the mantle. Senator Logan was just concluding a confidential chat, and as he shook hands with Judge Hook and hurried out, he picked up the Tennesseean's new hat and clapped it on his head, leaving behind in exchange a rather battered one that had seen hard service. Judge Hook finished his business, and, crowning himself with the senator's head-gear without noticing its appearance, proceeded to another department, when he unconsciously traded "tiles" with a cabinet officer.

Once more that day the same thing occurred, and when Judge Hook reached his hotel he was somewhat astonished to find Senator Logan's hat and polite note from the cabinet officer, stating that he had made a mistake and inadvertently taken the wrong hat; that Judge Hook's hat was forwarded therewith, and the return of his own was requested. "Taking out the hat on the judge's side," he was amazed to find the name of the then commissioner of internal revenue neatly pasted therein, and upon examining that the messenger bore, was astonished to find in it the bold signature, "John A. Logan."

The First Line of Cable Cars. San Francisco Chronicle. Ten years ago last August the first cable car climbed slowly up the steep slope of Clay street hill. A large crowd had gathered to witness the surprising spectacle, and there were prophecies on all hands that no grip and no brakes could guard against accidents on such a steep incline. It was a short road, barely a mile in length. The steepest ascending grade was 1 in 6 to 100 feet; the machinery was an iron steel and wood structure, in circumference, and 1,000 feet long, laid in iron tubes and supported every thirty-nine feet on eleven-inch sheaves; the trip was the simplest, but one of the most effective that has ever been invented; each train consisted of one dummy or grip-car and a regular passenger car, both together carrying calculated to seat thirty passengers, but like the average street car, capable of holding an indefinite number. The speed of the cable was six miles an hour, or counting for stoppages, the cars made about five miles an hour. The motive power was furnished by one 14x28 engine and a boiler, both in a single building, 3,700 pounds of coal a day. This was the first of the cable cars in the world.

Humor in the Stomach. Much of the distress and sickness attributed to dyspepsia, chronic diarrhoea and other causes is occasioned by humor in the stomach. Several cases, with all the characteristics of these complaints, have been cured by Hood's Sarsaparilla. Other cures effected by this medicine are so wonderful that the simplest statement of them affords the best proof that it combines rare curative agents and when once used secures the confidence of the people.
