

Dyspepsia is BAD. BAD in its effects on the disposition. The man who can't comfortably digest his dinner is not a delightful companion.

Brown's Iron Bitters is GOOD. GOOD in its effects on the dyspeptic. It gives him a sound digestion, and enables him to enjoy the food he swallows.

GOOD in its effects on the family. It drives dyspepsia out, and with it the whole company of little demons that make home unhappy.

SIXTY-EIGHT YEARS AGO. A Remarkable New England Snow-Storm—Thunder and Lightning and Snow that Glowed Like a Raging Fire.

This is the story that the "oldest inhabitant" told a Boston Globe reporter the other day: "It was in the month of January, 1816, just sixty-eight years ago this very month, that it took place, and nearly scared all Berkshire county out of their wits."

Not long after midnight we were awakened by a terrific crash which set the whole house a trembling. Starting out of bed the room was suddenly lighted by a vivid flash of lightning, which lasted, it seemed, several seconds, and was followed by a fearful thundering.

The old inhabitant leaned back in his chair, clasped his hands together, and looked away through the distance of years and his face became solemn as he thought of the fear the curious spectacle created.

"Where you much frightened?" questioned one of his listeners. "Frightened! That ain't no word for it. I was scared, sir; scared so much that I nigh shivered myself into a dead hereafter on that night. Why, that blinding lightning would flash into our eyes, and the thunder came simultaneously, and the old house would go br-r-r-r-ugh! trembling in every beam and rafter."

wouldn't enter into any compromise and allow the horse to ride him. In a reckless moment he offered to bet $10 that he could mount and ride a wild Texas steer. The money was put up. That settled it. Sam never took water.

As the steer passed out, Sam slid down and wrapped those parental legs of his around that high headed, broad horned brute, and he rode him till the feet lifted and fell down on one side. He fell grass, ran his red hot tongue out across the blue horizon, shook his tail convulsively, swelled up sadly and died.

Mr. James Stevenson, of the geological survey, has reported to Maj. Powell, as one of the results of his field operations last season, the discovery of several rounded cave and cliff cities, differing in some respects from any he had before examined.

Descending the shaft, the explorers found themselves at the side of an oval-shaped arched-roof room, about twenty feet in its smallest diameter. At the end and in the side opposite the entrance row doorways connected the main room with smaller rooms, the whole suite or dwelling consisting of four apartments.

Around the mouth of the shaft a stone wall was found, forming by its inclosure a kind of dooryard to the dwelling below. The wall doubtless served the double purpose of guarding against snow slides, which might otherwise fill up the opening and bury the occupants, and against the accidental fall of an inhabitant into his own or his neighbor's dwelling, upsetting the dinner pot, and possibly breaking his neck in the operation.

The group or village which was most narrowly examined was about three-quarters of a mile in length, and consisted of a single row of houses, the common rear wall being continuous, while the sides and fronts were made of large squared stones laid in clay.

It had been broken by the ancient workman and nearly ruined by winding about it a piece of fine twine. The end of this twine being examined under the microscope disclosed the fact that its fiber was very fine human hair. Articles of wood, corn cobs, and even the perfect grains of corn, walnuts, bones of elk, antelope, and wolf, portions of wearing apparel of a fabric resembling the mummy cloth of Egypt, but made from material unfamiliar to the explorers, and other perishable articles were found in abundance, buried in the piles of debris, which partially filled these deserted homes, and would at first thought seem to indicate somewhat recent habitation.

This region are remarkable, and it is the belief of the explorers that centuries have elapsed since the last of the departed races occupied these old cities and villages as houses.

The absence of weapons of war, of works of defense, other than such as are constituted by the selection of almost inaccessible localities, of temples or idols, of hieroglyphics or pictures, together with the durability and solidity of the dwellings, so different from anything to be found of the handiwork of existing civilized races of that region, and the wide extent of these ruins indicating the existence of allied races covering large portions of the present territories of Arizona, New Mexico, and Utah, as well as northern Mexico, are the elements of the problems involved in the origin, history, and disappearance of these races.

From John Kuhn, Lafayette, Ind., who announces that he is now in "perfect health," we have the following: "One year ago I was, all appearance, in the last stages of consumption. Our best physicians gave me up. I finally got so low our doctor said I could not live twenty-four hours. My friends then purchased a bottle of Dr. Wm. Hall's Balsam for the Lungs, which considerably benefited me. I continued until I was in perfect health. I am now in perfect health, having used no other medicine."

GEORGE ROSS, THE WRESTLER. His Challenge—He Prefers Dufur or McLaughlin—Sporting Notes.

The Cleveland Herald says: "George Ross, the well-known Scotch athlete, who has recently come to this country, arrived in the city yesterday, and will make his headquarters at Duncan C. Ross' on Ontario street. Last evening he called at The Herald office and sent forth the following challenges, which athletes all over the country are respectfully invited to consider: 'I will wrestle any man in America back holds, best three in five, for $250 to $500 a side. I will wrestle any man in America, each wrestling half an hour, taking his own hold, and the one having the most falls in the hour to be the winner, for $500 a side, Dufur or McLaughlin preferred. I will wrestle either Pooler or Rabshaw of this city, any hold, for $100 a side or upward. The money for any or all of these challenges is put up at Duncan C. Ross, 106 Ontario street.'"

George Ross is twenty-four years old and has a strong record in various athletic lines in England and Scotland. He is the champion English amateur in heavy weight performances, and has downed some of the best men over there in his style of wrestling. He is five feet ten inches, splendidly built and tips the scales at 210 pounds.

Al Pratt is negotiating with St. Paul to manage the base ball team of that city next season. Sullivan and Coleman, the Allegheny battery, who left the Chicago Union, were to have been transferred to Baltimore. Sullivan says: "The Chicago Club expected Daily and Corcoran to do its pitching."

Considerable interest is manifested in sporting circles regarding the two exhibitions of skill to be given by William Sheriff, the Prussian. The first will be an elaborate scene, and will come off at the Park Theatre to-morrow night. On Wednesday evening Sheriff will meet Driscoll, the unknown at the same place in four rounds, Marquis of Queensbury rules. Both entertainments will undoubtedly prove great attractions.

A match game of pool was played last night at Kensington between William Morris, of Pullman, and Charles Adams, of Kensington, for $100 a side. At 12 o'clock seven out of the twenty-one games to be played had been won by Morris, and four by Adams, the Pullman man being the favorite among the small crowd of sports present.

Two Cats From Siberia. New York Journal. J. Appell's show window, at No. 510 Sixth-ave., is frequently surrounded by an admiring group who stand on the sidewalk intently watching two large white cats, which sit for hours motionless, blinking at their audience, evidently pleased with their attention.

"I got those cats," said Mr. Appell, "from a friend who brought them from Siberia, and since I've had them I have had various offers from customers. One gentleman was willing to give $200 for them. I am going to enter them in the cat show when it comes off and I think they will stand an excellent chance for the first prize."

The larger, called "William," is of monstrous size, although only fourteen months old. His chin, nearly as large, is twelve months old, and rejoices in the cognomen of "Charlie." Both are pure white, except their ears, which are pink. They have amber-colored eyes.
