SHERIDAN'S SADDLE.

The One Which Bore Him on His Famous Ride to Winchester,

"If anybody supposes the Sheridan family much inflated over 'Dashing Phil Sheridan's' great military successes they are very much mistaken, I assure you,' said Captain Henry C. Greiner, the great hawk-scalper from Perry county, the other day. "Let me tell you a little anecdote of his brother and father that will illustrate their indifference to the homage and honors bestowed upon General Sheridan.

As you know, the Sheridans are my neighbors down at Somerset, where I'hil the distance covered shows a speed of was born, and have been my friends, forty or forty-five miles an hour. politically and otherwise, for many years. "When I was making my first cam-paign for representative I was riding past Chat saddle mighty well, but I don't Philip Dorr and wife to Frank Hilbert, that saddle mighty well, but I don't want to rob you of such a valuable relic."

"Oh, that's all right!" said Phil's younger brother, as he went back into the house, "Go and see father."

the stable. I found the old gentleman busy about his chores. "Good morning, Mr. Sheridan, John says there's a saddle out here I can have. It's the one Phil had on his famous ride from Winchester.' "The old gentleman went into the barn, and after some search brought out a strong, well-made military saddle, with one of the holsters (which had evidently been cut off) and one of the stirrups missing. It was covered with dust, and looked as if it might not have been disturbed for months. The thought struck me that the missing holster had been carried off by some strolling relic hunter, so I asked: " 'Mr. Sheridan, where's the other stirrup and that holster!' "'Oh, that stirrup's about here somewhere? The strap got broke and I never had it sewed on. I cut the holster off myself to make a holder for my currycombs. Come in here, and I will show it

"We went into the stable and there, sure enough, tacked securely against the weather boarding, was the missing part. A queer use, however convenient, for a relic like that for one of the holsters that had carried the gallant cavalry officer's pistols on his dashing ride into the decisive battle of Cedar creek. The old man had cut the end of the holster off, nailed it firmly against the side of the stable, where it answered the purpose he not, indeed, care to disturb it.

"Well, captain I'll tell you how that is, said the old gentleman, quickly and proudly enough, 'I did feel mighty proud and glad when I heard that my Phil was it. It would have hurt me terribly to have known that my boy had skulked or played the coward, or shunned any duty. but it never mattered to me whether people lionized him or not. As for his old hats and clothes and swords and that old saddle, I don't care anything about them. The black mare was a good animal as long as she lasted; but if you want her old saddle, why just take it along. You're welcome to it.

"This is the way," concluded Capt. Greiner, "that I came into possession of Gen. Sheridan's saddle, and is the accid ent that led to its eventually getting into the flag and relic room in the state house Perhaps it isn't there now, for I saw it again this summer over at the G. A. A New Plan for Smoking Meat. On the side of a knoll or other rise in the ground dig a shallow trench ten or fifteen feet in length; cover with flat stones, and over them throw the loose soil which has been removed. At the bottom arrange a cavity large enough to hold the fuel for smoking, and have at hand a thin, flat stone with which to cover the fire, thus preventing its being fanned to a flame by a high wind. Over the top of this underground chimney place, a barrel which is minus two heads in this suspend the hams from iron rods or strong sticks, using coarse wire bent like the letter S. These are easier ad-justed than strings and accidents are less liable to occur when they are used. Cover the barrel closely with a thick cloth. My grandfather, who first practiced it, claimed for this method that the soil around the trench absorbed the pungent properties of the smoke, and that meat cured in this way was sweeter and better flavored than it otherwise would be.

Large Wheels.

National Car-Builder.

When 42-inch wheels were first used in this country under passenger cars there was a good deal of fruitless discussion about their utility as compared with that of smaller wheels. What discussion failed to make clear, however, has been determined by use and the knowledge thereby obtained. Much can now be said in favor of large wheels, showing their superiority to small ones for passenger aervice, that could not have been said with the same confidence a few years ago. English practice, could, of ocurse, be referred to as being conclusive, so far as the style of "carriages" on English roads was concerned. But our cars are altogether different in size, weight and country has given 42-inch wheels a more thorough trial than the Boston and Albany, and we are informed that with these wheels such a thing as hot journals in cold weather to our fowls.

Plain Facts Plainly Spoken.

Plain Facts Plainly Spoken.

At one time a discussion of the secret vice was entirely avoided by the profession, and medical works but a few years ago would hardly mention it.

To-day the physician is of a different opinion; he is aware that it is his duty—disagreeable though it may be—to handle this matter without gloves and speak plainly about it; and intelligent parents and guardians will thank him for doing so.

The results attending this destructive vice were ormerly not understood, or not properly estimated; and no importance being attached to a subject which by its nature does not invite close investigation, it was willingly ignored.

The habit is generally contracted by the young while attending school; older companions through their example, may be responsible for it, or it may be acquired through accident. The excitement once experienced, the practice will be repeated again and again, until at last the habit becomes firm and completely enslaves the victim. Mental and nervous afflictions are usually the primary results of self-abuse. Among the injurious effects may be mentioned lassitude, dejection or irrascibility of temper and general debility. The boy seeks seclusion, and rarely joing in the sports of his companions. If he be a young man he will be little found in company with the other sex, and is troubled with exceeding and annoying bashfulness in their presence. Lascivious dreams, emissions and eruptions on the face, etc., are also prominent symptoms.

If the practice is violently persisted in, more serious disturbances take place. Great palpitation of the heart, or epileptic convulsions, are experienced, and the sufferer may fall into a complete state of idiocy before, finally, death relieves him.

To all those engaged in this dangerous, practice, I would say, first of all, stop it at a once; make every possible effort to do so; but if you fail, if your nervous system is already too much shattered, and consequences at each effect. Having freed yourself from the habit, I would further counsel you

On examining the urinary-deposits a ropy sediment will often be found, and sometimes small particles of albumen will appear, or the color will be of thin milkish hue, again changing to a dark and torpid appearance.
