IRELAND AND ITS WOES.

P. J. Sheridan, the Irish Agitator, Gives His Views For the Liberation of the Emerald Isle, at the Masonic Hall Last

Any Means Fair, No Matter What, to tional actress, Clara Morris, would play Secure Its Freedom.

A good sized and exceedingly intellectual audience greeted the Hon. P. J. Sheridan, the Irish agitator, at the Mathe Ancient Order of Hibernians in full her. regalia, accompanied by the Hibernian Rifles, escorted the speaker from the Paxton hotel to the hall. The speech its appreciation was shown by frequent applause.

Mr. Sheridan spoke in substance as follows:

I come here to speak not to your prejudices or your passions, but to your cool sense and reasoning powers-to invite you with me into the domain of thought that, benefiting by each other's counsel, we may devise the best means of freeing our motherland of the blighting curse of English rule.

Too long have we been wasting time and energy on oratorical gushings and poetic effusions as a means of driving the English benditti from our door. Too long -There was a wolf hunt before Justice have whole-souled patriots languished in Wright yesterday. Mrs. Henry replevened the expectation of "God-given opportu-

While precious time is being wasted, our mother country bleeds from every pore. The garroters hand is on her throat. Can we come to her rescue with no more manly means than "drawled epigrams and soft petitions?"

You must not understand me as dis-Webb, William Cott and Wili C. Bryan, all members of the Thurston hose team, will leave for Lincoln at noon to-day to attend the Fitzgerald hose company's ball in the Capital City this evening.

Every enemy of British rule in Ireland is my friend and brother. I am prepared to concede to every man the same liberty of action which I ask for myself. But I here assert and imagine that all sane and earnest men who have studied the case of Ireland will agree with me, that Ireland's independence must be won by other means and other methods than those of the past. Neither moral force -There will be a temperance meeting held nor armed revolution can ever accomplish the work before us. The odds are win her independence from the 30,000, 000 of England, supported as they are by the greatest navy in the world, an effective army whose strength can be mul tiplied at any time, and the best filled treasury to-day in Europe. It therefore behooves patriotic Irishmen who earnest-ly desire the freedom of Ireland to turn their attention to medern discoveries and VIRTUR OF SCIENTIFIC WARPARE.

If we can convince Englishmen that it will cost them more to hold us a subject province than to allow us to manage our own affairs, I imagine that half the difculty will be overcome. This we can do by carrying the warfare into the heart of England where we can inflict more damage on her, pecuniarily than was in-flicted on France, during the Franco-German war. At the same time we can teach British legislators who forge the chains that bind our country in slavery, that they can no longer trample on the liberties of a people with impunity. It is to them rather than to the army and navy of England we have got to direct our attention in the future. thus convince them that justice to Ireland is the best shield for their own protection. For political reasons England will cling tenaciously to Ireland, knowing as she does that if an invading power could find a friendly footing on Irish soil England's very ex-England's very a nation would istence as a nation would be jeopardized! By keeping up the apirit of revolt in Ireland and holding ourselves in readiness to assist any invading power that may land on our native shore we will make England feel the consequences of her barbarous treatment of our land. To-day if El Irahdi himself should land an in-vading force on Irish soil the Irish people would march shoulder to shoulder oot to foot with him against England's forces. With this spirit kept alive and a vigorous warfare prosecuted against England in the heart of her cities, the

England in the neart of her cities, the Irish representatives who are either treated ignominiously or kicked from the house of commons, will be listened to respectfully and regarded as mediators between the outraged Irish people and the barbarous government of England. It is hardly necessary to demonstrate to any Irish audience that Ireland has nothing to expect from England's sense of justice. Any concession made to Ire-land from the union, down to our own time was wrung from England's fears.

Catholic emancipation was granted only when Daniel O'Connell informed the British parliament that one million men were awaiting an answer on the hill sides of Ireland. Then it was that the duke of Wellington thought well to advise that emancipation be conceded to Ireland. Gladatone admitted that the Fenian re-belfion of '65 produced the land act of 1870. The disendowment of the estab-lished church followed the blowing down of the Clerkenwell prison, and the Phanix park executions have only to be followed up to bring back the Irish parliament to College Green.

It has been objected that the advocates of scientific warfare do not wait to consider between the innocent and the guilty in the application of it. It is not their purpose to war against an innocent and purpose to war against an innocent and unoffending community as England does in Ireland, but, as I have alroady stated,

Her leading support was good, Mr Justavus Levick sustaining the part of "George Duhamel" in a very ac-ceptable manner. The minor parts were vell presented.

Miss Morris' costumes were of the most

An hour or more was spent in wrestling with the festive bivalve and discussing the excellent feast, when the guests pushed back from the now dilapidatedlooking tables, and after the choice Havana cigars had been lighted, Mr. James E. Boyd arose, and after calling the meeting to order, stated that he desired to say but a few words, and wished to ex-press his thanks for the honor conferred upon him in being called upon to preside on such an occasion. He stated that when he first came to Omaha twentyseven years ago, Doctor Miller went his surety for the faithful performance of the contract for building the Congregational church, and he was proud to bered as one of Doctor Miller's friends. He then introduced the Hon. James W. Savage, who made the address of wel-

THE RING AND THE GLOVE.

The Great Flasco of the Miller-Smith Soft Glove Fight at the Academy of Music Last

Quite a large crowd was present last night at the academy of music to see the soft glove contest between Prof. M.ller of this city, and O. H. Smith of Chicago. It was expected by most of those who went to witness the fight that something worth spending their time, at least, would be seen. It was given out that the contest would begin at 8 o'clock, but it was within a few moments of 9 before time was called. At that hour the contestants appeared upon the stage in close fitting pants and stripped to their waists, Miller seconded by Lon George and Smith thy Doughtery with Robert Greene as referes, who stated to the spectators that the fight would be con-ducted under The Police Gazeste rules and that the result of the contest would resolve itself into a question of endurance, as both men intended to win, and the fight would be "on the square. Lots were cast for choice of corner, Miller winning. Twenty eight rounds were fought, lasting about two hours. At the close of the last round, Smith was driven be heard all over the house. Miller loosed his hold and was going to his cor-ner, when Smith followed him and dealt his antagonist two blows from behind, A foul was called by George, and Miller was declared the winner by the referee.

And thus ended what was given out as a fight "to the bitter end." The spectators said but little, and a few hissed. Taking it all in all, it was simply a scheme to draw a house and the project was a fair success. The fight of last Thursday night at the Theatre Comique and its sudden termination by police (7) at that time, were sought to be utilized for the purpose of making money. The set-to between Smith and Miller was not superior in the "manly termination to the one between Dough erty and Baldwin earlier in the evening. The performance as a whole was simply a ruse to relieve each spectator of one rope, and accordingly about one hundred dollar, the price of admission to the lower part of the house, without giving him any return for his money.
