General Gresham Tells Why He Inaugurated It, and Why the Delay at Chicago.

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Merch 24. - The Evening Journal will to-morrow publish a communication from Postmaster General Gresham in reference to the fast mail. Gresham says the manner in which the mails had been dispatched west and north west of Chicago for a long time was discreditable to the department. After shortening the time between Boston, New York and Chicago, he found it difficult to shorten the time beyond Chicago, on account of the liabil ity of frequent delays on the arrival o the eastern mail at Chicago and the large amount of mail to be handled. Greshau cave he felt compelled to have the trains leave Chicago for the west and northwest an hour or two after the . schedule time of the arrival of the mail from the sest. "Chicago," says Gresham, "was too large a place to be treated as a way station; two hours and a quarter, all things considered, is not too much time to spend at that place." The postmester general concludes by stating that he has done the very best he could sa the mat ter to accommodate the whole country, and denies emphatically that the delay in Chicago is for the benefit of the local newspapers. They, as a matter of fact, made a strong fight to have the traine
