Why should the Union Pacific railroad for nothing from the city what it would have to pay for if purchasing from private parties? Is the company a pauper which the city is bound to take care of? alleys why not pay for them? Why has not the city exacted certain conditions from the company as to rates, transportation, stations, and taxes? It certainly looks very much like a piece of jobbery for the company to come in at the last hour of the old council to put through a scheme under suspension of the rules.

CANADA is going through a hard but roads. Some years ago she undertook to build the Canadian Pacific. The money for the construction of 600 miles was advanced, the government taking a mortgage upon the road as security. Since that time there has been a constant drain upon the revenues of the dominion, in one way or another, to assist the company out of its difficulties. A short time ago $7,500,000 were voted from the national treasury to pay off the road's floating debt. This money was squandered or misapplied in some manner, and the necessities of the company are now greater than ever, A lobby is at work to induce the government to give another THE BUILDING OUTLOOK.

There always have been and there always will be castles built in the air durstructed in the summer. A great many projects have been aired by real estate boomers, and the impression has gone forth that Omaha is to have an immense building boom this season, which will employ thousands of mechanics more than we now have in the city. As a matter of fact the outlook is not so promising as some of the real estate men try to make Besides all this, the United States already comprise about as much territory as it is advisable to have under one government. To make it larger would be to increase the danger of disruption. There is one thing, however, which we can unite with Canada in. We can have a commercial union with wholesome experience in subsidizing rail- her. There is no reason why we should continue to be at swords' points with her in business. A treaty of commercial reciprocity would be of greater advantage to the entire northern border of the United States than anything that could be given to it. Of course, this would not mean any great alteration of the tariff system. But duties could be so arranged that some articles which the states want to export could be set off against some things which they want to import. In this way both countries would be greatly benefitted.

The new project of the chancellor does not interfere with the number of the members of the bundesrath, nor with the functions of that body, but it aims to revolutionize its character as the British are concerned, at an end, by putting the sole appointing power for the Arabs refuse to come any longer practically in the handa of the sovereigns of the various states. of society.

By this daring stroke of statesmanshi Bismarck proposes to lead the socialistic forces of the German empire, after finding that all his efforts to suppress them were in vain. In order to lead into harmless channels the dangerous tendencies of socialism he becomes a socialist himself and converts Germany into socialist empire.

The latest advices from Mery indicate that considerable disaffection prevails among a portion of the Turcomans of the district recently annexed by Russia. On March 3d a collision occurred be tween the malcontents and Russian troops. The details of the affair are so far unknown. It affords clear evidence, however, of much dissatisfaction on the part of the natives with the new arrangement, and makes it certain that Russia will be compelled to maintain a large garrison in the newly acquired territory than she had intended.

England has made a treaty with Portual, the terms of which have not yet been made public, but which is supposed to grant the latter certain rights on the upper, or at least on the middle Congo. France has already announced her intention of contesting this treaty, whatever it may be. What rights England has on any part of the Congo no one knows. The late voyages of Stanley have all been made in his own interest and that of the king of Belgium, and if the rights of discovery and conquest were now what they were two or three hundred years ago the whole basin of the river would be yielde to him without question. But first knowledge and the nominal subjugation of savage tribes no longer pass as title without question. What of the world's territory remains undiscovered has become too valuable to be parted with on such slight grounds. The most that can be said of this question is that Stanley and his patron have prior rights, but these are insufficient to permit them to take full possession of a region larger than the United States of America and having unknown possibilities of develop-can priests. The condemnation of the can priests. The condemnation of the propaganda property to sale by the Italian government is the latest in the series of acts by which the popes have been stripped of the princely temporal patrimony once held by the head of the church—a diversiture which they have never ceased to denounce as robbery, and the undoing of which they have resolutely insisted on as they have resolutely insisted on as necessary to the independence of the church. The propaganda is a special institution for propagating the faith, and has charge of missions. It is the most comprehensive and elaborately organized agency in the church, and the grounds and buildings belonging to it in Rome constitute a valuable estate. Under the Italian law of 1867, all this property is to be sold, and the proceeds invested in government bonds for the benefit of the church; but as it will probably bring but fraction of its real value, and the government bonds in which the proceeds are to be invested will be of uncertain value. the Vatican denounces the proceeding as little better than confiscation; and it is this menace to the liberty of the pope that explains the recent rumors of his design to abandon Rome and seek an asylum under a more tolerant govern
