BILIOUSNESS.

Blious symptoms invariably arise from indigestion, such as furred tongue, vomiting of bile, giddiness, sick headache, ir egular bowels. The liver secretes the bile and acts like a filter or sieve, to cleanse impurities of the blood. By irregularity in its action or suspensions of its functions the bile is liable to overflow into the blood, causing jaundice, sallow complexion, yellow eyes bilious diarrhoen, a languid, weary feeling and many other distressing symptoms. WORKS

Bids Last Evening. A special meeting of the board of public works was held Tuesday evening to open members Wilson and Barker were present.

pole in front of the Hanseom building

The sewer bids were then opened, There were nine it all. The contract was let to no one. On account of so many lateral branches to this sewer it was necessary to refer the matter to the city engineer to determine who is the lowest bidder. Hugh Murphy & Co. are thought by Engineer Rosewater to be the successful ones. This sewer by the late bids will cost between $27,000 and $30,000. The rejection of the former bics and the re-advertisement for new ones resulted in saving nearly $8,0 0. This proposed sewer with its branches will be more than two miles in length, heads at Phil Sheridan street running east on St. Mary's avenue and Jackson street to Seventeenth and Jackson where it empties into the South Omaha sewer. At the lower end it will be three feet in diameter. At its head will be a $1,000 gallon flush bank used for the purpose of keeping the sewer hicago Times, April 15th.

The Rev. A. A. Lambert, president of the Jesuit college at Omaha, delivered a lecture on "Woman in Society," last evening, at St. Ignatius' college hall, on Twelfth street, near Blue Island avenue, over two thousand persons being present. He expressed some noble sentiments, and drew some pretty illustrations to show the influence exerted by woman on society. The reverend gentleman was introduced by Justice Prindiville, and after prefacing his theme briefly he declared that woman was the grandest and noblest creature molded by the hand of God. To her be-longed the shaping of human character; she was an all-powerful factor in human society, and was a part of the great plan of the Almighty. He talked eloquently of woman in her influence on society, of her virtue and purity, and paid a glowing tribute to her even in her humblest walks. Mother hood was where he believed she shone the grandest. Referring to the woman's rights movement, he said that its leaders were ignorant of the social problem or they would not drag woman from her real sphere and duties. Before Christ and His gospel woman had been trampled in the dust, and her present position in society was owed to the God Man. The speaker paid a beautiful tribute voman's work on the battle-field. in the the hospital, in charitable institutions, in the slums and abodes of vice, etc., and closed with a nicely-worded illustration of a mother's influence upon a son.

A Postal Change.

On the 22d inst., Postmaster Coutant, n accordance with instructions from Washington, will turn over to the postmaster at Council Bluffs the entire outfit now used by the Omaha office for the through registered package, or "striped pouch" business, as it is designated in the service. The excuse for this move is that the permanent establishment of the fast mail renders it necessary. This is laughed at by men posted in the workings of the mail service, and the asser tion is broadly made that the change will result in a delay of from twelve to twen ty-four hours on matter for all points north and south of Council Bluffs, and local matter coming into or leaving this state. It will not affect the service on the Union Pacific to any appreciable ex tent, the handling of the packages taking about the same time as at present. Th change will require the opening of a branch at the Transfer, and the employnent of two or three additional clerks and a slight increase in the force on this side, as the local business to which this office will be confined requires a more de tailed record.

Strange as it may appear at first blush. the allusions to the practice of kissing in classic literature are con.paratively few, and those mostly of a contemptuous character. It is well known that the old Greeks and Romans—capecially the latter - had no tolerance for effeminacy in any form, and pethaps, from their point of view, kissing came under that ban.

So, too, among most of the great Roman writers. Persius and his greater successor, Juvenal, had their hands full in lashing the giant vices of their time, and gave no heed to trifles. Whether kissing prevailed to any great extent durissue of one, two and five dollar ailver certificates. The bill provides on and

The people of Europe, and for aught that can be added to the contrary, those of Asia, Africa and the islands of the sea commenced to kiss. There is great excitement at Winnepeg over the discovery of silver mines near there. It was one loud reverberation from Indies to the Pole!

In 1448, Lorenzo the Magnificent reigned in Florence. He was the most munificent patron of learning of all kinds -including the science and art of kissing -since Maccenas. During three centuries following Lorenzo's reign other choice spirits bore sway in high places. They were nearly all—male and female—devoted and assiduous patrons of the fine art of kissing. Contemporary literature is full of it. Shakespeare overflows with maying delineations of this absorbing msving delineations of this absorbing pastime. There is hardly one of his dramas—tragic or comic—in which there is not a reference to kissing. The term "kiss" appears one hundred and fortynine (149) times in the plays; "kissed" and "kissing" are used in eighty-two (82) instances, making a grand aggregate of two hundred and thirty-one (231) times in which the bard recurs to a soul-absorbing exercise in which, no doubt, he was himself proficient. At the court of Lorenzo the form of At the court of Lorenz) the form of lilinois 1, Alabama 1, Louisiana 1, and In-kissing was most decorous. Henry VIII diana 1. Over 80 congressmen have already placed their names on the list of the chairman fashion; so did Catherine II of Russia. In Spain the art was brought to a very high point of refinement, as indeed might be expected from the chivalric character of Spain's sons and the beauty of her daughters. The Spanish kiss is described as passionate and prolonged. These conditions, too, were to be expected for we have it on high poetic authority-one of the "boss" bussers of his age

-that: The Spanish girl is no coquette, Nor joys to see a lover tremble; And if she love or if she hate, Alike she knows not to dissemble.

It was in France, however, that the kiss bloomed into the full flower of perection. Mesdames Pompadour and Mintenou have given names to the forms of the salute: both have been described as courtly, but not frigid. Ninon de l'Enclos, who perserved her charms up to her death at 90, would be embalmed n the amber of history on the same account, if upon no otner. The kiss a la l'Enclos was distinguished, like herself, for its vitality and a decided disposition to "stick."

The poets of the Restoration in Engand—sad dogs most of them—were never our day. After them came Fielding, Smollett and certain other like worthies Everybody knows what the authors of 'Tom Jones" and "Roderick Random' were, and so there's an end on't. Rich ardson, the virtuous author of "Clariss Harlowe," was, of course, too good man to speak of such a naughty subject save in a cold, Minerva-like way. It should have been said that the Puritans of the Cromwellian period were somewhat addicted to kissing, but after a most discreet fashion. In fact, a quaint author of the period, who probably had "been tifere," compared the chaste salute of a Puritan maiden to the thrust of a wookpecker's bill.

Passing the Georgian and Victorian eras, during which Byron sang "The first Kiss of Love," and Tom Moore struck his harp and warbled like a nightingale of "bowers," "smiles." "wine, "kissea" and cognate subjects, one comes to a new phase of the momentous kissing question, and at this point it becomes to a new phase of the momentous kissing question, and at this point it becomes to a new phase of the momentous kissing question, and at this point it becomes to a new phase of the momentous kissing question, and at this point it becomes to a new phase of the momentous kissing question, and at this point it becomes to a new phase of the momentous kissing question, and at this point it becomes to a single package of Gray's Specific will convince the most of the dudus Americanus, or great American dude—the latest product of our "society" and civilization. As a sort of zoological title has been bestowed on the dude, it is proper to remove any false impression that he zoological title has been bestowed on the dude, it is proper to re-move any false impression that he is not an ass—that is, not in form or feature. In fact, he has none of the quali-ties of that noble animal—none of his grit, obstinacy or staying powers. The dude hasn't even the redeeming quality of bad temper, like that other noble animal "without pride of ancestry or hope of posterity"—the mule. A dude may be described in the main as the combined product of a tailor, a shoemaker and a natter. At his birth silliness marked him for her own. Insipidity took him in tow at an early age and will hold him fast astern through life. The dude—if, indeed, that nature had any particular design in giving such a being animate existence—is probably designed to furnish a casual paragraph for the newspapers and to supply an occasion for mirth to all persons who have not taken leave of their senses. One would have thought the absurdi

long ago; but no. The latest "wrinkle" among the dudesque fraternity is that they have taken to kissing-not some other fellow's sister or wire; oh, no, that would involve some risk, but to kissing one another. Careful investigation proves this to be a fact. When two of our metropolitan dudes meet now, whether in public or private, they forthwith embrace and then the osculatory operation is per-formed. It is the proper thing, you know, by Jove!

"Yes," said a well-known society man, New York Star.

The researches of laborious delvers in to be a fact that the dudesque brotherthe mine of useful information have hood have fallen in love with one another. Most of them now embrace and kiss of osculation is one of an antiquity very whenever they meet, like simpering remote indeed. No doubt the term school girls. It is the 'at at craze.

"Well, said the star man, who had the pleasure of meeting the society man, what think you will be their next manifestations of silliness?" "Heaven knows; am sure I don't," re-

The practice is unquestionably of Oriental origin, as in truth is that of the race with which it came in to eyes ever lit upon the other day, as I was eyes ever lit upon the other day, as I was driving up Lexington avenue, near Forty-There are seven references in Genesis to kissing. In the affair of Joab and Amasa, recorded in II. Samuel, it is confilled, with long ir ck coats, tall hats,

And so it is. That famous "paroxysmal kiss," of which all the world heard only a few years ago, has, perhaps, gone out of fashion, but the kiss dude will, no doubt, be found a fit substitute. The progress of this latest aberration of dudeom will be followed with interest. Certainly, in respect to osculation, the dudes can point to a noted prototype and ex-emplar in the person of Absalom who (II. Samuel, xi:5) "kissed any man that came night to him." Of course it would be too, too painful if a few of our dudes should meet with a like fate even as they follow his practice.
