

THE DAILY BEE. COUNCIL BLUFFS.

Monday Morning, April 21.

SUBSCRIPTION RATES. By Carrier... By Mail...

OFFICE: No. 7 Pearl Street, Near Broadway.

MINOR MENTION.

See J. Reiter's, spring goods. The school board meet to-night. Additional local on seventh page. The Iowa State Dental society is to meet in Council Bluffs May 6. All railroad tickets bought of D. W. Bushnell are guaranteed, also all rebate orders given by him. S. Leonard, late of the police force, has received $900 back pension for injuries received during the war. For the May term of the district court there are already 250 cases docketed, and two weeks more in which to add. Some of the city officials will be the first to need the new police patrol wagon, if they do not change their habits. The Harrison county democratic convention has instructed its delegates in favor of D. M. Harris as delegate at large. If a meeting of the council should be called at Pat. Lacy's a quorum might be more easily obtained than at the council chamber. That move for a clock in the tower of the Masonic temple is being allowed to demise. Wake it up and carry it to completion. Next Friday afternoon Miss Swan's pupils and Miss Lyon's pupils in the Bloomer school building will have a contest in computation. The city council will surely meet to-night, and it is hoped that it will be a regular meeting and in the council chamber, but perhaps not. Mr. Wirt, who retired lately from the Boston Tea company, has now bought into Duquette, Gilbert & Co., the new firm being Wirt & Duquette. There were no preaching services at the Presbyterian church yesterday, the pastor, Rev. A. K. Bates, being absent attending the meeting of the presbytery at Clarinda. The case of Lawrence McDermott, charged with cruelty in probing a bull with a pitch-fork, has come to an end, Justice Schurz finding him guilty and fining him $5 and costs. The McMahon girl, who ran away from Denison, has been taken back by her father. She is only thirteen years old, and no reason is assigned for her thus wanting to leave home. Frederick Kildare, who made an innocent appearance corner of Broadway and Bryant street, was on Saturday assessed $14 by Judge Aylesworth. Drink was the cause of his forgetting himself. W. R. Cooper, of Henderson, has brought suit against Mills county for $45,000 more, making in all $65,000, damages claimed on account of his wife in the falling of the Ewing bridge, July 4, 1882. The city aldermen seem to take less interest in city affairs than just before election. Night after night there is no quorum, and the work of equalization hangs unfinished, while other important matters are also pending. Floyd Cozzens, the engineer at the Ogden house, claims that another darkey knocked him down, robbed him of a silver watch, and then skipped away. Cozzens seems to be having much trouble. Not long ago he was engaged in a cutting scrape with one of the dining room boys. M. A. Upton has been elected assistant secretary of the Union stock yards and also of the Omaha land syndicate, and will now take charge of the stock yards at Omaha, and be in the office on that side of the river Mr. Donnelly, the secretary, will take charge of the yards here. Dr. West had stored away in the closet of his office some cartridges which he left over from his last hunt. He keeps his coat in the same place, and by some mischance the coal and cartridges got mixed, and Saturday, just before going out to dinner, he filled up the stove, not noticing the strange mixture of fuel. During his absence there was an explosion, but luckily there was no one to hit by flying bullets, and the only damage was scattered ash and broken mica. John Margat, who has had so much trouble with neighbors, and especially with Joe Huffman, claims that the latest outrage is that Joe has smashed in one of his windows with a club. The first window-breaking, it is alleged, was on account of Huffman's amorous desire for Margat's daughter; the next window-breaking was by the firing of shotguns with the intent, it was claimed, of killing the old man, and now comes a third smash. The New Hardman Piano has revolutionized the business in upright pianos. Absolutely faultless and of unequalled durability, it is sold at a price far below that of any other first class piano made. Its success in Philadelphia, Pittsburg, Boston, St. Louis and Cincinnati has been phenomenal. Low prices and easy terms. Depot for the west. J. MULLER, Main Street, Council Bluffs, Iowa. A $30 prize given this week at the shooting gallery opposite the opera house to the person making the best score in ten shots.

AN OLD BUGLE. How It Treated for Council Bluffs Thirty Years Ago.

Some Interesting Reminders of What Changes Time Has Wrought.

Items From Its Columns.

P. McCallant, while repairing the roof of J. B. Lewis' house on Madison street, found stored away among the rafters several copies of The Council Bluffs Bugle, a paper published here thirty years ago. He kindly remembered THE BEE office with one of those reminders of the past, and its pages now yellow, its old fashioned typographical clothes now faded, are nevertheless more interesting now in some respects than they were when first sent forth from the office upon the brick wall of which can still be seen the almost obliterated sign The Bugle. This paper was a semi-weekly, with J. E. Johnson as its editor. Its motto stands forth as "truth crushed to earth shall rise again," indicating dryer streets in Council Bluffs thirty years ago, for truth crushed in the latter-day mud, could hardly rise. At that early date there seemed to have been a fear and trembling among the Bugles that the world would not recognize this as a city, and there was in fact great danger of them forgetting their dignity themselves, so wherever the name appears it is given as "the city of Council Bluffs," or "Council Bluffs city," even the date line of the paper bearing the omnipresent word "city." That need is now passed, as Council Bluffs is acknowledged now as a city. The advertising columns of thirty years ago are decidedly interesting, as they contain many names still familiar. That advertising columns are read with interest thirty years after publication should be borne in mind by those who sneer at advertising, and try to do business without it. Among the professional cards appear the attorney cards of James D. Tost, Johnson & Cassidy, C. E. Stone, A. C. Ford, A. V. Larimer, William C. James, and L. M. Kline. Greene, Wear & Benton advertise themselves as bankers and land agents. Dr. W. H. Gordon, surgeon dentist, announces his office as "on the east side of Madison street, a few doors above the tin shop, Council Bluffs city." Royal D. Amy had the tin shop referred to, and bids the public "look out for the sign of the big coffee pot." J. B. Lewis, as president of the "Council Bluffs and Nebraska Ferry company," announces that "the road is built according to the survey and plan of Col. Curtis, and secures uninterrupted access to the ferry, and makes it the best and nearest landing for the river packets; high or low water, and that their new steam ferry boat Marion, of ample power and dimensions to clear the track from day to day, is now here, ready to commence crossing immediately." E. Knabo uses the cut of a saddle to attract attention to his new shop on Middle Broadway, opposite the City Hotel. J. B. Lewis proclaims that Nebraska territory is open for settlement, and that every man shall get a horse, and then come to him for a Spanish saddle, and haste away. M. W. Robinson and C. H. Robinson announce the new and important arrangement of a tri-weekly mail from Council Bluffs city to Omaha, by a four-horse coach, which calls for passengers at the Tremont house and Pacific house. B. R. Pegram & Co. call on all to settle up with them. Col. E. J. Pyley proposes to open a language and drawing school. Tootle & Jackson advertise all sorts of goods. Edmund Jeffries want a buyer for 450 acres of timber land, a saw mill and flouring mill two and a half miles from the city. Cochran & Megath have a general land agency and exchange office. G. Dougherty & Co. wholesale and retail dealers in dry goods, groceries, etc., boast as their motto, "examine, try, then buy." Marshall Turley, as attorney, and E. P. Snow, as auctioneer, advertise general land business, auction store, etc., under the firm name of Turley & Snow. "Mormon Guides" to Utah and California can be had at the post-office. Francis A. Brown announces a select school in the upper room of Nebraska hall. A meeting of the stockholders of the contemplated St. Nicholas hotel is called to meet at early candle-light. C. Gove gives notice to sportsmen that he has received a large supply of guns, pistols, etc. J. W. Carson calls attention to the fact that he has opened a restaurant at the old Globe saloon, to be known as "Carson's Rancho," and that "all day his bar is supplied with choice wines and liquors, and strangers will find this a convenient and comfortable place to get the wants of nature supplied." Huntington & Pyppe, in the boot and shoe line, call attention to brands now forgotten, such as Koaouth boots, Jenny Lind ties, Nebraska boots. They are located next to the Robinson house, on Broadway. A public sale of lots in "Omaha City, the capital of Nebraska," is advertised, and the advantages of that city thirty years ago are thus set out: The proprietors respectfully represent to the public, that in their undoubting confidence as to the superior advantages of their point, they have expended over twenty-five thousand dollars in actual labor and improvements, besides the free grant of a very large portion of their best lots to actual settlers, and now have the satisfaction of witnessing, as the result of what they have done, the most flourishing and populous town in the territory, of intelligent, moral, and enterprising citizens. A fine brick capital now finished and furnished, two commodious hotels quite advanced, one of which will be completed and furnished by the 8th of January next, four or five good boarding houses prepared to entertain from ten to thirty persons each, a steam saw mill in operation, at one quarry opened furnishing an abundance of lime and stone, brickmaking commenced and a contract with Col. Howard, of Peckville, N. Y., for the manufacture of 2,000,000 brick next season, and a steam ferry. T. P. Treynor calls attention to his carriage shop, on Madison street, a few doors above the court house. John Keller announces that he has opened a large lumber yard. The reading matter consists of sketches of Iowa, setting forth its advantages, a dissertation on "Honest Postmasters," calling attention to the wonderful scarcity of defalcations, considering the fact that there were 32,000 postoffices in the United States; a lengthy discussion of a printers' festival in which there was some row between the newspaper men; the usual appeal in behalf of supporting home papers; a few paragraphs of congressional news, among which was the announcement that the senate had resolved to send a steamer in search of Dr. Kane; several little local items; an account of a raid by Indians at Fontanelle; some short articles on agriculture; and four long poems or rhymes. Harle's Exchange is the name of a general store conducted by H. D. Harle, Allen & Howe announce that the ferry at "Winter Quarters" is again in operation. Wells & Bro. call attention to their lively stable team of buses running between the two cities. M. Rogers advertises the Bluff City tin and stove store. Stutsman & Donnell call attention to their loss by fire, Nov. 11, 1853, and want customers to pay up. H. A. Terry represented the nursery business. McMahon & Williams had the real mortar hung out as the sign of their drug store. Charles Tremler advertised his jewelry business. C. Voorhis & Co., at the head of Broadway, Madison street, at the sign of the mammoth A, announced the opening of a large stock of goods, just received by the steamer Genoa. Dr. E. Horn showed up the drug business. Foster, the florist, on Harrison street, Council Bluffs, has the largest stock west of the Mississippi. Send for catalogue.

PERSONAL.

Mrs. J. T. Oliver and daughter, Miss Blanche, have returned from Minneapolis, where they have been spending a few weeks. Mrs. H. H. Hake, of Madison, Neb., is here on a brief visit to her uncle, A. S. Clough and will then proceed eastward on a visit to her parents in Canada. E. P. Palmer, superintendent of general agencies of D. M. Osborn & Co., was in the city Saturday. Miss Lizzie Brown and Miss Nellie Chapman, have gone to Knoxville, Ill., on a visit to friends. Sheriff D. A. Farrell was in the city Saturday. The Mills county democratic convention booms him up as district delegate to the national convention. Remember that DeHaven's is head-quarters for Swift's Specific, that he gets it direct from Atlanta, Georgia, therefore is always fresh and good; that it is the best blood purifier in the world. Every bottle warranted. Try it.
