"MAKE HOME HAPPY."
 More than building showy mansions,
 More than dress and the array;
 More than dress and the array;
 More than station, power, and awe,
 Make your home both neat and tasteful.
 Bright and pleasant, always fair,
 Where each heart finds its truest care,
 Grateful for each pleasure there.
 There each heart will rest contented,
 Seldom wishing far to roam,
 Or if roaming, still will ever
 Cherish happy thoughts of home,
 Such a home makes men the better,
 Sure and lasting the control,
 Home with pure and bright surroundings,
 Leaves its silver on the soul.

THE SILVER BULLET.
 In 1869, Lawrence Nutting was United States Marshal in the Southern district of Virginia. The state was at that time fairly overrun with desperadoes, and classes of Bushwhackers, highwaymen, counterfeiters and "moonshiners" nestled in all the country-side among the mountains, and far from towns and cities upon lonely roads; while gamblers and desperadoes swarmed in and about the settlements. Crime was frequent, and the life of a United States officer was a series of stirring adventures involving great danger, and demanding as great tact and personal bravery.
 But Nutting proved himself worthy and fit for the office. A young man of temperate habits, quick wit, splendid physique and dashing courage, he was never at a loss how to act; and the vermin that infested that section soon learned to hate and fear him intensely.
 Many were the expeditions which the officer had led, many he escapes, and many the prisoners safely captured and walled by his efforts; but one man evaded him. The shrewdest and worst "moonshiner" of all was still at large; despite all his efforts, Nutting had not yet secured Kulloff Allen.
 This man was known throughout the state. His career had that of a criminal from his birth. In the fastnesses of southwestern Virginia, he manufactured whisky upon a grand scale, and was the owner of a dozen or more "queer stills," and snatched his fingers at the law.
 Several times had Nutting sought this quarry; twice he had actually caught him, yet twice he had escaped, and at the time of which we speak he was still free.
 Nutting sat at his office window one evening, musing, and reflecting upon the matter, when a light knock upon his door started him up quickly. A stranger stood before him.
 "The United States Marshal?" said he, interrogatively.
 "Yes, sir," said Lawrence, rising. "Be seated. What can I do for you?"
 "I would speak with you alone," he said, glancing around. "I have matters of importance to communicate."
 "This office is out of hearing from the street," replied Nutting. "We are by ourselves. You can speak freely."
 The other drew a couple of cigars from his pocket, offered one to the marshal, and lit the other himself. Nutting followed his example; then the man drew his chair nearer, so that he sat between the officer and the desk whereon lay his belt and pistols, then open his coat so that the butts of two heavy revolvers might be seen, and blowing the smoke lightly from his cigar, said in a quiet tone to his companion:
 "You are desirous of catching a notorious moonshiner, one Kulloff Allen, are you not?"
 "There's no doubt of that," said the marshal smiling.
 "I am the man," said the other, striking a cigar never stirred in his lips; his hand did not quiver, nor his breath come the quicker. A single sign showed how deeply he was moved; his eyes dilated, then he laughed long and loud.
 "You—yes, Kulloff Allen?" My friend, I know Allen. He has been here, he is here, and his face bears a scar across the chin; yours are perfect. The joke is broken, but you are not Allen."
 The other hesitated a moment, then striking a new cigar, he said: "You are a fellow much larger than man moved. It was as though two tiger gazes at each other. The outlaw said:
 "Listen! I am armed; you are not. I am fully as desperate a man as report makes me. I am as strong as you. Do not try to arrest me, for I shall be obliged to kill you. I cannot see how to have a talk, but it was necessary that you should know who I am. I will not molest you if you will do the same by me, and give me fifteen minutes to escape when we have finished.
 Nutting measured his chances. Unarmed in the presence of a man to whom murder was not new, he deemed prudence the better part, and replied:
 "I agree."
 "Good," said Allen, removing his own pistol belt; "your word is equal to mine. We shall both be unarmed. And now I would tell you a story."
 "Then he drew his chair still nearer the marshal, and as the twilight fell and night came down, he told of his life—a weird, strange history, every line of sense with the notes of a man's life, the weakness which made the man what he was.
 The other listened breathlessly; the darkness shrouded both, and the cigars were finished long before the story was ended.
 At length, however, the visitor paused, and then concluded as follows:
 "So have I lived. As a wild man, almost; and that life has for the past five years been more a mania than ever before, but with a method. I am and have been seeking money and business. We will buy all our interest and not trust to a merchant who has no interest in the goods he sells. We will accept prompt attention to selling anything entrusted to us, and most especially to the sale of the following: Correspondence solicited.

"Not your'n, massa! Thank de lord! I see de flash in his hand shot upward toward de pigeon-hole where lay de old dueling pistol."
 "Down with your hand!" cried Allen.
 It was too late. There came a sharp and ringing report, a single cry, a dull and sickening thud upon the floor, and all was over.
 And the moon, breaking from between the rifted clouds without, looked through the open window upon the face of the dead, while Nutting, white and trembling, held in his nerveless hand a smoking pistol. The silver bullet had found its mark and returned to its owner. The United States Marshal was sav'nt!

 ADDITIONAL LOCAL NEWS.
SCATTERED BY THE STORM.
 Details of the Damage Done in and About Harlan.
 The storm which prevailed in this part of the country last Saturday did more damage in and about Harlan than was reported at the time. Among those reported by the Tribune, of that place, was a building, owned by Mr. Schram, three miles northwest of Harlan, which was injured, and the roof of a house belonging to Mr. Craft, near Kirkman was blown off.
 The residence of Trim D. Pratt was struck by lightning at about seven o'clock in the evening. The lightning entered the roof and followed down the side of the house, tearing off the weather-board, and scattering the front of the building. Mrs. Pratt and three children were in the house at the time. Mrs. Barton's child cried, but it was not discovered until after and the lightning scorched the back of its neck. James McConnell was the first to dash water upon the burning building. Mr. Pratt's son was in the barn milking the cow. He came to the house and dashed the bucket of water on the flames. The fire company came forth promptly, but was met by B. R. Lowenstein, agent for the Iowa and Nebraska Insurance company, who informed them that the fire had been extinguished. The house was insured in the Hawkeye for $800.
 In the vicinity of Astor the winds damaged the cattle sheds and machinery belonging to John Rhodes, and also killed seven of his sheep. In the same neighborhood the storm moved residences from their foundations for John Conen, Dan Flynn, Ira Porter, Tom Ledwith and Mr. Reeder. At Mr. Scanlon's, three miles from Astor, a corn crib was blown on the house. At Irwin, Walrod's machinery and buggies therein damaged. At Kirkman, P. Dodson's smoke-house was wrecked, and windows smashed in various places in town.

"I have some here," said Nutting, and like a flash his hand shot upward toward the pigeon-hole where lay the old dueling pistol.
 "Down with your hand!" cried Allen.
 It was too late. There came a sharp and ringing report, a single cry, a dull and sickening thud upon the floor, and all was over.
 And the moon, breaking from between the rifted clouds without, looked through the open window upon the face of the dead, while Nutting, white and trembling, held in his nerveless hand a smoking pistol. A SLIM MATINEE.
 The City Council Goes Through a Few Motions and Adjourns.
 Yesterday afternoon there was another meeting of the city council. There were several important ordinances pending in regard to sewerage, and it was expected that these would be passed so that work could commence under them as soon as possible. After sleepily listening to their reading, the ordinances were passed for a second reading and referred to the committee again with the understanding that they would be ready to report Monday afternoon at 2 o'clock.
 "The spirit world lies all about us, and its avenues are open to unseen friends who come and go."
