COUNCIL BLUFFS. ADDITIONAL LOCAL NEWS.

CAUGHT A BADGER.

A Wisconsin Man Confined Out of His Roll. There have been of late a number of confidence games reported, and it is evident that the gang is hanging about.

Yesterday a man named H. F. Kahl, hailing from Ft. Atkinson, Wisconsin, was squealing lustily because he had paid $35 to get a bit of experience.

The man who worked him represented himself as engaged in the jewelry business in Omaha, and borrowed the money from him for a few minutes only, letting him hold as security a draft for $1,500.

The Wisconsin man still holds the security, and the "Omaha jeweler" does not seem to care enough for it to come after it.

The trick was turned on the Northwestern train between the transfer and the local depot.

One of the railway conductors pointed out to one of the police officers yesterday four confidence men, who had taken seats in his train. The men were bounced off the train, and prevented from working.

ACROSS THE CONTINENT.

An Old Man's Journey from California to Massachusetts.

Nearly 5,000 Miles Afoot--His Reception at His Old Home--Incidents on the Way.

WESTER, Mass., May 11.--This quiet, decayed old town has not yet recovered from the excitement caused last Friday night by the triumphant entry of old Warren Johnson, who has walked all the way from California to his old home.

Hundreds of people lined the streets and cheered the old man, who, though 65 years old, strode along straight as an arrow, leading an old horse hitched to an express wagon, to the tailboard of which was tied a plaid and dusty cow.

A pitchfork hung by the side of the cart, which contained nothing but a box and some blankets. On the seat perched a little shaggy dog, who blinked his small eyes sleepily as the team slowly jogged along.

Arrived at the hotel the old man stopped, took off his hat and addressed the crowd. His speech was brief.

"My friends," said he, "there's a lot of you, but I don't seem to know ye." Then he disappeared within the house to receive the congratulations of his acquaintances.

The story of his long pedestrian journey, told your correspondent by Mr. Johnson, today, is an interesting one.

He left Humboldt's Bay, California, June 1, 1882, and reached Ogden, Utah, Sep. 23. I passed the winter of 1883 among the Mormons. May 10 I set out again and reached Reno, N. H., where my sister lives, Nov. 7. I left there with my wife and got home here Friday night, having two days and a half traveled over 4,500 miles on foot, making an average of thirty miles a day.

You see I wanted to bring my horse and cow and dog with me, and this was the best way. I set out with a railroad map, and after I got into the States I bought State maps as I came along, and I had to go straight to Utah. I first went to California, 313 miles, and then San Jose, some forty-seven miles further south. Then I turned back through the San Joaquin Valley and to Sacramento. I halted there for eight days, and then took the line of the U. P. railway to Emigrant Gap. There I struck a gang of robbers, and I followed the railroad. I remember very well when I struck Reno, because it was there I first had my cow shod.

After leaving Wadsworth I entered the desert where I found the best road in the country, the small public road making a good hard level surface to go over. It took me 115 days to get the 1,400 miles from Eureka to Ogden, where I wintered among the Mormons.

A PEACEFUL JOURNEY. "And the hair breadth escapes and adventures along the way?"

"Bless you, I never had a hair breadth of trouble until I got into my own States, near Auburn, where a drunken tramp wanted to fight me."

"How did you travel?"

"Well, I walked most of the time because I would rather walk than ride. I had a box of provisions in the cart which I replenished when I could. I carried a bag of grain for the horse. When I could I put up at a hotel, and when I was in the wilderness I lay down on the bare ground either with or without a fire. The only thing that troubled me any was the wolves, and they only scared me once or twice. I got eight once or twice of other wild beasts, but they never ventured to molest me. After my rest of eight months at Ogden I started out of Green River for my journey across the prairies, with 400 pounds of feed for the horse and cow. I got through the Rocky mountains by Bridger's pass and Weber's canyon and was sixteen days getting the horse and cow. I met there were very friendly. I came out at Cheyenne and kept on through Nebraska and Iowa to Chicago.

THE SURRENDER OF CHIEF JOSEPH. Lieut C. E. S. Wood contributes a paper to the May Century on "Chief Joseph, the Nez-Perce" (whose portrait is in the frontispiece), and his battle with General Howard's troops. The surrender is described as follows: "The old 'Captain John' brought this reply (and his own sword) to the general, and with tears as he delivered the words of his chief: 'Tell General Howard I know his heart. What he told me before--I have it in my heart, I am tired of fighting. Our chiefs are killed. Looking glass is broken. The old men all dead. The young men now who say 'yes' or 'no' [that is vote in council]. He who led in the young men [Joseph's brother, Ollicut] is dead. It is cold and we have no blankets. The little children are freezing to death. My people--some of them--have run away to the hills, and have no blankets, no food. No one knows where they are--perhaps freezing to death. I want to have time to look for my children, and to see how many of them I can find; and I shall find them among the dead. Hear me, my chiefs; I am tired; my horse and gun have failed. From now on my gun now stands I will fight no more forever!'"

"It was nearly sunset when Joseph came to deliver himself up. He rode from his camp in the hollow. His hands were clasped over the pommel of his saddle, and his feet lay across his knees; his head was bowed down, and every now and then he would look up at the general, his face was upturned and earnest as they murmured to him; but he looked neither to the right nor the left, yet seemed to listen intently. So the little group came slowly up the hill to where General Howard stood with his staff, and the general slowly waited to receive the surrender. As he neared them, Joseph sat erect in the saddle, then gracefully and with dignity he swung himself down from his horse, and with an impulsive gesture threw his arms to his full length, and offered his hands to General Howard. The latter motioned him toward General Miles, who received the token of submission."

"Those present shook hands with Joseph, whose worn and anxious face brightened with a sad smile as silently he took up his old rifle. Then, turning away, he walked to the tent provided for him."

His scalp-lock was tied with a thick plait on each side of his head. He wore buckskin leggings and a gray woolen shawl, through which were the marks of four or five bullets recovered in this last fight. His forehead and wrist were scratched by bullets."

Joseph at this time must have been about thirty-eight years old. He is tall and straight and handsome, with a mouth and chin not unlike that of Napoleon I. He was in excellent health, and his eyes were as bright as those of a young man. He was dressed in a white shirt and a pair of blue trousers, and he carried a pair of boots on his feet. PRESIDENTIAL CANDIDATES.

Their Age, Education and Other Personal Points.

Here are some interesting items about the presidential candidates. Robert Lincoln at the age of forty is the youngest of the republican candidates, and Thomas Sherman, who is sixty-four, is the oldest.

Senator Sherman, at sixty-one, stands next in age, and all of the remaining candidates are between fifty and sixty. Harrison and Greaham are each fifty-five, Arthur is fifty-four, Allison fifty-five, Edmunds fifty-six, and Hawley, of Connecticut, fifty-eight.

Senator Logan, in his autobiography in the congressional directory, does not give his age, but he looks to be between fifty and sixty. The democratic candidates show a majority of old men. Samuel J. Tilden is seventy-two, Henry B. Payne seventy-four, Allen G. Thurman seventy-one, Joe McDonald sixty-five, Tom Hendricks sixty, Tom Bayard fifty-six, General Dewey sixty-six, and Flower, of New York, forty-nine.

Of the candidates of both parties prominently before the country or probable as dark horses, over one-half were born in Ohio, viz., the two Shermans, Harrison, Allison, McDonald, Hendricks, and Grant. Thurman was born in Virginia, Tilden, Flower, and Payne in New York, Arthur and Edmunds in Vermont, Logan and Lincoln in Illinois, Jewett in Maryland and Hays in North Carolina.

Of eleven republican candidates eight received collegiate education. Edmunds had a private tutor and General Sherman was schooled at West Point. Logan's education was received at the common schools, as were also those of Denver and Flower. Blaine went to college at Washington, Pa., Lincoln at Cambridge, Harrison at Oxford, O., Allison at Hudson, O., and Hawley at Hamilton College, N. Y.

Senator Logan's father was a hotel keeper, Sherman's a judge, Arthur's a Baptist preacher, Greaham's a sheriff, Thurman a preacher, and Harrison a lawyer and statesman. As to the religion of the various candidates I am unable to find that any of them ever had any. Senator Sherman's church is the Episcopal, the General's wife every one knows is a Catholic. President Arthur attends the Episcopal, and Greaham is found in the Presbyterian. Both Payne and Thurman are liberal in their views, and Mrs. Logan, who has a strong influence with her husband, is quoted as a Methodist.

As to professions, Blaine and Hawley have been editors, Logan, John Sherman, Edmunds, Harrison, Allison, Arthur, Greaham, Bayard, Hendricks, Payne, and Thurman have practiced law, McDonald once followed the saddle's trade, and Arthur taught school at $15 a month, and John Sherman acted as a school teacher.

Everyone knows that Tilden is a bachelor, and that Allison and Arthur are widowers. Greaham has a wife and two children, Lincoln has three children, one of whom is named Abraham, and Blaine, Edmunds, Payne, and Thurman are married and have families. Joe McDonald has had two wives and is now, as they say in Scotland, wearing his third.

Of course any estimate of the wealth of the candidates must be based on supposition. Tom Bayard is said to be worth $150,000, Roswell P. Flower $2,000,000, Henry B. Payne from $2,000,000 to $4,000,000, A. G. Thurman $3,000,000 to $4,000,000, and Hugh J. Jewett is estimated as being several times as wealthy. No one knows what John Sherman is worth, but I have an idea that his income outside of his salary is large enough to keep him. Edmunds has an income estimated at nearly $100,000, McDonald one of $20,000, General Sherman, his salary as a retired officer, and Blaine's, says William Walter Phelps, is worth less than a half a million. Everyone has heard of Tilden's bar, and most people know that Logan and Greaham are moderately poor.

Why Be Downcast. True, you are in a miserable condition--you are weak, pale and nervous. You cannot sleep nights, or enjoy your waking hours; yet why lose heart? Get at the drugstore a bottle of Burdock Blood Bitters. They will restore you to health and peace of mind.
