I have no objection to joining any typographical union, even though for some years I have a typographical union that so ruthlessly trods under foot the laws of the head society from which it receives its power The violations I have cited you can easily see I am correct in, by reference to the laws and constitution of the International Typographical Union. I am certain of it, for I had the honor of being a member of the body that put that constitution and those laws in being. There is much more that I would like to say in this matter, but the public has already had a surfeit of it. But I will say that if it is your purpose to causelessly and unprovokedly vilify and traduce me or to number me among those you have marked for assassination of character, on account of my refusing to obey a ridicuous mandate, I am prepared for it Whatever my human frailties may have been in the past, and whatever virtues I may not have possessed, I will claim that I have never flinched in the lack of moral courage to do my duty either in the face of an unjust employer or a tyrannical and reputation-blackening body of men usurping the name of trade-union In conclusion, I would say that I have written nothing here that I intend should in-jure any person's feelings.
