THE OLD PRINTER.

His Last "String," and How "The Boys" Watched Over His Declining Hours.

Lincoln Journal Topics.

Bob Burdette tells how the old printer passed away in that sweetly pathetic style or his that stirs the heart to its profoundest depths. These veteran printers are a queer and interesting set. They are walking encyclopedias of recent history, and current events. They comprehend everything from Gladstone's foreign policy to the intrigues of a Kansas congressional district. They are true Bohemians, and are acquainted with every city in the United States. They have seen every public man in the country, and flock to national conventions and other notable gatherings with the unerring certainty of delegates. They want but little of this world's goods, and generally want it wet. In the summer a plank makes them a bed and the sky a roof. In winter they hibernate in some town, only to start out recuperated in the spring for a tour. But we digress. An old printer walked into Lincoln a few days ago. Luck had been against him. He was tattered of raiment' feeble of step and unappeased of appetite. Too proud to solicite aid, he went to work on a frame placed at his disposal by a fellow craftsman in the Journal newsroom. He set silently about his task, drawing with trembling hand a pair of ancient spectacles from their hiding place in his bosom. He toiled on quietly and patiently until past midnight, when he told the foreman he was played out and would like to rest. He sat on the foreman's chair till the night's work was done and the dupes pasted. The boys crowded around him, but he said he did not feel able to talk. Would somebody cash his string? It was done and the poor old man tottered off to a tenement house where he could get cheap lodging. He did not come around next day, and one of the boys who wanted a sub went to look him up. He found the old man lying on the floor of a bare little attic room in which one could scarcely stand erect utterly devoid of furniture. He was sick and worn out and could not work. The compositor came back to his associates and told the story the chapel relief committee bestirred themselves and a collection was taken up. Printers are proverbial for their kindness to the distressed of their guild, and in an hour the poor decrepid old man was lying upon a comfortable bed, his wardrobe replenished, a nurse procured, a bath administered, his raiment changed and a snug sum of cash reposed in the new pantaloons that hung over the foot of the bedstead. Chairs and table were added to his comforts and his room rent was paid a week in advance. The old man softly murmured his thanks as the boys retired the poor old fellow's "God bless you" rang sweetly in their ears. Next morning one of them went to the room to see how the object of their whole-souled kindness was getting along, and to minister to his further needs. He paused at the door, struck by a sense of silence and loneliness, and a presentment lodged in his heart that all was not well. He bent and listened a moment, but not even the sound of breathing could be heard. He turned the latch and entered. In the silent watches of the night the old printer had passed away. So had the bed and the bedding and the furniture and the new clothes and the money and the nurse. And so, too, had the sweet spirit of charity.

Horsford's Acid Phosphate,
As an Appetizer.

Dr. Morris Gibbs, Howard City, Mich. says: I am greatly pleased with it as a tonic t is an agreeably and a good apetizer."

A Good Well.

Arkansaw Traveller.

Several days ago a northern gentleman came to Little Rock and announced his intention of buying a home. "I am not so particular with regard to the house and ground," said he, "as I am about the water. There must be a well of cold water."

"Think I've got the very place," replied an old fellow whose shirt bosom was streaked with tobacco spit.

"Good well?"

"Finest in the land."

"Cold water?"

"Coldest you ever saw. I wouldn't sell, but I've got another place which I'm tired of renting. Suppose you come up to-morrow and look at it."

"All right. Meet me here."

The next day the old fellow came down and conducted the Northern gentleman to his premises.

"House is not very good," said the Northern gentleman.

"No, nothin' extra."

"Grounds are not very pleasing."

"No great shakes. Let's try the water."

"He drew a bucket of water from the well, and when the northern man drank his teeth chattered.

"Why, that s the coldest water I ever drank," said he.

"Coldest in the land, I tell you. So cold that it killed all the flowers when I watered 'em with it,"

The northern gentleman was so much pleased that he bought the place without further questioning, seeing that the old fellow was not anxious to sell, and fearing that he might change his mind.

Several days afterwards the northern gentlemen sought the old fellow and said:

"I ought to take a gun and shoot you, you swindling scoundrel."

"What's the matter," looking up in surprise.

"Matter! why that water is so warm I can't drink it. I bought it with the understanding that it was cold."

"It was cold when you bought it, podner,"

"But it's warm now."

"Yes, for you see the ice has melted. No trouble to make that water cold, podner. All you've got to do is to throw in a car load of ice. No well is any account unless you take care of it. I'm in the ice business; would like to have your trade."

"What Can't Be Cured Must Be Endured,"

This old adage does not signify that we must suffer the miseries of dyspepsia, when a medicine with the curative properties of Burdock Blood Bitters is available. It is one of the most substancial and reliable remedies sold to-day.

To Be Abused by a Brute.

Chicago Herald (Independent).

It is positively stated that George William Curtis and his indecent "Journal of Civilization" will oppose Blaine 'editorially and pictorially." Anybody who has taken the trouble to watch the course of Harper's Weekly in political campaigns since the war will know who that means. It means a graceful and dignified opposition to the Maine chieftain on the page presided over by Mr. Curtis, and a fiendish warfare waged in the same direction on the pages conducted by the caricaturist Nast.

No decent man, whether opposed to Mr. Blaine or not, will be pleased to know that this fellow's pencil is to be re-employed in American politics. He has libeled many of the best men this country has ever produced. He drove poor old Horace Greely broken-hearted to his grave. He has pictorially slandered every man who chanced to encounter his narrow contemptible opposition. He has outrageously abused every Democratic leader since the days of Douglas. Savagery run mad could not have invented and the barbarians of the jungle would not have published, had the facilities, the miserable travesties on humanity which his malignant brain has conjured up, and which his publishers have printed eagerly for gain.

Probably when this infernal warfare on Mr. Blaine shall begin we will hear an outcry in some quarters which once were silent when this fellow was busily engaged in their interest. But he will be neither better nor worse this summer than he was in 1872, when he slandered Greely, or in 1876, when he slandered Tilden. He will be the same dog at his old tricks, with new victims, Democrats who may be pleased with his venomous shots at Blaine will not be able to forget that the same pencil has villified them and all that they hold dear politically. Republicans who writhe under his newest exhibitions of savagery and malice may perhaps recall the time when they encouraged him by wore and purse in that very business. Both would honor their manhood and the country is they would frown upon him and his works, ank cast him and them out as unworthy of the attention of decent men. There ought to be no glace in our politics for the brutish Nast.

CONVINCING.

The proof of the pudding is not in chewing the string, but in having an opportunity to test the article direct. VERY YOUNG MASONS.

Eight Rather Frightened Boys Led Blindfolded into LaSincerite Lodge.

New York Sun.

The ceremony of Masonic baptism and adoption of children was performed last night in the Grand Lodge room of Masonic Temple, Twenty-third street, by the French Lodge LaSincerite. This ceremony has rarely been performed in public in this country, and the great hall was crowded with invited guests of the lodge, including many ladies and gentlemen in evening dress.

The members of the lodge formed open rank in the center aisle, with crossed swords held high, while at a given signal eight boys were brought in blindfolded, led by their parents, their ages ranging from three years to ten. Some of the boys looked a little frightened, and grasped their parents' hands rather tightly. Brother Herdet received them at the top of the steps, and at a given signal the bandages were removed from the youngsters' eyes, evidently much to their relief. They looked about in a dazed way, and timidly walked upon the platform. The youngest, to the great amusement of the audience, stoutly resisted being put in the place where he was expected to stand. His mother was obliged to go upon the platform and assist in the ceremonies.

The sponsors of the children took the solemn obligation to aid the children to the utmost in performing the duties of Masonry. Then the children were in turn taken to the font and baptized by washing of their hands, and thence to the altar, whereon was a blazing fire, and where they khelt. The youngest of the eight kept up his reputation, and continued to amuse the audience by stoutly resisting, and his mother was obliged to join the circle at the altar. Next the members of La Sincerite Lodge took the solemn vow binding them to accept the children, which was duly confirmed, the members of the lodge rising and chapping their hands in unison at a signal.

The children were then invested with aprons and jewels of Masonry, all of them but the youngese being highly pleased with their regalia. The youngest, however, was again obstreperous and had to be persuaded by his mother, and possibly by surreptitious candy. Finally the youngsters were all settled. Then they were consecrated, and the orator of the lodge, Brother Lannenrand, made an address, Brother Charles T McClenachen explained in English that La Sincerite lodge had pledged itself to guard and protect these little children and see that they were educated in Freemasonry, to restrain them from vice and keep them from the snares that surround the young. The ceremony of the washing of hands was not intended to interfere in the slightest degree with any religious faith, but was symbolic of approaching the throne of divine grace with pure hearts.

"Spent Fifty Dollars

Praying for the Enemy.

Arkansaw Traveler.

Just before a famous battle a confederate soldier discovered an old man kneeling by a log praying.

"Oh, Lord," said the old man, "have mercy on the federals this day—"

"Get up from there," exclaimed the soldiers. "Got no better sense than to come around here praying for the d—d Yankees!"

The old man looked up and requested to be let alone. The soldier demanded that the prayer should be discontinued. Just then an officer called the soldier and said:

"Why in the thunder don't yon let that man alone. Don,t you know him?"

"No; who is he?"

"Stonewall Jackson."

Daniel W. Bates was standing in his store door, when a lady wearing an immense hat passed up Austin avenue.

"Did you ever see anything more ridiculous?" asked Bates of old Colonel Gibson Tyler, who was present.

"I think that big hat very appropriate. It preserves the unities."

"How so?"

"Well, you see, she has to have something on her shoulders. The head don't amount to anything, so what is lacking is made up in the big hat."—Texas Siftings.

LOVES OF NATURES FREAKS.

Some Old Connubial Ventures by Abnormal Humanity.

Buffalo Times.

"Yes, sir; the freaks have hearts just like the rest of us, and loose them, too," said Prof. Ryder, the custodian of Bunnel's cash-box, as he added $827 to the profit column in the museum ledger and closed the books for the day.

"You remember Maj. Littlefinger," don't you? Well, he's living with his second wife now, and the first Mrs Littlefinger, a dwarf like her husband, is fast asleep under the dasies.

"While the Zulus who were here a few weeks ago were in New York, at Broadway museum, a pretty French girl came to see them one day. It was noticed that she lingered about the barbarians, for a long time, apparently unmindful of the other curiosities. She came again and again, and one day Mr. Bunnell was amazed when Charlie, the larger of the two Zulus, stopped him and said they were engaged to be married. And the match came off despite our efforts to prevent it, but it proved unhappy and a seperation soon followed.

"Beauty No. 56, at our New York contest of beauty, married the living skeleton. The wedding took place at the museum, and was talked of all over the country. They afterward took a triumphal bridal tour through the whole museum chain, and were received by vast crowds everywhere. As far as I know, they are still living together.

"Miss Louise Colton, of Brooklyn, fell in love with Che Mah, the Chinese dwarf, while he was on exhibition in the 'City of Churches,' and her affections were warmly reciprocated. She followed him to Chicago, and while there they went to a priest to have the marriage ceremony performed, but as she was a Catholic and her abbreviated lover a pagan, the priest very properly refused to perform the ceremony.

"A daughter, of John O'Brien, the circus man, married Walter Stuart, the armless and legless freak. They have two children, both perfectly formed, and find much happiness in their connubial relations.

"Jessie Walden, the giantess, who died in this city a short time ago, married a man of ordinary size and each thought the world of the other.

"Walter Payne, the armless wonder, married a New York lady in good standing. She accompanies him on his tours, and they frequently drive out together in the morning.

"Col. Goshen, the big giant, gave his heart and hand and half his fortune to a woman who was below the average stature.

"Mdlle. Christine, the two-headed nightingale, has had four or five good offers. She is a colored woman, but has a preference for white men. She says she will marry some day, when she receives an offer she believes to be inspired by a deeper feeling than the love for lucre. I wonder if the courts will call it a case of bigamy!

"Baron Littlefinger, the Italian midget, succumbed to the fascinations of a woman nearly six feet in height. He has three children, each larger than himself. His wife spanks the babies. His brother, Count Rosebud, tried to make a match between the Baron and one of the Adams sisters, but it was no go. He had his heart set on a large woman, and would have no other.

"Col. Bates and Pat O'Brien, the giants both married giantesses. Neither couple have any children, so the prospects for a race of giants are very slim.

"A well-known long-haired lady was 'mashed on Capt. Constantine, the tatooed Greek, and wrote him several letters, but her affections were not returned.

"As for our tatooed ladies, snake charmers, Circassian women, bearded woman, etc., they are all the while having their romances, and sooner or later nearly all of them succumb to some matrimonial temptation, and exchange the platform for the hearth.

"One of the most inexplicable love affairs that I ever learned of in all my museum experiences, however, happened right here during the past winter. You remember Zie the 'what-is-it?' Not exactly the kind of a man to captivate a woman's fancy, in my estimadon. Well, do you believe it, a little sixteen-year-old school girl became so fascinated with something about him that she visited the museum a dozen times a day in succession. She would sit on the platform and talk with him while the stage show was going on, and acted so peculiarily that finally word was sent to her family—very estimable people living on West avenue. I do not know what they did, but she never came again. Zip seemed quite despondent for two or three days, and kept an anxious watch of the door but he watched in vain.

"Lucia Zatate, our 4½ pound midget, is engaged to a distinguished Chinamen whom she first met while on exhibition in Paris. No date has been fixed for their marriage, but both consider the compact binding. Lucia is very fond of her Celestial lover and, unlike many larger girls, regards any encouragement extended to other admirers as perfidy to her plighted troth. She is of age and I suppose is entitled by law to select her own husband.

A Gamey Fowl.

Pittsburg Commercial-Gazette.

John Franklin, a noted chicken fancier up in Elk county, tells this story, which he avers to be as true as preaching: "There was a large hawk that made its his business to come and take off one of my small chickens each day, and, on hearing my chickens give the well-known alarm a few days ago, I ran out only to see the hawk fly up with a chick in his claws, closely pursued by my game rooster which, when the hawk had lit, fell upon him, tearing out and making the feathers fly at such a rate that I could see neither hawk nor chicken, when a moment later the hawk fell to the ground dead, being spurred through the heart. When the chanticleer's triumphant notes were heard he was crowing over the body of his fallen victim, at least 125 feet from the ground, in the top of a yellow pine, from which he flew to the ground, flapped his wings, crowed, and walked off with an air of perfect satisfaction."

Wei de Meyer.

It it now undisputed that Wie Die Meyer's Catarrh Cure is the only treatment that will absolutely cure Catarrh—fresh or Chronic. "Very efficacious. Saml Gould, Weeping Water, Neb." One box cured me, Mrs. Mary Kenyon, Bismarck, Dakota." "It restored me to the pulpit, Rev. George E. Reis, Cobleville, N. Y." "One box radically cured me, Rev. C. H. Tahlor, 140 Noble street, Brooklyn." "A perfect cure after 30 years suffering, J. D. McDonald, 710 Broadway, N. Y., &c., &c. Thousands of testimonials are received from all parts of the world. Delivered, $1.00. Dr. Wei De Meyer's Illustrated Treatise," with statements of the cured, mailed free. D. B. Dewey & Co., 112 Fulton Street, N. Y.
