PATTI AT HOME. A Visit to the Castle Craig-y-Nos--The Diva as a Hostess.

Correspondence of San Francisco Chronicle. CASTLE CRAIG-NOS. SOUTH WALEN, MAY 12, 1884.

It was evening when we arrived here on Monday last, so that I was unable to do more than get an idea of the general appearance of Patti's Welsh home before dinner.

I have not had much experience in regal receptions, but I am sure a queen could not have been more heartily welcomed than Patti was by those whom she affectionately calls "her people."

As soon as Patti's carriage turned into the driveway a hand struck up "Home Sweet Home." The tears came into Patti's eyes then, and as I remembered her faraway singing at the Grand Opera-house and thought of the one or two things away off in San Francisco, I am not ashamed to confess that I saw everything through a blur for the next moment or two.

As soon as dinner was over rockets were sent up and there was begun a splendid display of fireworks which lasted until nearly midnight.

MUSICAL AND DRAMATIC. Miss Zola Seguin will star next season. Miss Etile Eliezer's starring tour will begin in Des Moines, July 31.

It is announced by cable that Anton Rubinstein will produce a new opera on an eastern subject in the Stadt Theatre, in Hamburg; next Autumn.

It is rumored that Miss Lillian Russell has been engaged by Manager John McNeill to create the title role in "Neil Gwynn" next season at the New York City.

At a recent performance of "Remo and Juliet" in Vienna, the Juliet, Fr. Wesely, while exchanging love sentiments with Romeo, who took in the situation, seated her noisily, so that her retreat was effected without breaking the continuity of the play.

There are 81,717 clergymen, and 17,307,878 church communicants in the United States. Forty thousand dollars have been subscribed for the erection of a new Baptist church in the city of Des Moines, Iowa.

The Lutheran church building about two miles from Madison Court House, Virginia, which was erected 134 years ago, and is known as the "Old Dutch Church," has been thoroughly renovated, and was recently re-dedicated.

It will cause intense sorrow to the many friends of Mr. Ira D. Sankey, the companion of Moody, that his restoration is deemed absolutely improbable. His voice will probably never again be heard.

Stilks of all styles are fashionable this summer. Steel buttons prevail largely among novelties. Jersey gloves are the rage with those of summer fancies.

Notwithstanding the extent and variety of the establishment, everything goes clockwork. The whole cast of speak of refinement, and what such an establishment as this is not run without considerable "help."

Coming home we had a full view of the castle. It is called, as you know, Craig-y-Nos, and is perched high up on a cliff mountain, reminding me strongly of the Tower of Babel.

The castle is nearly at the top of this mountain, and is built after the common fashion of all Welsh castles, with low bastions, and what is called a curtain between--that is, a straight line of wall joining two semi-circular towers.

The castle contains twenty-two rooms, none of them very large, but all warm and cozy, as they should be in this climate. Patti's own is hung with blue silk, all the upholstery being to match, while attached to it is a little dressing-room that is complete enough in its appointments for a princeling.

The morning-room is also a "little beauty," but was chiefly attractive to me because it contained a picture of the poor late Duke of Albany, with his autograph across the top and a manly, modest letter begging Patti to accept of the picture as a return for one she had sent him.

The conservatory leads out from the dining-room proper and this in turn leads to the winter garden, which is a great beauty of the estate. This is a garden of great size, entirely covered in with grass and containing running fountains, graveled walks and rustic seats.
