Several Valuable Horses Have a Narrow Escape from Death.

The Circus Tents Laid Flat, Trees Broken, Races Spoiled and

Movables Scattered. The storm which struck Council Bluffs shortly after noon yesterday proved a serious one. The heaviest damage was that at the driving park and fair grounds where the large and beautiful building known as Floral Temple was laid low and all broken into pieces, making a terrible wreck. The building was put up two years ago at an expense of about $7,000, and was the finest exposition building for the displays of art, fruit, flowers, etc., owned by any fair association in the state. It consisted of two sections, crossing in the center, the extent of each being 80 by 150 feet, and the whole surmounted by a tower, making a very attractive building, indeed. It now lays a complete wreck. The west wing was first caught by the wind, the doors flying open, and the wind getting a chance at the inside, and speedily bringing it all down. There were a number of very valuable horses in the building, but most of these were removed. Still, when the building went down with a crash, there were several horses inside of it, among them Velox, horses inside of it, among them Velox, the celebrated Denver horse who the day

On Tuesday evening the marriage of little pacing mare, which created so much enthusiasm in the previous day's races, and for which he has been offered $2,500, was also in the wreck. Dr. Wade Cary had his valuable sorrel mare in the building and Bill Lacy had his horse and buggy. When the building went with a crash it was of course supposed that these horses must have been killed or at least badly hurt, but they all posed that these norses must have been killed or at least badly hurt, but they all managed to escape any serious injury, though the escape was miraculous. Col. Daily's mare had a heavy timber resting across her, but when got out was found lowing were among the gifts on the occa-

The timber in being moved slipped and one end fell upon his arm, breaking it in two places. The buggy belonging to Bill Lacy was smashed in the wreck, but his horse escaped injury, and when released by his whinner spoke, as plainly as in words, his joy at getting out. It is a matter of congratulation that no more serious hurt was done to man or to beast, but the loss of the building is a heavy one to the society, there being no tornado insurance on it, and the whole being a complete wreck.

Neil Voorhis, just before the full force of the storm struck the building, was on the roof getting down the flags, of which there were a number, one of Ireland, one of Germany, etc. He felt the building quaking while he was upon the roof, but got down in ample time by making haste.

there were a number, one of Ireland, one of Germany, etc. He felt the building quaking while he was upon the roof, but got down in ample time by making haste. The wind also struck the north end of the amphitheatre with force enough to tear off about fifteen feet of the roof, carrying part of it across the track and the other part clear off to the west. Some of the cattle sheds and a sheep pens were ripped up, turned over, and scattered about, but the long line of stables were not injured. The boarding tent was of course thrown down, one of the entrance gates to the grounds was blown off, and lighter movables were scattered about promiscously.

A suckling colt, which has been pastured on the driving park, had a leg badly broken.

The rain tell in torrents also, and the track was flooded with water, but it is thought that if the sun does its expected share of the work, the track will be in condition to-day for the races to be given. It, has been arranged for yeater-day's races to come off to-day, and if there is any time left then the events on the programme announced for to-day will be taken up, Considering the heavy loss which has fallen on the association, every body who has complimentaries should toss them aside and prehase tickets, and those who have not thought of attending the races should tons them aside and prehase tickets, and those who have not thought of attending the races and the race was loud turn out, so the complementaries should toss them aside and prehase tickets, and those who have nor thought of attending the races and the race was louding the tested and the storm struck a little later, when the tent would have been filled with men, women and children.
