Departure of the Wagner Singers for their Homes in Europe.
From the New York Evening Post.
An immense crowd assembled on the steamer Elbe on the pier of the North German Lloyd in Hoboken at noon today. Besides the usual large number of passengers at this time of the year there was a special attraction in the person of a number of people famous in the musical world. Among them were Mr. Theodore Thomas, Mr. and Mrs. George Henschel, Miss Emma Juch, Herr Scaria, Herr Winkelman and Frau Materna. Herr Friedrich, having incautiously retained his own patronymic instead of adopting the maternal one, was placed far away from his wife on the printed passenger list. Conspicuous among those who came to say good-bye to these artists were the figures of Mr. Steinway, Mr. Remmert, Mr. Locke and Mr. Floerheim. Mr. Thomas is going to Switzerland to rest after his prolonged season, which was probably the busiest and most arduous one of his whole life. He will also attend a few of the performances of the Wagner Bayreuth, which he has not heard, and join his family whom he left abroad last summer. Nothing definitely can be stated as yet concerning a rumored project of giving German opera next season. The difficulty lies less in securing good singers and a good orchestra than in getting a suitable house. But if the demand for German Opera continues as strong as it has this year all obstacles will in course of time be overcome.

All the Wagner singers are as robust and energetic as ever, notwithstanding their hard work. Herr Winkelman has received a good impression of America, but would not like to return unless he could appear in opera. He does not regret the hard work, however, which has taken the place of his usual summer vacation; for, like his colleagues, he is an ardent missionary of the Wagnerian cause, which he feels convinced has been greatly promoted by this year's tour. Frau Materna was quite as demonstrative as ever in her expressions of admiration for America and the Americans. But she did not appreciate the constant travel, and remarked that she felt like a piece of baggage all the time—packed up after each concert, dispatched by special train, and unpacked again next day just in time for another concert. She enjoyed herself more in the cities where a whole week's festival was given. Among these was Chicago, in regard to which she is especially enthusiastic. She never heard such good choral singing in her life as there, she says, and she especially admired the exquisite purity of intonation with which the pilgrims' chorus from "Tannhauser" was sung there. She also appreciated very much the receptions accorded her and the serenade of the Chicago male chorus sung at midnight here. Herr Friedrich tells this story of Materna, which shows that she always keeps her eyes—rather her ears—open for the benefit of her art: While at Cincinnati she went to hear the Christie Minstrel's one evening. Among the performers was one whose voice gave her so much pleasure that she begged to be introduced to him. She urged him to study for the stage, as he could not fail to become a famous artist. Subsequently she spoke about him to a New York opera manager who happened to be on the spot, and before she left Cincinnati she had arranged for his engagement for her next season.

Herr Scaria, who is a genuine man of the world, was in a very communicative mood. While Materna is first going to pay a two days visit to Vienna, he goes directly to Bayreuth. Although he has sung in fifty-five concerts, his voice is as sonorous as ever. He thinks that this summer's festival at Bayreuth, which will last from July 21 to August 8, will be the last for several years. He expects to see many of his American admirers there, as last year at the last two performances almost all the seats were taken by Americans. He does not believe the rumor that an American had offered $250,000 for the exclusive right to produce Parsifal. He thinks the widow would have accepted such a sum, as her income from his operatic operas amounts to only about $17,000 a year out of which, too, some commissions (and probably debts) have to be paid. In case any manager should undertake to give German opera in America his advice would be to give only Rienzi, Flying Dutchman, Faust, and Lohengrin and Metastaser. The Wagner he would postpone for while until the popular taste had been properly educated by the earlier works to appreciate it at its true value. He was gratified to see so much appreciation as was shown for the extracts given during the present tour, and thinks the Americans have an advantage over Europeans in not having to dispose of so many volumes of prejudice. There is no antagonism, he thinks, between the lyric and dramatic styles of singing, only the latter requires more culture for its appreciation, as it appeals more to the intellect and the emotions than to the ear for beautiful sound alone. Being asked to give his private opinion of Mr. Thomas as a conductor, he became quite enthusiastic in praise of him: "It was as if we had been together all our lives. We had no concessions to make to him and he had none to make to us, but our conception of the Wagner music was identical throughout. Indeed, for a man who has never heard some of these works on the stage, his intelligence and art of interpretation is most remarkable, and gave evidence of real genius."

PLAYING POKER.
The Kentucky Court of Appeals Decides a Case of Interest to Gamblers.
A case which has attracted much attention in Kentucky and other states was decided by the court of appeals in a Frankfort, Kentucky, appeal. The style of the case is Moore vs. Settle, an appeal from the decision of the superior court, which affirmed the judgment of the Owen circuit court. The facts in the case are about as follows: Mrs. Settle, the appellant, and wife of Evan F. Settle, a well known lawyer of Owen, brought suit against Moore, alleging that in 1879 he won from her husband at games of cards and sought to recover thereat that amount under the provisions of the Kentucky statutes which provide that if the loser or a creditor of the loser of money won at games of hazard or chance do not sue within six months after the loss for the money lost and prosecute the suit to recover with due diligence, then any other person may sue the winner and recover the amount or value of the money or thing lost if the suit be brought within five years from the delivery or payment.

Moore, in his answer to Mrs. Settle's petition, pleaded that Mrs. Settle was married, living with her husband, alleging that the action was not concerning her separate property, nor an action concerning her general property, in which her husband failed to unite, and that she had not legal capacity to sue alone, and denying the winning of the money. Mrs. Settle replied in her amended answer that the action was concerning her private property, or, if not that, it was concerning her general property, and that her husband refused to join her in the action. She also alleged that her husband's interest was adverse to her's and made him a defendant in the suit. Moore then filed an amended reply, making it a cross-petition against Evan F. Settle, denying that Settle's interest was adverse to his wife's, alleging that the husband had instigated and was secretly prosecuting the action against him, in the name of his wife for the purpose of recovering in her name triple the amount he could recover in his name. Mrs. Settle and her husband replied separately denying the allegations of Moore's amended answer. E. F. Settle was the chief witness for plaintiff, his wife, and a judgment was rendered against Moore for $775, from which decision he appealed. The supreme court affirmed the decision and Moore again appealed to the court of appeals which reverses the decision of the supreme court. The sporting fraternity have watched the case with much interest. The money was lost at a game of poker.

Malarial Poison.
ROME, GA., May 23, 1883.
With the hope that the case of other sufferers, I desire to make a statement of my case and my wonderful rescue from death from malarial blood poison by the use of the great S. S. S. Switzer's Specific.
In 1880 I came from the North to take charge of the gas works in Rome, as superintendent, and after the overflow, which occurred in the spring following, I was very much exposed to malarial poison, and in 1882 found my blood so contaminated with the poison that I was unable to do any work. I was treated by the Rome physicians without relief, they advising me to go North, which I did. The doctors North told me that my only hope was to return to the milder climate, and accordingly I came back to Rome, completely broken down and nearly a skeleton. My trouble finally determined in the liver, and I thought I was doomed to die within a few days. In this condition I was advised by a friend to take Switzer's Specific, and I took it just as a drowning man would catch at a straw, but as soon as my system got under the influence of the remedy, the aches came to a point and I was able to get up at my work, and have since enjoyed excellent health.

Every sufferer from malarial poison should take Switzer's Specific. C. G. SPENCER, Sup't. Rome Gas Light Co.

Governor Stanford's Memorial.
New York Herald.
Ex-Governor Stanford, of California, who is spending a few weeks here, was seen at the Windsor hotel recently by a Herald reporter. His only son, Leland, died in Florence, Italy, in 1879, and the governor intends to erect a memorial to him that shall perpetuate his memory and at the same time prove a boon to generations yet to come. At his home in Palo Alto, Governor Stanford will found a university and colleges for both sexes. His estate is a large one, and he said he would build a school for boys and one for girls at least a mile apart in which primary and preparatory instruction will be given for the university course. Technological departments will also be added, so that graduates will have some trade, calling or profession carried them through life. "I am staying here," Governor Stanford said, "to study the college systems of the east. I have hardly been inside of a college since I left one, a graduate, over forty years ago. Great improvements have taken place in educational systems and facilities since. Still, I think some of our colleges have not advanced any from the customs in vogue in the fifteenth century. I have been to Harvard and Yale. I shall visit Cornell University after President White comes back from Chicago. I'll run up to Middletown and take a look at the new building, and then to Hopton. His sons and Washington before I go home. I want to get all the light I can from the best sources of information in the country. I am particularly anxious to learn about the education of girls, for it seems to me more important that the wives and mothers of the future be educated equally with the husbands and sons. Indeed, the most critical period of a child's life is that which is spent with the mother before it even goes to school at all."

The governor said he really had nothing to state about his plans. He did not want to have anything said about it because it looked like seeking notoriety, which he desired to avoid. But he had to visit educators and educational institutions in the interest of his purpose he could not keep that purpose secret. He would be glad, he said, to give the press the information and his own observations. He will return to California in two or three weeks, and as soon as he can afterward he will begin work. The cost and capacity of his college and university system he could not tell, but he designed to make it equal to any in the United States.

Nick Bell for Reading Clerk.
St. Louis, July 4.—Nicholas M. Bell, of St. Louis, who is proposed as reading clerk of the domestic national convention, has acquired great fame as a reader, and ranks higher than any other man in this country in convention work. His voice is clear and resonant as his own name, and his articulation so distinct that he always makes himself thoroughly heard. He is a large, well-proportioned man, Mr. Bell is a perfect treasure. All the newspaper correspondents, learning of his presence here to-day, called on the national committee and recommended his immediate retention as reading clerk, no matter what it cost. A Chronicle reporter found Mr. Bell quietly seated in the rotunda of the Leland today, smoking a cigar. He is a senior member of the firm of N. M. Bell & Co., contractors for paving streets and pavements. His first success at public reading were achieved in the Missouri state convention and the legislature but at the national convention of 1878 he came into national reputation, which time his services have been in demand. He was reading clerk of the Cincinnati convention, which nominated Hancock. The republican national convention offered him $500 to read for their convention last month, but being a democrat Mr. Bell stipulated that it should be announced that he was hired. This was necessarily refused, and the convention had a rough time with its readers.

"Have you any particular rule of living while engaged in public reading?" said the Chronicle man to Mr. Bell.
"Certainly. Abstemiousness, temperance and raw eggs. You won't give it away?"
"Never! No, never!"
"Well, this is my last cigar until after the convention. To-night I shall take five grains of calomel and five grains of carbonate of soda, avoiding all exercise. On Sunday morning I shall begin my diet of coffee and three raw eggs, which can only be deviated from at an early breakfast, when a small piece of rare steak is permissible."
"But nearly all singers claim that beer will clear the throat, and tone the voice."
"I know that, but it's nonsense. Beer may momentarily assist the voice, but the end will be to break it down. I abstain from liquors of all kinds for a very reason. The best remedy I ever found for hoarseness and the best agent for clearing the throat, is bicarbonate of soda. Its effect is instantaneous and permanent. When reading from day to day I find it absolutely necessary to retire early—say 8 o'clock—in a secluded, noiseless place, where perfect rest for mind and body can be obtained. There, now, are all my rules. Go thou and do likewise."
Mr. Bell to-day by invitation accompanied the national committee to the hall to note the accoustics, but laughed at the suggestion to "test" an empty building.
