The Reception to the Visiting Firemen Attended by 2,000 People.

The grand event of the firemen's tournament took place yesterday forenoon. It was in the shape of a procession, a finer one than which was never witnessed in the city of Omaha or in the state of Nebraska. Long before the time appointed for the procession to form, the streets along which it was to pass, as announced in THE BEE, were thronged with crowds of men, women and childen. Anxious mammas, with their young hopefuls, were on hand in large numbers and it was a continued struggle between them. The young hopeful insisted upon being in the very front of the crowd that he might better see the great elephant as he passed in all of his majestic greatness, while the fond mother, anxious for the safety of the young hopeful, insisted on keeping him by her side. It is needless to say, that the boy came off victorious and stood upon the curbstone. The shady side of the street was sought but there was not shade enough for

THE ENORMOUS CROWD,

And thousands of them stood out in the glare of the burnrng sun, many of them being unprotected even by an umbrella.

All morning long bands were playing and columns of uniformed firemen were marching and countermarching through the streets, while the perspiration flowed down their faces and dropped in great quantities upon the ground. Everybody was good-natured and not a single word was heard that could in any way mar the pleasure and happiness of all. Truly it was, in every respect,

A GALA DAY FOR OMAHA.

Since the foundation walls of the city were built a larger, jollier, and in every way showier crowd, has not invaded her boundaries.

Some little delay in forming the procession was occasioned by the trains bringing visiting firemen to the city being belated, but all took the delay good-naturedly and the time thus spent did not drag heavily on their hands. In Falconers hall, the headquaaters, the firemen spent the time in making each others acquaintance, and relating instances where their nerve had been put to the test and where they had successfully BATTLED WITH THE FIERY DEMON.

As they talked their faces became radiant with excitement, as they fought again, in words, the many hot battles of the past.

At ten o'clock the order was given to fall into line, and such another line was never formed upon the streets of Omaha. Chief Butler had command, ably assisted by Assistant Chief Galligan, D. S. Mitchell, and several others, and the work of forming the procession was soon accomplished. It was formed on Douglas, the right resting on Fourteenth street. At last the order was given and at this time the procession was fully one mile in length, and as far as the eye could see, gaily dressed firemen, gorgeously arrayed musicians, flying flags, and banners, and glittering fire apparatus met the gaze.

It was a surprise party even to those who had put the brightest face upon the affair, and all stood in wonder and amazement as the gorgeous pageant passed before them in glittering panoramic review.

THE PROCESSION.

The procession was headed by a dozen or more carriages containing the members of the city council, honorary members of the fire department, and members of the press. Following this came a body of policemen, followed by the Union Pacific band. After this came the firemen, appaaatus, etc.

In the procession were five bands, all of which in turn discoursed sweet music.

The procession moved down Farnam street to Tenth, and down Tenth to Jackson. As they were marching down Tenth they were met by the Seward and Fremont fire companies, headed by the Seward cornet band, and the Rescue and Vaughan hose companies from Council Bluffs, headed by the Bavarian band. The visiting boys countermarched and fell in line, a place being made for them and this addition greatly increased the size of the already enormous body of marching men.

The line of march was then taken up Jackson to Thirteenth, north on Thirteenth to Dodge, west on Dodge to Sixteenth, north on Sixteenth to Webster, where they countermarched and went back to Falconer's hall, where they broke ranks.

Never were men more glad to rest than were those who had marched through the whole journey from the start to the finish. Under the heavy dress parade shirts were bodies while from under the heavy hats the water run in streams. It is wonderful and very fortunate that someone in the long column was not overcome with the heat, but no such sad misfortune befel any of the party.

THE DECORATIONS.

The decorations of the fire apparatus in the line were very fine. The finest, doubtless, was that of hose company No. 2. Upon their cart was a magnificent horse-shoe, about eighteen inches in height and made of natural flowers. It was composed of large quantities of tube roses and other fragrant blossoms and was presented to the boys by a lady friend who holds the members of the company in very high esteem. It was a fine present and every blossom is cherished by the members of No. 2, as sacred. Long after the flowers have lost their sweetness and the petals have fallen from the stem the boys will remember the giver with grateful hearts.

The hook and ladder truck was very tastily decorated with flags and festoons of oak leaves hanging from the sides. The engines were trimmed up in good shape and the bright metal was polished until the bright sun reflected from their sides presented a dazzling brightness painful to look upon without smoked glass. The engine from Council Bluffs was drawn by four horses and was appropriately trimmed. The Durant engine was also propelled by the aid of four powerful horses.

THE DURANT HOSE COMPANY

was, without doubt, the finest appearing body of men in the procession. They were of uniform size and marched with heads erect and a military tread which at once told of drill and discipline. The Plattsmouth company presented a fine appearance and were headed by a finely uniformed band, the B. & M. In fact, every company in the procession is entitled to great credit for the manner in which they were uniformed and for the training which they have had under efficient captains and foremen.

In the whole procession there was no feature which added more to the success of the affair than the Musical Union band. This organization discoursed a number of new and beautiful selections which were thoroughly appreciated.

THE STREETS.

The streets through which the procession passed presented a holiday appearance. From business houses and dwellings flags and bunting were flying, while many had gone to a great deal of expenses in having scaffolds erected which were covered with boughs, and when compared with the hot and dusty pavements looked like fairy bowers on an oasis in a desert spot.

Taken as a whole it was a grand event and one of which the firemen and citizens of Omaha may well be proud and when months and years have rolled by they can look back to this day with not a feeling other than that of pride and satisfaction.

Afternoon.

From one to three o'clock yesterda afternoon Sixteenth street was crowded with hacks and carriages carrying their human freight to the tournament grounds. The several companies did not go out in procession, but each one went to the grounds at the time and in the manner it saw fit, some not putting in an appearance until three o'clock.

The contests to take place as arranged by the programme were the green race, or the one for teams which never had contested, and the state championship hose race. The great feature of the afternoon's entertainment was the latter, but owing to the fact that many of the visiting firemen had been fatigued by the long and hot parade of the forenoon, the board of control of the association saw fit to postpone this contest until today, it being placed first upon the programme. A gentle protest was entered against this change by some of the managers but when the board of control stood firm, they succumbed to the inevitable.

The green race was to have been called at three o'clock, but the entered teams were late in appearing and nothing was done until nearly four. The entries in this race were the Cleland Hose company of Fremont, the Deluge company of Omaha, and the Nebraska City No. 1. Lots were cast for their order in the race and the Cleland's drew first, the Deluge second and Nebraska City third. The distance to be run was 200 yards, besides laying 300 feet of hose, breaking and making a hose coupling. The judges were Matt Benner, of Chicago, and Chief Templeton, of the Bluffs, and A. Bruegger, of Chicago. A. B. Crere, of Iowa City, and R. C. Johnson, of Des Moines, were appointed time keepers.

THE FREMONT TEAM.

The Fremont team was composed: H. D. Brooks, captain; John Thompson, coupler; G. A. Dierks, foreman and H. J. Dierks, assistant, and Henry Burman, August Fuchs, Adolph Peterson, Gil. Byorth, Tom Gorman. E. J. Rogers. Fremont House, Frank Hoaglend, A. P. Anderson, Swan Peterson and C. H. Herre, runners. At fifteen minutes to four the gong sounded and the Fremont team was in position 800. yards west of the grand stand.

The team got a good start and came down to the finish like professionals, and made most easy and very quick coupling. The friends of the Freemonters loudly cheered them for their fine work. Time 47½ seconds.

THE DELTGE HOSE TEAM.

This team is one of recent organization and only last Sunday celebrated its first anniversary. It has many friends in South Omaha and is the protege in some degree of a couple of Omaha's officials, who were present at the race. Its leader was William Shmyler, Gus. Williams, Sam. Dillon, Grant Watson, J. O'Byrne, Otto Neiderweisr, William Croft, William Baxter, Tom Roe, Henry Snyder, Will Redfield and Dick Wiberg as runners with Andy Johnson coupler and Fred Pilaeging as captain. By mistake the boys started without the signal and ran to the finish, making the coupling. The judges decided not to call it a race, and it was put over for the last thing for the day.

NEBRASKA CITY, NO. 1.

This team was composed of Mart Golden, captain, Robert James coupler W. W. Lasher, William Schelinger, Anthony Holland, Anthony Hesling, Ellick Simpson, White Hanley, Orr Hanley, Charles Barr, Charles Trail, Chris. Anderson, Daniel Huff, Harvey Hann and John Copeland. The runners started very slow and were very unfortunate in making the coupling. Time 52½ seconds.

THE COUPLING CONTEST.

Next came the coupling contest in which there were six entries; Thompson and Burman of the Clelands of Fremont, Webb and Steele of the John M. Thurstons, James and Austin of the Lincoln Fitzgeralds, Golden and James of the Nebraska City's, Schlodtfieldt and Hockenberger of the Grand Islands, and Williams and Pilaeging of the Deluge company of Omaha. The order of the contest was the Deluge couplers first, Grand Island second, Fremont third, Nebraska City fourth, Lincoln fifth, and John M. Thurstons last.

The feat to be performed in this contest was to break a coupling of 1½ threads and attach a nozzle to one end of the hose, fastening it by the same number of turns. Three trials were to be given the contestants and the one having the lowest average to win the prize. Grand Island's time was 3 1-16 seconds, Fremont's 2½, Nebraska City's 3½. The Lincoln couplers on their second attempt failed to make the requisite thread and a half withdrew. The time of the John M. Thurston couplers was one and seven-eights seconds. The Deluges withdrew before the contest began. The first prize was accordingly awarded to Webb and Steele.

THE GREEN RACE FINISH.

The Deluge company which by this time had recovered from its race was ordered to get into position. The word was given and the team made a good start. When nearly half the distance had been made one of the runners was seized with cramps and unharnessing himself fell out of the team which ran to the finish. The couplers failed to make the proper connection and no time was given to the team. The Fremonts were given first money, Nebraska City second and Grand Island third.

This concluded the day's entertainment at the fair ground.

MR. BOYD SAID:

"The exceedingly pleasant task has been given to me of welcoming you, the firemen of this and adjoining states, to our young and, to us, our beautiful city. I assure you that although I have participated in numerous prominent receptions in Omaha, both officially as its mayor and unofficially as now, a private citizen, I have never felt more honored by being called upon to say the words of welcome than I do on this occasion. It is a very difficult task for us at home to tell how we appreciate our own gallant firemen. Other localities are just as willing to recognize true worth and merit; so, when they send their bravest sons here to join ours in the innocent yet most practical features of this tournament, they would know how our hearts are opened up to the visitors; how each and every citizen of Omaha is most anxious to give greeting to those who have come from without its walls to pass away a few hours in praiseworthy, friendly contest for preferment and supremacy. Yet, gentlemen, when we say welcome, thrice welcome, you must remember that during your stay we look upon you as part and parcel of our own fire department in every meed of honor we can bestow, every mark of esteem we can give, every sign of substantial recognition we can make, and every welcoming hand we can extend." Mr. Boyd related at some length the duties and perils of fireman, and concluded by invoking the firemen to remember that they were regarded as the greatest heros in peace and so considered by their friends who regarded no laurel wreath too honorable to place upon their brows.

Mr Boyd was followed by Colonel Smyth and Hon. J. M. Thurston who kept the crowd in continued laughter by their witty allusions. This completed the entertainment proper for the day. Chief Butler announced that the great coupling contest would take place immediately after the meeting's adjournment, in the Academy of Music, and invited all to witness it. But few, however, attended and it was deemed best to postpone it until this evening.

The Plattsmouthers in Omaha.

The Plattsmouth Journal charges that the managers of the park where the home club played last week gouged them out of their portion of the receipts, and pictures the feeling of the boys in the following:

"Although a fair crowd was present at each game the total gate receipts were $47, due to the fact that a large proportion of the spectators entered on season tickets, for which our club got nothing. But this is not all. When the last game was over, and when the boys had but a moments left them in which to catch the train for home, they went to the manager of the park to settle up. This important personage figured up the receipts at $47, and the boys were just preparing to pocket half of that sum when the manager informed them that he had spent $24 in advertising the games, $6 for the distribution of them by small boys, and the remainder for local in the papers. It was evident that he had a gouge game prepared for the boys and when they got away from him they were inclined to be thankful for even the $11 50 they were awarded for their share of the three days' games. They had begun to fear that he would figure it some way so as to bring them out in debt to him. The Plattsmouth nine and their friends came away very warm, and are determined to so advertise their treatment by the park management that no other club in the state will ever be taken in by them."
