MASSSED IN A PARADE.

The Grand Army of the Republic Demonstration in Minneapolis at Its Zenith.

A Military Pageant With Eight Thousand Veterans of the Late War in Line.

An Hundred Thousand Visitors Crowd the City—Uproarious Enthusiasm.

St. Paul Pioneer Press, July 24. The demonstration on behalf of, and by, the Grand Army of the Republic reached its zenith yesterday. The crowd of humanity that pressed into every nook and cranny on Tuesday night was augmented yesterday by the rear guard of the Grand Army boys, delayed in reaching the city by the immense traffic imposed upon the railroads.

To this number were added large delegations from the neighboring cities, towns and surrounding country. The parade itself with its 7,500 in line gave the first index to the number of old soldiers in the city. The roster of many of the departments demonstrate that only about one-half of the number in attendance upon the re-union participated in the parade.

Measured by comparison with the people who were in the city at the demonstration of the Villard Northern Pacific demonstration the crowd was considerably larger. Then the full display made in parade was observable only on two or three streets, and on these the people were packed in a solid mass.

The outgoing trains that evening bore many of them to their homes, and although there is to be no end to the reunion before Friday night, the crowd has begun to diminish. Very many of the visitors propose to extend their visit into next week, but the crush that has been gathering reached its climax yesterday.

MUSIC UNCEASING. The bands, about twenty in number, not including the drum corps, seem to enter into the zest of the thing. The blare of their trumpets is not confined to the marching. Serenades and parades upon their individual account add to the wealth of music. Most of it is good and some of it has been a very interesting feature of the Grand Army, and it is very much questioned whether the like will again be witnessed. The crowd now includes very many weary people, but they are none the less an exceptionally good natured crowd, who find something to nerve up upon in the prevailing excitement.

CANDOR COMPELS THE ADMISSION that yesterday's throng of people was a thirsty crowd. All the principal bar-rooms did an enormous business. Double rows of drinkers pressed forward and vainly endeavored to promptly catch the eye of the bar-keeper, who even dispensed with the usual parade of personal admiration before the great mirrors. Beer was drawn without regard to immediate call, and kept ready in the glasses for the unceasing demand. Mixed drinks were given none of the extra touches, even were they to be had at all. The drinkers stuck pretty steadily to beer—especially the lower end—and to lemonade. It was a convivial crowd, but not a drunken crowd. The haphazard conversation ran something like this: "Well," with an emphasis that left no doubt of heartiness, "How are you?" "Don't remember me!" "I was in—regiment, company—, My name is—, you've heard of me, you should have known you. By Jove, I'm glad to see you. Let's go take something." A slap on the back, a fresh and fierce grip of the hand, or a shake that threatened to wrench an arm from its socket were the usual punctuation points of the reiterated conversation heard on every hand. A large measure of the liquid that was poured in came out through the pores, and wilted and stained linen was a distinguishing characteristic.

THE EVENT OF YESTERDAY—and for the week for that matter—was the parade to see which many people came long distances, and were not disappointed. The torrid heat somewhat thinned the ranks, but the pageant probably contained the largest number of veterans ever seen together on this continent since the close of the war. The procession was formed in six divisions, and commenced to take their places at 9 o'clock.

IT WAS HALF PAST TEN when the column began to move down the line of march, but the crowd stood patiently awaiting the advancing column, and were abundantly repaid for their display of patience. The line of march was as follows: Line of march up Tenth street to Hennepin avenue, down Hennepin avenue to Bridge square, up Nicollet street to Seventh street, down Seventh street to Sixth avenue south, then up to First avenue south, First avenue south to First street, thence to Bridge square.

ON THE LINE OF MARCH. On the line of march as advertised, the crowds began to gather as early as 8 o'clock, long before even the advance guard of the procession had begun to form. Many a house top was crowded with people anxious to witness the grand spectacle, and the brilliancy of the decorations of the buildings was enhanced by their windows which were crowded with visions of beautiful faces, in settings of nebulous lace and creamy muslin. The crowd on the streets can't be described. It is to be remembered that not only was there the ten thousand which are to be seen on Minneapolis streets every day...

THE ENTHUSIASM. The size of the crowd was only equalled by its enthusiasm. The atmosphere was charged with it as with electricity, and citizen and comrade were alike affected by it.

HEROES AND VIED with each other who should do the most who passed by. The old Minnesota volunteers were another feature that roused like wise the Minnesota volunteers.

THE EVENING FESTIVITIES. The camp had been gradually filling up with a miscellaneous multitude all afternoon, and by evening the crowd was simply immense, making any attempt at an estimate of the number the most guess work.

A MEMORABLE SCENE. Among the many great and memorable sights and scenes of the day and week, unquestionably the most imposing and overwhelming was the sight of the vast unbroken mass of specimens of the vast homo. Viewed from the judge's stand the outlook was such as no adjective does any sort of justice to.

SOLID COMFORT. Every one likes to take solid comfort and it may be enjoyed by every one who keeps Kidney-Wot in the house and takes a few doses at the first symptoms of an attack of Malaria, Rheumatism, Biliousness, Jaundice and other ailments of the Liver, Kidneys or Bowels.

AT A CHICAGO HOTEL. "And now how many people did you see here?" asked the reporter of the manager of the Palmer house.

FATHER AND DAUGHTER. She had just returned from Vassar, and papa was stroking her hair fondly. "That hope, my dear," said any of the vulgar slang phrases which are so many of the Vassar young ladies are said to use.

LETTER FROM SENATOR JACOBS. SENATE CHAMBER. ALBANY, N. Y., March 31st, 1882. For a long time it has been my habit to use Bradstreet's Pills. In fact I have seldom had occasion to use any other medicine, and it affords me great pleasure to say that for Biliousness, Dyspepsia, and the other ills of the system, to which men in public life are more apt than others to be subject, they are an invaluable remedy.

THE MULLIGAN OFF SET.

Mr. Blaine and Mrs. Mulligan at the Picnic.

To the Editor of THE BEE: What is this dirty story again? around about the "Mulligan letters" that Mister Blaine jirked out of the hands of one Jimmy Murphy and stuck in the fire, the dirty divils of dimocrats in our ward are circulate the story that Mister Blaine took Mrs. Mulligan to a picknick in the absence of Mr. Mulligan while he was teaching school in his younger days in Maine and took liberties with her while they were dancing an old Irish jig.

2,000 MILES IN A MINIATURE BOAT.

The interesting experience of a Darting Voyager in Southern Waters.

"I built that boat myself in Sanford, Fla., last December, and since then have traveled nearly 2,000 miles in it. I have sailed and slept in it, and there are the sleeping apartments of myself and crew."

Mr. Hees gave an interesting account of his travels. "I started from Sanford in December, and followed the St. John's river to Lake Harney. I then had the boat hauled overland a distance of eight miles to the Indian river, which runs parallel with the ocean. I struck the Lucia river, and thence through Jupiter sound to Jupiter inlet. There I procured the services of a half-breed Indian to pilot me through the mangroves, a distance of twenty-eight miles, to Lake Worth. I returned by the same route back to Kock Lodge, on the Indian river, and again I had the boat carried three miles across the country to Lake Poinsett, the head of navigation on the St. John's river, and 105 miles from Lake Harney. The only inhabitants of that section were alligators.
