

THE DAILY BEE.

Tuesday Morning, July 29.

LOCAL BREVITIES.

The little Shamrocks defeated the Council Bluffs Qs. Sunday by a score of 14 to 3.

District Attorney Godwin had Jack Kinney up for trial again yesterday, having neglected to arraign him upon his trial a few days since.

James Murphy, who was arraigned on Saturday and pleaded not guilty to the charge of petit larceny, was yesterday found guilty of the same and was sentenced by Judge Bencke to thirty days in the county jail on bread and water.

Lon Prince, the disorderly woman who attempted to commit suicide a short time ago by taking morphine, died last evening of Ninth and Doble from the effects of the drug.

This afternoon at four o'clock, Ed. Campbell, of this city, a member of the John M. Thurston horse company, will run a hundred yard race with Archie McCombs, of the Bluffs, for $100 a side.

Harry Cremer, referred to in yesterday morning's Bee, says in his own defense that the check drawn by himself was all right and would have been paid had it been taken to the bank within a reasonable time.

It was reported yesterday that the case of sunstroke on Thompson's farm Friday was a little strange, and that the deceased had some money prior to his death, but that none can be found now.

Daniel Kohn, who resides between Pacific and Dimes and Sixth and Seventh, has been sick for over a year and is totally unable to work.

The Journal says it is settled that the Lincoln branch of the Western Newspaper Union is not to move from that city to Omaha.

The Union Pacific base ball club left yesterday for a week's trip west. They will play two games at Plum Creek, two games at Columbus and two games at North Platte.

Mr. Hunting Barnes, the veteran horseman of West Union, Iowa, is represented by a very life-like portrait in the Police Gazette of last week.

Boyd's opera house is undergoing a thorough cleaning and repairing from cellar to garret and when it is ready to open, which will be about the middle of next month, it will be in excellent shape.

PEISONAL.

J. A. Daniels, Takamaka, is at the Metropolitan.

Henry Johnson, of Wahoo, is at the Metropolitan.

Shaf Kautzman, of Edgar, is at the Metropolitan.

J. J. Gibson, of Lincoln, is quartered at the Metropolitan.

W. M. Burdick, of David City, is stopping at the Metropolitan.

Lero E. A. Shilley, editor of the Humboldt Sentinel, is in the city.

Enll McCloud left for the west yesterday for a little pleasure trip.

James Robinson, of Grand Island, is sojourning at the Metropolitan.

H. Collins and wife, of Lincoln, are stopping at the Metropolitan.

J. S. Kieff and family, of Fullerton, are stopping at the Metropolitan.

Hon. T. M. Marquette, yesterday, came up from Lincoln on public business.

Mr. James W. Garneau has returned from a two weeks trip through the west.

Mr. R. W. Beckenkamp has returned from a two weeks trip through the west.

F. Sturtevant, one of the pioneers and ex-treasurers of Nance county, came down from Fullerton yesterday on business.

F. E. Brown, Syracuse; William S. Randall and wife, Fairfield; Hon. Robert Furness, Brownville; L. J. Howers, Osceola, and James Peabody, registered yesterday at the Paxton.

Hon. Charles F. Manderson, of Omaha, arrived at the Ocean View hotel, Block B, Island, last Thursday. We expect to hear a good word from him soon in the piscatorial line.

D. W. Syford and J. H. Whitmore, Lincoln; J. H. Johnson and wife, Blair; J. W. Pearson, Nebraska City; J. H. High and wife, Kearney; Eugene Moore and wife, West Point; and J. H. McConnell, North Platte were guests of the Millard yesterday.

Will Millard, formerly of the Omaha National bank, of this city, has gone to Blair to accept the position of cashier of the first national bank of that place.

Will Not Speed at the Fair. The state board of agriculture has been corresponding for some time past with J. C. Case, the owner of the great horse Jay-Eye-See, with a view of securing his attendance at the state fair in September to give an exhibition of his wonderful animal's speed.

PAYING THE PRIZES.

The General Committee Holds a Meeting Last Evening to Pay the Awards.

The Prize in the State Championship Race Not to be Paid Until after the Next Meeting.

The general committee of the State Firemen's Association held a meeting last night at Firemen's Hall to settle up the business of last week's tournament.

The expenses of the tournament, so far as could be ascertained, were first calculated and amounted to nearly $1,250. The amount of money expended in prizes is $1,515. The receipts at the gate were $104, of the amphitheatre $45.45, of the ball $53; total $291.75.

It was reported by the subscription committee that between $1,900 and $2,000 had been collected, which with $500 to be donated by the city and several subscriptions still outstanding, will amount in all to $2,700.

A committee of three was appointed to dispose of the torch lights bought for the street parade.

The allowance of the awards made up by the board of control next came up. Every award was allowed until the committee came to that of state championship, when Pentzel objected to its allowance.

Mr. Houck stated he had conducted an able attorney upon the question of giving up those cart who said the cart became the property of the team winning it three years in succession, and if the Thurston was barred out of the race, the Thurston did not lose it. Mr. Butler and Mr. Griffin favored giving the Fitzgerald the $150. A motion was made that the prize, the $150 and the horse cart be awarded to the Fitzgeralds.

This motion was amended by laying it on the table for one week, which carried. Mr. Butler then gave notice that he would send the $150 to Lincoln to-day.

The prize for the free-for-all next came up, when Chief Butler moved that action upon this award take the same course as that of the state championship. This was amended by allowing the Thurston the prize and was carried.

Every bill against the association was allowed as presented. The general committee thinks the association will come out about even if all moneys subscribed are paid.

At the conclusion of the committee's work, Webb and Steele, of engine house No. 2, who won the state championship coupling match, came into the room and were presented with the badges offered as the prize.

The committee then adjourned.

Army Orders. Recruit John F. Reardon, enlisted at Fort Douglas, Utah, is assigned to company I, Sixth infantry.

Recruit John Linquist, enlisted at Fort Douglas, Utah, is assigned to company H, Sixth infantry.

Recruits George B. Gage and John Hanson, enlisted at Fort Omaha, Neb., are assigned to Light battery D, Fifth artillery.

Private Frank Miller, re-enlisted at Fort Omaha, Neb., is assigned to company K, Sixth infantry, and will be sent to the station of his regiment on the first favorable opportunity.

A DAY IN COURTS.

The Leading Tribunals Kept Busy Yesterday--Kinney Pleads Guilty.

Neil Austin Attempts to Secure Her Liberty by the Writ of Habeas Corpus.

In the district court before Judge Neville the motion to set aside the verdict in the case of the State against Jack Kinney, charged with shooting with intent to commit murder, was sustained.

The ground of this application was that the defendant had not been arraigned and had not pled to his indictment, the district attorney by inadvertence omitting this step in the proceedings. The attorneys for the defense proposed to the district attorney that their client should plead guilty and then be recommended to the mercy of the court by the prosecutor.

Kinney, on the convening of the afternoon session pleaded guilty to the indictment.

Before Judge Wesley the case of Willott against the Union Pacific railroad was on trial all day. The plaintiff in the suit sues to recover $20,000 as personal damages sustained while in the employ of the company. It appears from the petition that the plaintiff while engaged in removing the Union Pacific depot building at Norfolk had his right leg broken below the knee. He alleges the accident was caused by the defendant's negligence in not securing the building on jack screws properly.

After Judge Wakely had dismissed this suit for the day the argument on the application of Nellie Austin for a writ of habeas corpus was heard. It will be remembered that this applicant was arrested, charged with larceny of $35, and on preliminary examination before Judge Bencke, was held for grand larceny.

Before the case was heard in police court the defendant's attorneys N. J. Burnham, Esq., and William Sears, Esq., of the Bluffs, moved for a change of venue, which was denied. The petition raised by the petition for the issuance of the writ is that the police court has no jurisdiction to hear the case upon the file of the motion in that tribunal. The court took the matter under advisement until Thursday morning.

Police Court. Louis Stine, charged with an assault and battery upon Casey was put under bonds of $300, and not being able to furnish the same was remanded to the county jail.

The case of W. P. Elliot, charged with assault and battery was continued for thirty days. He gave bonds in the sum of $100.

Abraam Davis, for beating his mother was sent up for 60 days.

The case of Anderson, who is charged with disturbing the Celestials on Harney street about ten days ago was also continued.

A temporary injunction was granted late Saturday evening in this court on

TO BE TREASURED.

A Wonderful Piece of Tapestry From the Court of Louis XIV in an Omaha House.

In the parlors of Mr. Herman Kountze's residence is one of the rarest pieces of art to be seen anywhere in the west. It is nothing less than one of the Gobelin tapestries, which were among the costliest and richest of the adornments of the famous court of Louis XIV. It was the privilege of a Bux representative the other day to inspect the wonderful piece in Mr. Kountze's possession.

The tapestry hangs upon one of the walls of the spacious and elegant parlor, and is about twelve by fourteen feet. It is one of a set of eleven known as the Alexandria tapestries as they represent the battles and victories of Alexander the Great.

Of these eleven there are five still in the old country, and of the other six which are in this country, four are owned by General Sherman, who having no room to hang them in his own residence, has loaned them to the art exposition in New York. Another is owned by Mr. Kountze's brother in New York, so that the only one in this country outside of New York City is this one in Omaha.

Standing across the room and looking upon this tapestry, it appears more like a grand oil painting than the needle work it represents. It is a battle scene in which Alexander the Great, at the head of his warriors is in close conflict with the foe, and though the battle is raging terribly still the enemy is just about turning, and victory is almost his.

There are probably fifty or sixty figures in the tapestry. The colors are remarkably fresh and clear, considering that the work was done about 200 years ago. The shadings are as delicate, the figures stand forth as life-like as though done in oil by a master brush, instead of being wrought stitch by stitch of little bits of colored silks and wools.

One cannot gaze upon the animated scene presented on this piece of tapestry without being moved by its inspiration and without having the scenes thus portrayed forever stamped on the memory, and the more one gazes upon it, the more there seems to it. Forms and figures not seen at first surprise one by their lifelikeness, and the surprise at not having noticed them, is quickly followed by still others. The different expressions on the faces of the warriors, the vigorous portrayal of action, is wonderful.

When stopping close to the tapestry one has another surprise, something like that felt at examining closely a grand oil painting, only more so. Not only is each stitch roughly distinct, but the various colors seem to be so arranged as to mean nothing, and picture still less. One is impressed with the rare skill which must have been exercised in thus working stitch by stitch, so that however inconspicuous they might appear to the eye working over the canvas they will harmonize into a life-like representation when viewed at the proper distance, but this seems stranger yet when it is learned that the artist did not even have the advantage of working with the surface of the tapestry before him, but with the back before him. A glance at the reverse side of the tapestry gives one an idea of how much more difficult this must have been, for this side looks more unattractive than the reverse side of a piece of embroidery.

It is estimated that it will take an artist eighteen years to make this single piece of tapestry, the average year's work being about one yard. The Gobelin factory was a first called Gobelin's factory, and was an industry factory built by a Belgian wool dyer in the fifteenth century. Here on John Gobelin and the brothers Cannave, and afterwards others carried on carpet making. In 1602 Louis XIV. made a royal manufactory and for many years the Gobelin tapestries were not only an exclusive product of Paris, but they were made for none other than the royal family, and the French government deemed a Gobelin tapestry one of the richest gifts to present to another government.

The factory has employed 120 workmen, and some of the Gobelin's cost from $30,000 to $40,000. Since 1791 none have been sold, the only ones going out of the country being those presented to foreign courts. Most of the modern Gobelin's are much smaller than that now in Mr. Kountze's parlors, and this is not only a rare and rich specimen of the art on account of its size, but also from the fact of its being of the Alexandrian series, of which there are only eleven in the whole world.

A BRAVE MAN. By Almost Super Human Efforts he Saves His Wife and Child From a Horrible Death.

Yesterday a Bohemian exhibited bravery and strength which would do honor to any man in any walk in life.

The man, whose name it was impossible to learn, was walking along the B. & M. railroad track in the vicinity of Boyd's packing house accompanied by his wife and small child. At this point there is a high bridge and on the outer side of the rails, on either side, is a plank about one foot in width.

The party had just reached the center of the bridge when engine No. 75 dashed around the curve at the rate of fifteen miles per hour.

For a moment the man stood as if paralyzed, and then seizing his wife with his right hand and the child with his left, he stepped out upon the plank on the outer side of the rails and stood with his wife and child dangling in the air, the ground being forty feet deep.

As the engine flew past then it struck the man's left arm and he lost his hold upon the child, and down she went to the ground beneath, but he still maintained his grip upon his wife and held her until the engine had passed, then he landed her safely upon the bridge. The little child was not seriously injured, although stunned by the fall.

It was a trying moment in the man's life and one which he will never forget.

Real Estate Transfers. The following transfers were filed for record in the county clerk's office, July 28 and reported for the Bee by Ames' real estate agency:

M. T. Patrick and wife to Howard G. Worley, w. d. e. 1, lot 2, block 2, Patrick's add, $500.

Mary E. P. Bailey and husband to Fred Drexel, w. d. e. 94 feet of lot 1, block 5, Lowe's 2nd add, $1700.

Chas. R. Rodick to Dennis Cunningham, w. d. e. 40 feet of e 181 feet, lot 16, Bartlett's add, $2800.

Joseph M. Reese to Harriett C. Note, w. d. e. of adjoining lot 6, Reese Place, c. d. e. $54,000.

Stan I. S. Allen and wife to Chas. Corbett, 23x50 feet of lot 5, block 91, Omaha, w. d. e. $800.

Chas. Corbett and wife to Anna Wilson, n. 23 feet of lot 5, block 91, Omaha, w. d. e. $1,000.00.

TO BE TREASURED.

A Wonderful Piece of Tapestry From the Court of Louis XIV in an Omaha House.

In the parlors of Mr. Herman Kountze's residence is one of the rarest pieces of art to be seen anywhere in the west. It is nothing less than one of the Gobelin tapestries, which were among the costliest and richest of the adornments of the famous court of Louis XIV. It was the privilege of a Bux representative the other day to inspect the wonderful piece in Mr. Kountze's possession.

The tapestry hangs upon one of the walls of the spacious and elegant parlor, and is about twelve by fourteen feet. It is one of a set of eleven known as the Alexandria tapestries as they represent the battles and victories of Alexander the Great.

Of these eleven there are five still in the old country, and of the other six which are in this country, four are owned by General Sherman, who having no room to hang them in his own residence, has loaned them to the art exposition in New York. Another is owned by Mr. Kountze's brother in New York, so that the only one in this country outside of New York City is this one in Omaha.

Standing across the room and looking upon this tapestry, it appears more like a grand oil painting than the needle work it represents. It is a battle scene in which Alexander the Great, at the head of his warriors is in close conflict with the foe, and though the battle is raging terribly still the enemy is just about turning, and victory is almost his.

There are probably fifty or sixty figures in the tapestry. The colors are remarkably fresh and clear, considering that the work was done about 200 years ago. The shadings are as delicate, the figures stand forth as life-like as though done in oil by a master brush, instead of being wrought stitch by stitch of little bits of colored silks and wools.

One cannot gaze upon the animated scene presented on this piece of tapestry without being moved by its inspiration and without having the scenes thus portrayed forever stamped on the memory, and the more one gazes upon it, the more there seems to it. Forms and figures not seen at first surprise one by their lifelikeness, and the surprise at not having noticed them, is quickly followed by still others. The different expressions on the faces of the warriors, the vigorous portrayal of action, is wonderful.

When stopping close to the tapestry one has another surprise, something like that felt at examining closely a grand oil painting, only more so. Not only is each stitch roughly distinct, but the various colors seem to be so arranged as to mean nothing, and picture still less. One is impressed with the rare skill which must have been exercised in thus working stitch by stitch, so that however inconspicuous they might appear to the eye working over the canvas they will harmonize into a life-like representation when viewed at the proper distance, but this seems stranger yet when it is learned that the artist did not even have the advantage of working with the surface of the tapestry before him, but with the back before him. A glance at the reverse side of the tapestry gives one an idea of how much more difficult this must have been, for this side looks more unattractive than the reverse side of a piece of embroidery.

It is estimated that it will take an artist eighteen years to make this single piece of tapestry, the average year's work being about one yard. The Gobelin factory was a first called Gobelin's factory, and was an industry factory built by a Belgian wool dyer in the fifteenth century. Here on John Gobelin and the brothers Cannave, and afterwards others carried on carpet making. In 1602 Louis XIV. made a royal manufactory and for many years the Gobelin tapestries were not only an exclusive product of Paris, but they were made for none other than the royal family, and the French government deemed a Gobelin tapestry one of the richest gifts to present to another government.

The factory has employed 120 workmen, and some of the Gobelin's cost from $30,000 to $40,000. Since 1791 none have been sold, the only ones going out of the country being those presented to foreign courts. Most of the modern Gobelin's are much smaller than that now in Mr. Kountze's parlors, and this is not only a rare and rich specimen of the art on account of its size, but also from the fact of its being of the Alexandrian series, of which there are only eleven in the whole world.

A BRAVE MAN. By Almost Super Human Efforts he Saves His Wife and Child From a Horrible Death.

Yesterday a Bohemian exhibited bravery and strength which would do honor to any man in any walk in life.

The man, whose name it was impossible to learn, was walking along the B. & M. railroad track in the vicinity of Boyd's packing house accompanied by his wife and small child. At this point there is a high bridge and on the outer side of the rails, on either side, is a plank about one foot in width.

The party had just reached the center of the bridge when engine No. 75 dashed around the curve at the rate of fifteen miles per hour.

For a moment the man stood as if paralyzed, and then seizing his wife with his right hand and the child with his left, he stepped out upon the plank on the outer side of the rails and stood with his wife and child dangling in the air, the ground being forty feet deep.

As the engine flew past then it struck the man's left arm and he lost his hold upon the child, and down she went to the ground beneath, but he still maintained his grip upon his wife and held her until the engine had passed, then he landed her safely upon the bridge. The little child was not seriously injured, although stunned by the fall.

It was a trying moment in the man's life and one which he will never forget.

Real Estate Transfers. The following transfers were filed for record in the county clerk's office, July 28 and reported for the Bee by Ames' real estate agency:

M. T. Patrick and wife to Howard G. Worley, w. d. e. 1, lot 2, block 2, Patrick's add, $500.

Mary E. P. Bailey and husband to Fred Drexel, w. d. e. 94 feet of lot 1, block 5, Lowe's 2nd add, $1700.

Chas. R. Rodick to Dennis Cunningham, w. d. e. 40 feet of e 181 feet, lot 16, Bartlett's add, $2800.

Joseph M. Reese to Harriett C. Note, w. d. e. of adjoining lot 6, Reese Place, c. d. e. $54,000.

Stan I. S. Allen and wife to Chas. Corbett, 23x50 feet of lot 5, block 91, Omaha, w. d. e. $800.

Chas. Corbett and wife to Anna Wilson, n. 23 feet of lot 5, block 91, Omaha, w. d. e. $1,000.00.

TO BE TREASURED.

A Wonderful Piece of Tapestry From the Court of Louis XIV in an Omaha House.

In the parlors of Mr. Herman Kountze's residence is one of the rarest pieces of art to be seen anywhere in the west. It is nothing less than one of the Gobelin tapestries, which were among the costliest and richest of the adornments of the famous court of Louis XIV. It was the privilege of a Bux representative the other day to inspect the wonderful piece in Mr. Kountze's possession.

The tapestry hangs upon one of the walls of the spacious and elegant parlor, and is about twelve by fourteen feet. It is one of a set of eleven known as the Alexandria tapestries as they represent the battles and victories of Alexander the Great.

Of these eleven there are five still in the old country, and of the other six which are in this country, four are owned by General Sherman, who having no room to hang them in his own residence, has loaned them to the art exposition in New York. Another is owned by Mr. Kountze's brother in New York, so that the only one in this country outside of New York City is this one in Omaha.

Standing across the room and looking upon this tapestry, it appears more like a grand oil painting than the needle work it represents. It is a battle scene in which Alexander the Great, at the head of his warriors is in close conflict with the foe, and though the battle is raging terribly still the enemy is just about turning, and victory is almost his.

There are probably fifty or sixty figures in the tapestry. The colors are remarkably fresh and clear, considering that the work was done about 200 years ago. The shadings are as delicate, the figures stand forth as life-like as though done in oil by a master brush, instead of being wrought stitch by stitch of little bits of colored silks and wools.

One cannot gaze upon the animated scene presented on this piece of tapestry without being moved by its inspiration and without having the scenes thus portrayed forever stamped on the memory, and the more one gazes upon it, the more there seems to it. Forms and figures not seen at first surprise one by their lifelikeness, and the surprise at not having noticed them, is quickly followed by still others. The different expressions on the faces of the warriors, the vigorous portrayal of action, is wonderful.

When stopping close to the tapestry one has another surprise, something like that felt at examining closely a grand oil painting, only more so. Not only is each stitch roughly distinct, but the various colors seem to be so arranged as to mean nothing, and picture still less. One is impressed with the rare skill which must have been exercised in thus working stitch by stitch, so that however inconspicuous they might appear to the eye working over the canvas they will harmonize into a life-like representation when viewed at the proper distance, but this seems stranger yet when it is learned that the artist did not even have the advantage of working with the surface of the tapestry before him, but with the back before him. A glance at the reverse side of the tapestry gives one an idea of how much more difficult this must have been, for this side looks more unattractive than the reverse side of a piece of embroidery.

It is estimated that it will take an artist eighteen years to make this single piece of tapestry, the average year's work being about one yard. The Gobelin factory was a first called Gobelin's factory, and was an industry factory built by a Belgian wool dyer in the fifteenth century. Here on John Gobelin and the brothers Cannave, and afterwards others carried on carpet making. In 1602 Louis XIV. made a royal manufactory and for many years the Gobelin tapestries were not only an exclusive product of Paris, but they were made for none other than the royal family, and the French government deemed a Gobelin tapestry one of the richest gifts to present to another government.

The factory has employed 120 workmen, and some of the Gobelin's cost from $30,000 to $40,000. Since 1791 none have been sold, the only ones going out of the country being those presented to foreign courts. Most of the modern Gobelin's are much smaller than that now in Mr. Kountze's parlors, and this is not only a rare and rich specimen of the art on account of its size, but also from the fact of its being of the Alexandrian series, of which there are only eleven in the whole world.

A BRAVE MAN. By Almost Super Human Efforts he Saves His Wife and Child From a Horrible Death.

Yesterday a Bohemian exhibited bravery and strength which would do honor to any man in any walk in life.

The man, whose name it was impossible to learn, was walking along the B. & M. railroad track in the vicinity of Boyd's packing house accompanied by his wife and small child. At this point there is a high bridge and on the outer side of the rails, on either side, is a plank about one foot in width.

The party had just reached the center of the bridge when engine No. 75 dashed around the curve at the rate of fifteen miles per hour.

For a moment the man stood as if paralyzed, and then seizing his wife with his right hand and the child with his left, he stepped out upon the plank on the outer side of the rails and stood with his wife and child dangling in the air, the ground being forty feet deep.

As the engine flew past then it struck the man's left arm and he lost his hold upon the child, and down she went to the ground beneath, but he still maintained his grip upon his wife and held her until the engine had passed, then he landed her safely upon the bridge. The little child was not seriously injured, although stunned by the fall.

It was a trying moment in the man's life and one which he will never forget.

Real Estate Transfers. The following transfers were filed for record in the county clerk's office, July 28 and reported for the Bee by Ames' real estate agency:

M. T. Patrick and wife to Howard G. Worley, w. d. e. 1, lot 2, block 2, Patrick's add, $500.

Mary E. P. Bailey and husband to Fred Drexel, w. d. e. 94 feet of lot 1, block 5, Lowe's 2nd add, $1700.

Chas. R. Rodick to Dennis Cunningham, w. d. e. 40 feet of e 181 feet, lot 16, Bartlett's add, $2800.

Joseph M. Reese to Harriett C. Note, w. d. e. of adjoining lot 6, Reese Place, c. d. e. $54,000.

Stan I. S. Allen and wife to Chas. Corbett, 23x50 feet of lot 5, block 91, Omaha, w. d. e. $800.

Chas. Corbett and wife to Anna Wilson, n. 23 feet of lot 5, block 91, Omaha, w. d. e. $1,000.00.

MERGELL & ROSENZWEIG,

Practical Painters & Decorators,

CARRY THE LARGEST AND FINEST STOCK OF WALL PAPERS AND DECORATIONS.

1515 Douglas Street, Omaha.

WANTED--Two good dining room girls at the Hockeys Meat Market, cor. 16th and Mason streets. $54.20.

WANTED--200 laborers to go west. Call until 10 a. m. Tuesday. Wages, $1.75. Board $4.00. M. S. 10th street. 806-229.

WANTED--Girls for general housework, 517 N. 10th street. 806-312.

WANTED--A good cook, S. W. corner 19th and Capitol avenue. 828-229.

WANTED--A girl for general housework, at 8 1/2 North 10th Street, 1233 street. Between Jones and Leavenworth. Lick Street. 828-229.

WANTED--Two good collections. P. F. Collier, 87 Barker's block. 82-38.

WANTED--1,000 teams for Haynes, Mo. John M. Lagin, contractor. Apply to my agent, H. Mammiller, 303 South 11th St. 824-229.

WANTED--Eight teams to haul brick. $4.00 per day. Apply to Toon, Yates, 2111 Harney St. 863-229.

WANTED--Girl to wait on table for her board at Emmet House. 822-12.

WANTED--Immediately, a wet nurse. Mrs. G. M. Hitchcock, corner 20th and Dodge St. 824-229.

WANTED--Two