THE WIDOW BUTLER.

General Butler is still laying low and keeping his own counsel. His refusal to come to the front and throw down the gauntlet to the "Plumed Knight" and Sitting Bull, of Buffalo, is causing dissatisfaction among his ardent admirers.

It is not surprising that the country will be made to endure another four years of republican rule, under the leadership of Blaine. This is no trifling estimate. It is based on a careful study of the situation after conversation with the representative men of many localities.

The thirteen chapters on Union Pacific which we have reproduced from the New York Times are a most interesting compilation of facts with which the readers of The Bee are for the most part familiar.

Can General Butler carry any one state on his anti-monopoly or his labor platform? The anti-monopoly cry is mainly directed against railroad extortion usurpation of land and the control of legislatures.

The working men of this country are all voters; they have a direct influence in shaping the government; they are better off in that respect than any others on the face of the globe.

It is now very definitely announced that Attorney General Powers will not be a candidate for re-nomination. This is sad news but Nebraska will survive the calamity.

They have some muscular political kickers down in Alabama. The independents made a gallant though almost hopeless fight in Mobile and Birmingham.

Mr. Boyd's proxy on the national democratic committee has returned and an avowal of the "extinguished leader" at Boyd's opera house is now in order.

We are not at all surprised at the pronounced preference of Miss Susan B. Anthony for James G. Blaine. A horrid old bachelor like Grover Cleveland, who prefers a buxom widow to a youthful and handsome maiden like Susan, is not fit to be president of the United States.

Every well managed business house has its monthly balance sheets and its quarterly and semi-annual inventories. The city of Omaha, in its corporate affairs, has been at loose ends for years.

No license to sell liquor should be granted to disorderly houses. This is both the letter and the spirit of the law. Had it been carried out from the start, when the high license law went into effect, every den and dive in Omaha would have closed its doors long ago.

The attempt of over-zealous republican papers to counteract the influence that may be exerted by Harper's Weekly and its recent editor, George William Curtis, by reproducing cartoons and editorials that appeared in Harper's illustrated publications during the war period, is a mere waste of time and space.

Lincoln is still wrestling with the water works problem and Holly's direct pressure. Cleveland's nightmare is Butler and Tammany.

The Maine legislature passed in 1851 the bill which was the original "Maine liquor law." Additional legislation, always in the supposed direction of greater stringency, has modified the original act, but the prohibitory principle runs through all these enactments.

It is not often that the tyrant man attempts to regulate the eccentricities of female costume; and still more rarely are his efforts crowned with success when he does attempt it, so there is good reason to believe that the Omaha chief of police has undertaken quite an extensive contract in forbidding ladies to appear on the street in a "Mother Hubbard."

These frank admissions of the breaking down of the law are neither new nor surprising. It has been a subject of vehement dispute for a generation, whether prohibition was successfully applied in Maine to the liquor traffic.

With arguments pro and con, and specimens of the "Mother Hubbard," both loose and belted, will be exhibited until the spectators will be uncertain whether they are in a court of law or a dressmaker's establishment.

The Chilian government has declared a war of extermination against the condors. It offers a reward of $5 for every condor killed. The hunting of this bird of prey has, under the circumstances, become a profitable business, though it seems doubtful, if one considers the astounding powers of the bird, and its wonderful habits, that the government can or will ever succeed in destroying the species at any price.

With reasonable qualifications, it is prudent to lay down the principle that laws above the level of public conviction on given subjects are hindrances to the end in view. A stringent license law could be enforced in Maine, because the state practically accepts that degree of restriction; but as the Portland journal mentions, it is "notorious" that the law is largely disobeyed by officers and private citizens alike.

The great mass meeting in New York in which the Irish-Americans of the metropolis of America entered their protest against the nomination of Grover Cleveland, is bound to be productive of far-reaching results.

The total valuation of Aurora county is $204,590. Yankton "points with pride" to her new post office. Reade county's assessable wealth foots up $1,828,000.

The disease among the cattle about Sacramento is still spreading. It is of very mild form, and although 160 cases have been reported so far, there has not been a single death.

The season's honey crop in Ventura county will be the largest ever gathered reaching probably 1,500 to 1,600 tons. The area 9,000 bee colonies in the county.
