Twenty Millions in Silver.

A well known Philadelphia citizen, J. J. Boyle, has just returned from Vigo, Spain, where he has discovered, after a thorough and exhaustive exploration of the inner harbor of that town, a fleet of Spanish galleons, supposed to contain not less than $20,000,000 in bullion, which he expects to rescue from a watery deposit.

These galleons are a portion of a fleet of treasure ships sunk in the harbor in the early part of the eighteenth century during a conflict between the English and Dutch war ships and a French and Spanish fleet.

Mr. Boyle himself went down in a diver's suit to the treasure galleons sunk in the inner harbor and found the vessels covered with mud to the depth of four or five feet. The woodwork of the sunken fleet he discovered to be in a sound condition. The number of the sunken galleons is not known, but the silver which is said to be in the lower hold of the vessels is supposed to be not less than $20,000,000. Permission to recover this money has been obtained from the Spanish government and work will be commenced immediately.

ARCTIC HORRORS.

The Facts Concerning the Privations of The Greely Party Coming to the Surface.

Life Sustained in Those Rescued at the Cost of Their Comrades' Lives.

Sufferings of the Greely Party

The New York Times prints a horrible story of the sufferings of the Greely party. It says: Written documents now in the possession of the navy department at Washington add to the record of miserable human suffering already published in connection with the finding of the Greely relief expedition the most shocking stories of inhumanity and cannibalism. All the facts have been in the possession of Secretary Chandler for nearly three weeks, but so closely have they been guarded, and so strongly have the naval officers and sailors maintained the silence imposed upon them, that not even an inkling of the true and horrible condition of affairs has yet reached the public ear.

For the sake of humanity and the American people, the army authorities are endeavoring to keep the matter hushed; but in the official investigation which is almost sure to come the facts will undoubtedly come out. Every effort will presumably be taken to prevent it, but the truth must be known in time. To prevent the possibility of the remains of the dead being seen, Commander Schley, it will be remembered, insisted upon remaining in St. John's until iron caskets could be made and the bodies hermetically sealed. The object of this is now clear. The sailors on the relief ships, with the exception of a few men who assisted in removing the bodies, were not allowed to see them. The lips of the officers were sealed. When Commander Schley met Secretary Chandler and General Huxon at Portsmouth, August 2, on the arrival of the ships from St. John's, he was very much agitated, and called the gentlemen into the cabin of the vessel. Undoubtedly he then communicated to them the facts which have since become an open secret. The sufferings and privations of the men in their canvas suits during the bitter winter of 1883-4 have not half been told. It has been published that after the game gave out, early in February, they lived principally on sealskins, lichens, and shrimps. As a matter of fact they were kept alive on human flesh. When the rescuing party discovered the half-starved survivors, their first duty was to look to the two men who were immovable from cold and privation, even to the point of death. One of them, a German, was wild in his delirium. "Oh!" he shrieked, as the sailors took hold of him to lift him tenderly, "don't let them shoot me as they did poor Henry. Must I be killed and eaten as Henry was? Don't let them do it. Don't!"

The sailors were horrified, but at once reported the man's words to Commander Schley. After a brief investigation he felt satisfied that the poor fellow was speaking the truth, and that some of the men who perished had been stripped of their flesh to keep their comrades alive. Mr. Schley proposed to make thorough work of it. When the horrible reality was brought out before an investigating committee he did not propose to have it rest on his oral testimony. He instructed two or three gentlemen, among whom was Dr. Ames, the surgeon of the Bear, to make a careful examination and put their conclusions in writing. This was done, and the reports are now in the hands of the navy department. Lieutenant Greely was decidedly adverse to having the bodies of the buried dead disturbed. He thought it best, as they had been buried so long, to let them remain in their Arctic graves. Commander Schley did not agree with him. The bodies were dug from their graves in the little hill just back of the permanent camp established in October, 1883. Most of the blankets contained nothing but heaps of white bones, many of them picked clean. The remains could be identified only by the marks on the blankets. By inquiries Commander Schley discovered that many of the seventeen men who were said to have perished from starvation had been eaten by their famishing comrades.

It is reported that the only men who escaped the knife were three or four who died of scurvy. The amputated limbs of men who afterwards perished were eagerly devoured as food. Charles B. Henry's death was particularly tragic. He was a young German, without any relatives in this country, and joined company E, Fifth Cavalry, in Cincinnati. His friends tried to dissuade him from going with the expedition, but his spirit of adventure was aroused by tales of Arctic exploits, and he determined to go. Driven to despair by his frightful hunger, Henry saw an opportunity to steal a little more than his share of rations, and he made the attempt. He was found and shot for his crime. In the published official report the death of this man is set down as having occurred on June 6. When the body was found his hands and face, though shrunken, were intact and recognizable, but nearly everywhere else the skin had been stripped from him and the flesh picked from the bones. Even his heart and lungs were eaten by his comrades. One rib was found shattered by a bullet, and to another small fragment of lead were attached. A bullet hole was found in the skin. The body was in this condition when it was interred in Cypress Hill cemetery last Saturday.

Commander Schley was seen to-night on board the Thetis and declined to have anything to say about the state of the bodies more than he gave to the public in his first official dispatch. "Did you see Henry's body?" he was asked. "I did not."

"Did he die?"

"Starvation, or scurvy, I believe, the same as the others."

"Do you know whether he was shot?"

"I am not prepared to answer that question," said the commander, hurriedly, "and furthermore I positively decline to be interviewed. When an official inquiry is made into the details of the trip I shall say what I have to say, if anything, and not before."

Without another word the commander hurried below.

A Gloomy Prospect for the Window-Glass Workers.

Pittsburgh Special to the Globe Democrat.

The window-glass manufacturers of the country are discussing the propriety of a move of great interest to the 6,000 men and boys employed in that industry. On account of the strike the factories of the year, which ended on the 30th of June. There was no dissatisfaction on the part of the employers when the summer suspension of two months was ordered, but they were not so anxious for the vacation as if they had worked steadily during the whole year and had been in good shape financially, and have looked forward eagerly to the 1st of September, when the period of rest would be ended and they would again be making money. The manufacturers have also been looking forward to the 1st of September, but through different spectacles. The demand for the product of their factories has been very unsatisfactory during the summer, and there is a decided disposition not to light their fires at the usual time, but to continue the suspension at least two weeks, and perhaps until the 1st of October. The matter has been quietly discussed for several days. A special meeting will be held very shortly to determine what shall be done. Manufacturers who were spoken to to-day say the outlook for their branch of the glass trade is very gloomy, and that the probabilities are the season will open with a reduction of prices, and a corresponding reduction of wages. The latter will be effected without a strike, as wages, under a new arrangement are governed by the selling price. The Flint factories will resume operations on Monday, after a six weeks' suspension, and the bottle factories will resume on the first of September. Trade in both branches is poor.

The Voice of the People.

The people, as a whole, seldom make mistakes, and the unanimous voice in praise which comes from those who have used Hood's Sarsaparilla fully justified the claims of the proprietors of this great medicine. Indeed, these very claims are based entirely on what the people say.

War on the Mormons.

Special to the St. Louis Republican.

NASHVILLE, Tenn., Aug. 11.—News was received to-night of a terrible fight in Lewis county, Mo., between the Mormons and the regular army. The Mormons have been proselyting in Lewis and Hickman counties with considerable success. People have expressed great indignation and determination to drive them away. Yesterday a Mormon meeting was in progress at the house of a man named Jones, in the East Fork of Cave Creek near the post office of Ivy Mills, Lewis county. Several Mormons were present, including three elders. While the meeting was in progress a party of regular soldiers rode up and demanded the surrender of the Mormons. The Mormons refused to surrender, and a fight ensued. The Mormons were killed and wounded. The regular army was victorious.

A COWBOY'S TALE.

The Good Old Days When Money was Plenty Down in Texas.

Brooklyn Union.

A reporter of the Union noticed one of the "hangars on" around the Coney Island race track riding a racer without saddle or blanket. The animal seemed more than ordinarily vicious, and would plunge from side to side, rear up on its hind legs and throw his head violently toward the ground in his efforts to unseat the rider. But the man sat firmly and gracefully on the horse's back, and almost seemed to be directing the animal's movements, so quietly did he adapt himself to the changed position of the game. When the man had put the horse in the stable, he sauntered over to where the reporter was standing, and to the amazement of the scribe betrayed not the slightest sign of having done some severe work.

The reporter said to him: "You seem to have had a tough time with that animal."

"Nathin' tuff about that; why, that's only child's play. I'm a 'broncho' rider, I am."

"How do you mean; a 'broncho' rider?"

"Now, gill, what'er yer given us? Don't you know what a broncho is, or a mustang, or a pony that cowboys in the west generally use?"

"Are bronchos harder to ride than the animal you have just been riding?"

"Well, I should smile, you see that horse I was just riding simply jumped. His legs went free and his body went free. Well a broncho doesn't jump, he 'bucks,' that's what he does."

"What's the difference between bucking and jumping?"

"Well, you are a tenderfoot sure enough. A pony when he bucks gets his fore feet right under him, and then he springs right into the air, and comes down still legged, just as if his legs were iron poles; and then there is this peculiarity: while he's comin' down he gets his head nearly between his fore legs, and he's under his belly, and makes a hump on his back like a camel; and when he comes down you bet a rider goes up. Well, he does that act about six times in succession, just as quick as you would count them. I see, when I rode that horse just now I gave with the horse; well, you can't give with a 'bucker.' There's no give there; you got to make yourself stiff as iron and wear him out; that's the way to ride 'em. Why, I've often got on a 'bucking' broncho, and staid there too, until the blood spurted out of my nose and ears, and I felt as if I was twine."

"Where was that?"

"Out in the west. Texas and California."

"What were you doing there?"

"Principally herding cattle and such."

"Oh, indeed? You were a cowboy, then?"

"That's what I was."

"You ought to have an interesting story to relate."

"Now you're shoutin'. That's what I have and I could tell you it, too, if there was a place to sit down, and the 'hangar-on' looked loungingly at the bar where beer was sold, and then at the reporter. The reporter, the hint and to C. I. Hood & Co., Boston, for book rider" was smiling behind a large schooner of beer.

"So you were a real cowboy?" said the reporter, and visions of wild cattle and bucking bronchos danced before his vision, while the reformed cowboy emptied one schooner and called for another.

"Well, I was, but then a cowboy ain't what he used to be. Fourteen years ago I went to Texas, and after knocking around a bit, I got a job as a cowboy for a big cattle owner in the southern part of the state. Oh, them was the times, though. One hundred dollars a month and found, and six ponies a year to kill if you liked, and a share in the cattle you could steal. Well, sir, there was one year there that I cleared $6,000 in good hard cash."

"What did you do with it?"

"Blew it in, of course. Mexican monte and red liquor got it all, every cent. You see it was this way I made the raise. We started to drive a herd of 100 head of cattle into Colorado for sale, about 2,500 miles. Well, of my own run across arid cattle that had no brand on them. Sometimes we'd get only one and sometimes twenty. Well, we drove and drove, killed a fresh beef every day and only ate the tenderloin. Oh, but we did live! Well, at any rate, we kept drivin' and collectin' strays all the way till we got to Denver. It took over three months, and when we struck Denver that herd of 100 head had become 2,000, and we sold them all at $15 a head, and the four of us and the man we worked for, which made five, divided the stuff. That's how I made the $6,000 at a lick. We used to do that right straight along until about eight years ago. But then eight years ago wages commenced to be cut down, and the first thing I knew I was getting $10 a month, and then $5 and then $4, so I thought to myself I'd get out. You see the fellows kept a comin' in from the east and the south, and they 'crowded' us out. Of course as the men became plenty the wages became scarce, until to-day the cowboy gets only $20 to $25 a month and a chance to make at all. There is no more big cattle drives. You know a fellow when he packs them on the cars and there's an end of it. Everything's the same; wages is all cut down, and there's no chance for nobody, as I said before. Why, fourteen years ago an enterprising cowboy could start out with his broncho and whip and be able to sell a herd of cattle 500 miles away. But now you see not only is all the cattle branded, but all the brands is registered, and everything shows up on its face. And then, again, there's so many cattle associations. You see, these associations are gotten up for the protection of the cattle dealers, as they say, and they hire cowboys and do the herding for all the small ranchmen in the country. That's another reason why there's no more money in the business now. A cowboy used to be somebody, but now he's only a farm hand."

"What sort of a life is that of a cowboy?"

"I tell you stranger, it's a holy terror. In the spring, summer and fall the cowboy is in the saddle night and day; if he sleeps at all it is on the ground, wet or dry. Cattle are collected at a certain point and started on the drive for different places. When they reach the first shipping point cattle of a certain brand have to be separated from the others, and that's where the work comes in. May be you see a bunch of 300 head, and in that 200 want of a certain line. You go to cut them out and the whole lot stampede across the prairie. Of course then the time you have to ride. Well, you get the ten out and may be you've been at it two hours and may be ten. Then again the drive takes the cattle to a strange place. Some of the herd are put on watch; they take their
