

CONVENTION SKETCHES.

Reels Picked Up From the Battlefield.

Which is Strewn With Bodies of the State.

The Republican state convention, which concluded its labors at 10 o'clock Thursday morning, was in many respects the most interesting political gathering that has ever taken place in Nebraska.

The auditorium of the opera house was entirely monopolized by the 447 delegates, while the galleries and nearly every inch of available space in and about the dress circle was packed with spectators.

Many of the exciting episodes during the balloting drew forth a great deal of pant up enthusiasm as well as a good deal of suppressed indignation. The outcome of the convention work is a very forcible reminder of the fable of the mountain which labored and brought forth manna.

With all its intelligence and individual independence, the convention was swayed and almost entirely controlled by two or three leaders who generally made the states and combinations, all in perfect harmony with the interests and designs of the railway incorporators.

middle was a little better in setting up his political pins than the long Lane from Douglas. And now came the hand to hand conflict of the attorney-generalship. Three candidates entered the race, with Ransom of Ohio nearly 100 ahead of all competitors in the first ball, DeWorth being second and Leese third.

As I have been given unjust and unnecessary notoriety in the late Keyes shooting affair at this place, I crave a little space in your daily to place myself right before the public and to give what I am assured by those who are conversant with the lamentable tragedy, the true status of it.

The newspaper dispatches gave it that "Lumie," alias Cary Smith was the man who was shot and that John Keyes did the shooting, all of which was wrong as to each party named in the dispatches and how and why such a blundering mistake should have been made is more than I can account for.

We seemed on the point of entering that ancient paleocretaceous sea of which the geologists speak,--in every where, our ship cutting its way through the water, at length we met anchor in 83 fathoms of water close to the gigantic Muir glacier, which feeds these icy straits with their wonderful masses of crystal.
