LOCAL BREVITIES.

Billings & Connor, Dentists, opp. P. O. Entries for the state fair are coming in very rapidly, and there are already more entries than there ever were before at the opening of the fair.

The grand lodge of the Knights of Pythias will convene in annual session at Tecumseh on Tuesday next, September 23. Omaha will be well represented.

T. J. Allan goes into the south Platte country to-day to collect fruit for the Union Pacific railway exhibits at Boston and St. Louis. The Union Pacific has shipped over 3,000 bundles of grain from Nebraska, Colorado and Utah, for these exhibitions.

The latest advice from New York state that the large building of the Equitable Life Insurance company is now lighted by the Western large incandescent lights. They work to perfection, and are destined to do away with the gas light. The Northwestern company of this city have obtained the right for Nebraska, and will have them running in this city inside of 30 days.

Among the many attractions of interest for the people of Omaha during the state fair week, will be a grand ball and exhibition by the Hibiscus Rifles of A. O. H., at their hall, 13th and Jackson street on Tuesday the 30th Sept. To make the affair acceptable to the families and friends of the members of the company and A. O. H. generally, the efficient committee in charge will be careful to see that the best of order and decorum is observed, and a good social time is guaranteed to all. Tickets to be had from members of the company.

Everybody acknowledges that THE BEE is the best advertising medium in this section of the country. This was fully proven last night. Last Saturday Dr. R. M. Stone had occasion to go to St. Louis and just as he was entering that city on a Missouri Pacific train the conductor showed him an old pocket book found in the car, containing a pass over the Union Pacific road to Ogden and made in favor of James Shanks. Dr. Stone thought no more of the matter until his return to this city, when he saw by the daily papers that an old man named James Shanks had been robbed of $700 and a pass to Ogden. It then flashed upon Dr. Stone's mind that he had seen the missing pass. He went to the Union Pacific headquarters and found that the old man had been there and asked for another pass, but they rather doubted his story, but after hearing what the doctor had to say, said that another pass would be issued to Shanks. Last evening's BEE contained a small paragraph asking Shanks to call upon Dr. Stone and before the paper had been issued three hours Shanks was in the doctor's office. Talk about an advertising medium—it is quicker and surer than lightning.

THAT INCENDIARY FIRE.

An Important Witness Startles the Defense.

And Swears to Have Seen the Bee Office Entered.

The Trial Draws to a Close again.

It will be remembered that on the morning of the 17th inst., about 5:30 o'clock, a fire was discovered in the composing room of THE BEE office and that it was generally believed, at the time, to be the work of incendiaries.

Two days later, two printers, Col. D. J. Hynes and Frank Watson, both working at THE BEE office were in custody of the officers, charged with arson. Their trial began at 10 a. m., Thursday and lasted until late hour yesterday afternoon. A brief outline of the testimony is herewith given:

The first witness was Mr. E. Rosewater, editor and publisher of THE BEE, who described the buildings in which the fire occurred. These are two in number, one brick and one of frame, connected only in the secondary and there by iron doors. With the exception of Saturday from 4 p. m., to Sunday noon, a full force of men is at work day and night in the offices, there being two regular shifts. On Saturday August 16, there were men in the counting room until 9 o'clock p. m. and then the establishment was left in care of the watchman.

There had been no fire at all in the upper story of the brick, which is known as the "composition" room, and which is heated even in winter by steam. One familiar with the business and desiring to damage the institution would naturally fire the brick building. It is in this that the types, machinery and valuable papers are kept and their destruction would temporarily stop the issue of the paper. The iron doors would also prevent a spread of the flames to the adjoining house, containing the editorial rooms and subscription department, the destruction of which would not interfere with the publication of the paper. The fire was in exactly the best locality for this purpose. The only access to this spot was by means of a doorway on the northeast front of the east, or frame house, from which a stairway, halls and gangway lead to the iron doors and the composition room. This door was tried by the witness twice on the evening of the 16th, and found then to be securely locked.

Last trial being made about 9 o'clock. He then went home, and knew nothing of the matter until called down on Sunday morning. Mr. Rosewater testified that Hynes had worked there as a "typo," and was thoroughly acquainted with the premises, that a bitter feeling had existed toward the witness on Hynes's part, the latter having denounced THE BEE and witness bitterly at a public meeting on account of the "walk out" or strike which had taken place some weeks before.

W. A. Calvey, a printer, testified that on the night in question he had slept in the Strang building with the fireman there. (It had been intimated that he had slept in THE BEE office and set it fire carelessly.) He was first awakened by the cry of fire. He ran to the door of the office, where he met the watchman from the lumber yard, who had given the alarm. He tried to obtain buckets to put out the fire and had warned Asst. Chief Engineer Galligan not to throw water with the hose if it could be avoided. Witness stayed till after the fire and helped to clean up and put things in shape.

Assistant Chief Galligan attended the fire on morning of 16th, at 5:45. Found location of fire to be in second story, just inside of iron doors. The flames had just attacked the ceiling and the heat was intense. He thought fire had not burned long or there would have been more smoke. It could have been in progress, if fed on certain material from 10 minutes to several hours. On this occasion there was only noticed the intense heat. He had been in the fire service for sixteen years in Omaha.

Chief Engineer John H. Butler, reached the fire at 5:30, being there inside of five minutes after the alarm. Found fire located as above and that a team had already been turned out. He examined the premises and found an absence of anything, like a stove or lamp which would start such a fire. He did not think the fire started the night before but that it had burned from 30 minutes to an hour. Saw no places so well calculated to let fire go through both buildings as there.

Wm. Mulhall, watchman in Hoagland's and Foster & Gray's lumber yard, was first to discover smoke issuing from a window in upper story of the old Bee office, and said no one was near the house but a boy taken by the carrier boy. Started the boy to Engine House No. 2, but the latter went too slow and he ran ahead of him. Then returned to fire and met THE BEE watchman. They found the door leading up stairs open and went up.

Hon. P. F. Murphy, president of the city council and acting mayor, was next witness. He remembered the reading of a remonstrance before the city council against the letting of the contract for the city printing to THE BEE. Hynes told him subsequently that he had prepared the remonstrance. He believed the paper was lost, and when asked to give its contents, it was objected to and ruled out. He had been personally requested by Col. Hynes to oppose the letting of said contract to THE BEE.

W. H. Kent of THE BEE testified that on the morning of the fire he had arisen about 4:30 a. m. and went direct to the corner of Thirteenth and Douglas street, where he met Argyle and Long of the Republican, entered into conversation with them and remained at the steps of the office until the fire bell rang—perhaps forty minutes. Saw Col. Hynes two or three times, going into Clark's or Leader's while there. Witness did not leave the steps nor go to any other place before the fire.

Frank S. Colburn, of Neligh's detective agency testified that he saw Col. Hynes first in the city jail, where witness was in the same cell and was also at the county jail with Hynes. When Watson entered, Watson said: "Victim No. 2, and more coming!" etc. The defendants had some conversation as to statements made since the fire; claimed they could prove an alibi, and so on. Col. Hynes said "I am glad to see you (meaning Watson) inside. I'd rather have you inside than out, where I'm afraid you'd be giving something away. This was talked in connection with THE BEE fire. Witness had heard Prof. E. A. O'Brien, of the Republican, when he came to interview Hynes. He handed the latter written questions through the bars and Watson said to O'Brien that he would corroborate whatever Hynes said. Here the prosecution rested its case and the defendant, Hynes, was sworn and testified.

He was a printer at the Herald office and on the night of the 16th was at that office until 4:20 a. m. of the 17th without once leaving it. Frank Watson then left with him and they went to Higgins', where both drank and then got lunch.

Saw Long at the lunch counter and afterward Argyle came in and the four talked some time, at last going over to the Republican office and getting a morning paper. They then went to Clark's and got a drink and on coming out met Hammin, of the Republican, and the latter spoke of going to church. When the fire bell rang witness took it for church bell and told Hammin it was time he was going. Saw department go by and returned went down to the scene of the fire, which was at the Bee office. Witness said that on that occasion he wore the same suit now on, a broad brimmed hat, had dark colored coat and light colored pants.

W. H. Long, of the Republican said he worked until 4:15 on the morning of the fire and related substantially the same details of the meeting on the corner of Thirteenth and Douglas and subsequent events. Mr. W. Argyle confirming the testimony in all particulars.

Court adjourned at this point until 11 a. m., yesterday.

Frank Watson, co-defendant with Hynes, was the first witness examined to-day and his story did not differ materially from that of Hynes and other witnesses.

J. Hammin, of the Republican, testified to meeting the parties named at the steps of the Republican office on the morning of the fire.

F. S. Horton and Chas. R. Morris, of the Herald news room, testified that Hynes and Watson worked there on the night in question, and were there as late as 4:00 or 4:15 a. m. on Sunday morning.

Detective Colburn was recalled and testified to Col. Hynes having expressed a wish that he could have seen the hose turned on in the composition room, as it would have pried the type and done great injury.

Foreman McDeirmid of the Herald news room testified that Hynes and Watson worked there the night of the 16th, and that he did not see them after 3:58 a. m. Huberman's time.

C. C. Carter, of THE BEE testified in regard to the "walk-out" from the Bee office, the nature of the difficulty between the union printers and the so-called "rats" and of the hostile feeling and expressions of the former toward THE BEE. The most important witness of all was called out noon: Mr. Wm. Strahl, fireman for the Northwestern Electric Light company. He testified that he awoke about 3:30 a. m. on Sunday, Aug. 17th. He sat for a while in front of the window in Strang's building. Thought he heard footsteps in the alley between that and Bee office. Got up and walked in stocking feet to alley and saw two men standing in front of THE BEE, some fifty feet distant. One was tall and wore a wide brimmed felt hat, dark coat and light pants. The other man was shorter of stature and dressed in black. When he subsequently saw the prisoners he at once identified them as the two men. He saw them go to the door that was found broken open and heard a noise as if it was violently opened, after which they disappeared either inside the building or around it. He was positive the two men seen were Hynes and Watson. It was then about 4 a. m. or a little after.

At this point the court adjourned till 2 o'clock p. m.

Upon the reconvening of court in the afternoon several additional witnesses were examined for the defense. Among these were three or four printers who had worked at the Herald office the night before the fire. All swore to the actual time of leaving the office in the morning and agreed in saying that it was at ten minutes past four and a noise as if it was stated, had a watch and this furnished the basis for their statements.

Another witness was called who was from the same office and who boarded at the Doran House, opposite the Bee office. He stated that he had walked slowly down Farnam street to the house and reached there in about fifteen minutes. He did not go to bed but sat on the front stoop smoking until after daylight. His position over-looked the Bee office and vicinity, and he did not see anyone or anything until the alarm of fire was turned on.

The case was then argued by Mr. Connel for the prosecution and Col. E. F. Symph for the defense. Both conducted their cases ably and summed them up with good effect. The latter argued that the proof was not sufficient to hold the prisoners, that they would be unable to give bonds and it would be a hardship to confine them until a grand jury should convene, especially as they propose to stay in Omaha anyway, and in case any new proof was received would be ready to answer for themselves.

Mr. Connel stated that a crime was shown to have been committed beyond a doubt and the facts in general admitted, that the proof against the prisoners was so conclusive that the court was warranted in holding them over.

The judge took the first view of the case and discharged the defendants.

ORIGIN OF AMMONIA. Ammonia is obtained in large quantities by the putrefaction of the urine of animals.—Antropologia Britanica. A Young Man Robbed. Yesterday Gustave Raff, who boarded at Henry Oatley's on Sixteenth street got up, dressed himself and went to his work. After having been absent about fifteen minutes he remembered that he had left his pocket book, containing $27, hanging upon a table in the room. He hastened back but his pocket book had gone. The only person who had been in the room was an old corn doctor, who occupies the room in company with Teal.

Raff swore out a complaint against Fyge, the corn doctor, and he is now in jail awaiting his examination which will occur this morning at 11 o'clock.

EO. W. HOMAN, JR.

His Collapse in Chicago--Speculation Did It.

How a Friend Came to His Rescue and Was "Done Up."

A singular story, which no doubt interested many Omaha people, was on Wednesday brought to light in the contents of a "suppressed" bill filed in the superior court of Chicago. The Chicago Times, in which it appears says it is a story of misplaced confidence after an almost Damon and Pythias friendship of many years. John R. Case is the complainant and (George W. Homan, Jr., a supposedly wealthy board of trade speculator, and his wife Martha Homan are the defendants. Mr. Case is a man of wealth and lives at the Leland hotel. He says in his bill that for years he has been on terms of the most intimate friendship with the Homans, especially so in relation to Mrs. Homan, whom he had known since 1860, and in whose father's family he had lived when a boy. From such acquaintance with her he had come to regard her with almost "brotherly" affection. He had known Homan about six years, during which time he had been on terms of intimate friendship with him, and, from his apparent goodwill, Homan gained his full confidence and esteem. From repeated conversations with Homan, Case says he supposed that Homan owned a large means and owned considerable property, both real and personal, Homan having often said that he was worth over $150,000. The Homan family resided on Michigan avenue, in fine style, and Case was in the habit of calling on them very often and visiting them confidentially as an intimate friend and almost as a member of the family. In May last Homan was in New York city, and during his absence Mrs. Homan sent a note to Case, at the Leland hotel, saying that she was in great trouble and wanted to see him. He at once called at the family residence, No. 322 Michigan avenue, and found Mrs. Homan apparently in great distress of mind and so indisposed as to be unable to sit up. She told him that her husband was in New York and that they had some deals on the board of trade that were suffering, and, unless immediate relief were afforded, great loss and possibly ruin would ensue. One of the firm of Dwight & Gillette, bankers, had been to see her about matters to be put up, but she did not comprehend just how the matter stood or what the difficulty was. She also informed Case that her husband had made arrangements with the First National bank to borrow $15,000, and that she had agreed to give a mortgage on the Michigan avenue property as security for the loan. Case went the next day and was informed that Homan's margins were exhausted except about $2,000 or $3,000, and that he, Gillette, must have more. Case then went to L. J. Gage, vice president of the first national bank, where he was informed that Homan had been there to borrow the $15,000, but that the bank had declined to loan it on the property. He at once informed Mrs. Homan, who seemed much discouraged and piteously asked what she should do. Case suggested that Gillette might be willing to take a mortgage on the property, but Mrs. Homan refused to give Gillette a mortgage, saying she had no confidence in him. She said that if he could borrow the money he would loan it to her. He was rewarded with profuse thanks, which he now thinks is about all he is likely to receive. The husband returned from New York a few days later, and expressed himself in the highest terms of gratitude for the assistance rendered by Case, remarking that "a friend in need is a friend indeed." Mr. Case now thinks that the proper version by Homan should have been "a friend in need is the friend to bleed."

After some conversation about his eastern trip Homan spoke of Gillette, who, he said, had lately annoyed him for some time. The following day Homan called upon Case and said he was obliged to depend on him for money for Gillette. He and his wife would join in a mortgage of the houses at Nos. 322 and 323 Michigan Avenue, out as he was in a great hurry to go back to New York to finish some business, he might let the mortgage part of it rest for a short time during which he hoped to be able to repay the loan and save the expense of preparing and recording the mortgage. Case thereupon drew his check for $15,000 and gave it to Homan, who remarked that at any time he wanted the mortgage to secure him he could have it, at the same time sending him a promissory note for $15,000 as a memorandum, the note being in no way designed to affect the arrangement as to security. Case let the matter rest until August 12, when, the loan not having been repaid, he went to Homan to get the promised mortgage as security. Homan declined to fulfill the agreement, and admitted that he was not worth any property in his own name, his wife being the owner of all the real estate. Case then reminded him of the instances when he had represented himself as worth a great deal of money, when Homan, the bill alleges, exclaimed: "Yes, I know I am a thief and a liar and all that sort of thing, but that won't mend their intention and I'll pay you as soon as I can." He said that his wife positively refused to give the mortgage or sign a note. Case says that though he has repeatedly asked Mr. and Mrs. Homan to give him security for the loan to them, as they had faithfully agreed to do, they refused to do so, and he charges that it is their intention and design to cheat him out of his $15,000. He therefore asks the court to order a specific performance of the agreement, and to join them from disposing of or incumbering their property. Judge Shepard granted an injunction in accordance with the prayer of the complainant.
