THE ROOFS OF A GREAT CITY. Looking Down on New York and Brooklyn House-tops.

New York Sun. The roofs of New York form an interesting subject for study. They are half a dozen points from which they can be seen—Trinity, St. Peter, the Field building, the produce exchange tower, the Equitable Company's roof, and the flat, broad bridge pole of the western union building.

How the Chinese Prepare for Battle. New York Graphic. The following curious proclamation is said to have been sent out as a "general order of the day" some time before a battle was expected between the Chinese and French.

Three days before the battle the bravest shall eat the flesh of the wild zebra in order to acquire the terrible voice of the untamable beast.

Close to the bridge on the New York side are many blocks of tenements, and their roofs are very interesting. Nearly all are fenced in at the sides, and many of them are boarded over.

On other tenement roofs, seated in the shadows of drying sheets or counterpanes, are sewing women or groups of talkative girls, while perched on chimney tops or on the very edges of lofty platforms little boys send their kites up into the sluggish air currents over head.

At night nearly all the roofs are shadowy and dark. The towers and chimneys show indistinctly above a dim line of doll brown. One roof, however, is distinguished among all the others.

A CARD. To all who are suffering from errors and indiscretions of youth, nervous weakness, early decay, etc.

The Boy Showed Him the Veteran. "Oh, pa! look at the soldiers!" said a little boy to his father Wednesday as he saw the light infantry start for Springfield.

With the condiments generally attainable it is not possible to produce a mayonnaise dressing for salads that will compare with Dukes' Dressing. Buy a bottle and be convinced.

Swimming the Niagara. Victor Hugo Vogel, of Heidelberg, Germany, barber at the Clifton House, swam the river Wednesday afternoon at the ferry in five minutes and eighteen seconds.

A ROMANTIC COURSHIP. A Scotch Lassie Comes Over the Deep to Wed Her True Laddie.

From the New York Truth. The 9 o'clock fast Western express, the first out of Jersey City yesterday morning with a shrill scream of defiance, leaving a long trail of black smoke behind, carried among its passengers bound for the far west a young and loving pair, just starting out on the journey of life along the matrimonial highway.

Through vicissitudes that would make many a brave heart quail, these young people have ever kept on the even tenor of their way, and though the course of their true love was not by any means smooth or a path of roses, they were a chain so strong that no trial was able to break its love links.

Eight years ago, in the charming city of Aberdeen, Scotland, Andrew Williams, then a canny Scotch lad, 19 years old, fell in love with bewitching Annie Patterson, a lassie fair to look upon, just budding into sweet womanhood.

These seemed to be no reason why the two young people should not wed in times of peace. Andrew became the acknowledged fiance of Annie, and the years began to slip by, the old folks took to shaking their heads ominously and put their fingers in the pie.

"If you canna wed the young lass, Andrew, had I's father said, "for ye be that poor man, but ye canna much moor na keep ye self."

Five days before the battle the bravest shall eat the flesh of the wild zebra in order to acquire the terrible voice of the untamable beast.

An Arctic Cattle Pasture. An examination of the map will show that the peninsula of Alaska jutting out to the north Pacific ocean is prolonged by a range of islands which extend like stepping stones to Kamtschatka in Asia.

While her lover was toiling in America Annie took service in a large dressmaking establishment in her native town, and waited as the year rolled by. Her friends called her foolish for being true to her lover, and many told her that she would never return and she need not expect to see him again.

"Aren't they saying horrid things about the Mother Hubbard?" she said, as she looked up into his manly face. "Yes," he replied, "I believe they are."

"Then you don't read them, my love?" "Oh, yes, I read them, but I think they are shocking."

A Happy Prospect. From the New York Truth. "Dear Amanda, it's all right. We'll get married before Christmas," said Mr. Ernest Heidelberg.

THE TERRIBLE DRAIN. Which scrofula has upon the system must be purged, and the blood must be purified, or serious consequences will ensue.
