Chicago, September 5.—James M. Gamble, one of the best known real estate men in the city, who represents many millions of out of town capital, was found in the alley at the rear of the house No. 434 Congress street, at about 3 o'clock this morning. He was almost naked; his face was terribly disfigured; his lower lip was cut off by being caught on a telegraph wire, and one of his legs was broken.

He was found by a colored man who summoned the patrol wagon. The police who carried him to the Palmer house, Gamble said that he had leaped out of the third story window of house No. 434 Congress street, had caught on the telegraph wires and then fallen to the ground. He vouchsafed no further explanation.

It is known that at 2 o'clock this morning, a constable went to the third story of house No. 434 Congress street with a man named Shock. The latter is declared to pass as the outraged husband who was prepared to discover his wife in flagrante delicto with a well known young man about town, last night, in a room in a flat on the third story of the house above mentioned.

James M. Gamble, the wealthy real estate dealer, was found bruised and maimed in the alley with a very few minutes after the visit was made by the constable and his partner. The building is filled with flats and one of them is occupied by "Mrs. J. W. Johnson," a widow, fat, fair and forty. With her reside her two sons, newly grown men, and a daughter named Nellie Shock. If the mother is good looking, the young woman is beautiful. She is the wife of a constable whose name is Shock, who makes his headquarters at a saloon on South Clark street. The young man who has been seen with Gamble, being living with his father for some time. It now appears that he has been scheming to entrap her in a matrimonial delusion with a young girl named Nellie Shock in business and social circles named Griswold. The explanation of Gamble's wild tumble is that when the officer entered the flat he began pulling the young woman by the hair, and she was thrown from the window. She fell into the alley, and was still lying, quietly dressed and walked off in the confusion.

An Interesting Paper on America's Great Future.

Almost Satirical Reply of an English Wiseacre.

Delegates Present From the Old World—Welcoming Fete by the Philadelphians—Proposed Excursions.

PHILADELPHIA, September 5.—The British Science association did not put in an appearance at the session of the American association today, but in the evening they attended the reception given in their honor at the Academy of Music by the citizens of Philadelphia, at which the American association, the Institute of Mining engineers and a number of foreign delegates were present. After the adjournment of the general session of the association this morning, several sections met here and discussed the papers coming before them.

In the economic science section, lady visitors were a notable feature. John Biddolph Martin, of London, England, read a paper on the future of the United States. His main point was embraced in a query as to the means by which the enormous population of the future, which the rapid expansion of our soil forebodes, is to be fed. The conditions of Great Britain would long supply the market for cheap American food products, that as the result of railway food products, we would have a large accession of bona fide farmers, and the ultimate abolition of the national debt would create a fall in the rate of interest, which would be seriously felt by those depending upon fixed incomes, and further, result in lower wages and prices generally; that the continuation of a large national income from customs and duties on American goods would result in the abolition of the tariff, and with the increase of population and the diffusion of wealth, individual fortunes would be less and more and less important almost entirely in the hands of the masses in produce or stocks.

In the section on geology and geography, the most interesting subject was relative to the level of the Atlantic ocean and Gulf of Mexico and remarks on the Gulf stream and deep sea temperatures. Professor J. E. Hilgard introduced the matter by exhibiting the original continental outline and frontier of the Arcadian peninsula. Captain Pitt, of the British navy, humorously observed that as he belonged geographically to the Gulf of Mexico, he was apprehensive that Mr. Hilgard's territorial dominion was about to be ruthlessly abridged, but with respect to the reference which had been made to the West Indies, he would cordially agree that they did both geographically and politically, belong to the United States and he could wish the American flag to fly over the West Indies as well as another island, one across the Atlantic that possibly might be converted and on that point he thought England would be willing to discuss any practical proposition necessary to preserve her present friendly relations with America. The proposals upon the ranks of the association by excursions to the West Indies and to the Gulf of Mexico were warmly received. Ample arrangements have been made for the entertainment of the visitors at Long Branch, Cape May, Atlantic City, and in the adjacent resorts.

THE NEW YORK CENTRAL'S STRAIGHT.

NEW YORK, September 5.—The Post financial says: The weakness of the New York Central is due to the selling in London, where it was announced yesterday evening that the company declared a dividend of 10 for the quarter to June 30th, instead of usual 2 per cent. The official announcement that the effect was not felt here until today, but in view of the fact that the company did not earn 1 per cent net over the interest, rent and taxes of the last quarter to June 30th, and that the total net earnings for the year to September, in excess of those can scarcely exceed 4 per cent. The reduction of the dividends is a serious matter, and it is probable that the company will be forced to cut into its business and fixing various rates for it. The New York Central will not earn 1 per cent net, probably not pay over that rate of dividends again. The price of stock, however, is well sustained, notwithstanding the lowering. It is apparent that the market is still under the control of the bulls.
