COUNCIL BLUFFS. ADDITIONAL LOCAL NEWS. THE MURDER COMPLETE. McGonigal Dies from the Effects of the Stinging Received Here. Arrest of one of the Suspected Slayers.

The news comes from Woodbine that McGonigal who was mysteriously and brutally slugged in this city had died at his home in Woodbine and was buried yesterday. The police have been for some time on the case. There were few clues to work upon, the man's condition when found being such that he could not give any information. It is learned, however, that he was seen at a late hour in company with two colored men. McGonigal had been drinking heavily, and was about to take the two darkies in to treat them. Other information has been gained pointing to these two colored men as the least knowing more about the affair that has yet come out, and yesterday officer O'Brien arrested Cliff Johnson on suspicion, it being supposed that he is the one who struck the deadly blows. McGonigal was robbed of a $20 gold piece, also gold watch and chain, and if the clues now obtained prove as reliable as they appear, there will be a network of evidence which will surround the guilty man and bring them to justice. It is understood that one witness is ready to testify that Johnson struck the blows to his personal knowledge. It is hoped that the guilty party may be caught and punished, for the deed was a most brutal and cowardly one, and one in which there seem no possible extenuating circumstances.

Wrought iron ranges at reduced prices. DeVol & Wright, 504 Broadway. Railway Disasters. A gentleman who arrived from St. Louis over the Wabash yesterday says that the engine which went through the bridge between Marysville and Stansbury was still in the water, and that passengers had to be transferred, the bridge not being in condition for trains. The body of the engineer, Harvey Cornish, was recovered and taken to Stansbury, where his wife and family lived. Cornish formerly lived in St. Joe, and was a man of considerable property. George Chamberlain, the engineer killed in the collision on the Union Pacific, as narrated in yesterday's Bee, formerly lived here, and was switching in the Chicago & Rock Island yards. He then went on as engineer, and from there to the Kansas City road, and then to the Union Pacific as night engineer on the bridge division, a position which he held for about two years. He was then transferred to the main line of the Union Pacific.

IOWA ITEMS. There are 650 creameries in Iowa. Missouri Valley hangs up $1,400 for running races on the 14th and 16th. An Indian burial place has been discovered within the corporate limits of Algona. The State Teachers' association will be held at Des Moines on the 22d, 23d and 24th of December. Bishop Honnhey dedicated a new Catholic church at Worthington, Dubuque County, on the second. The new Methodist church and parsonage at Sioux City, which were dedicated last Sunday, cost $25,000. The east side of Des Moines contains more wickedness to the square inch than any district of similar size in the state. In prospecting for coal at Peterson a 10-foot vein was struck of what is pronounced the best quality of potter's clay. The independent school district of Iowa City, according to the census just taken, has 1,976 boys and 2,250 girls of school age. Saloon raids are frequent in Des Moines. Although prohibition is strictly enforced, there were 46 arrests for drunkenness during September. Mrs. Jacob Shawver, for nearly forty years a much-esteemed resident of Cedar county, committed suicide on the 30th ult. by severing the jugular vein with a razor. Hon. Michael Donohue, who was mayor of Davenport in 1867-8, and for many years a prominent citizen of that city, died suddenly of dropsy on the 2d, in his 69th year. During the five months beginning with May and ending with September, the little town of Springville, Linn county, shipped 635,000 pounds of Butter, and 122,000 pounds of cheese. A Des Moines man, said to be worth $50,000, was recently detected stealing a mechanic's tools. The size of his pile kept his name out of the papers. His petty thefts are dubbed "kleptomaniac."

St. Nicholas for October. Always bear in mind that it is the muzzle of a gun that is dangerous; therefore, never allow the muzzle to point toward yourself or any other person. Never put your hand over the muzzle of a gun, nor allow another person to handle your gun while it is loaded. Use a breech-loading gun with rebounding hammers. A muzzle loading gun is both inconvenient and dangerous to load. Hammerless guns are beautiful and convenient weapons, but they are not fit for boys to use, especially boys who are just beginning to shoot. If you are hunting in company with others, be careful and courteous, always refraining from shooting at birds that are flushed nearer to you than you are, and do not allow your gun, under any circumstances, to point at, or in the direction of, any human being. Open your gun at the breach and take out both shells before climbing over a house or firing the gun to a person not used to firing a gun in a person's face. Never drag a gun toward you muzzle foremost. Treat an unloaded gun with the same care that you would use in a loaded one. It is in the hands of the thoroughly clean and dry gun after it has been used all day, when not in use it should be kept in a woolen or leather case. Never shoot at harmless and worthless birds, "just to try your hand." Most small birds are pretty, some of them sing sweetly and nearly all of them are useful as insect destroyers. It is brutal to kill them for any other than scientific or artistic purposes. When out hunting observe everything so as to remember the minutest details of visible nature. Knowledge thus gathered is invaluable. Boys out hunting together should be very cautious. Think over, and there, one may be quite near another and not see him.

HOW COUNCIL BLUFFS DOES IT Mayor Vaughan Tells How the Bluffs City Gets Revenue From Saloons—Negotiating City Bonds—Assessment Returns.

One of the conspicuous figures at the Knights of Pithias encampment is Mayor Vaughan, of Council Bluffs. The chief executive of the Bluffs city is not ashamed of his rank as an official nor his position in a number of secret societies, as is shown by the huge gold badge which appears prominently on the bosom of his dress coat. This badge was presented to him on his recent return from New York, where he successfully negotiated some $175,000 of Council Bluffs paving and sewer bonds, after other financiers had given up the job in despair. The body of the badge is comprised of the emblems of the different orders of which he is a member. Suspended to it is a pendant bearing the word "Mayor." The circle around the pendant is set with diamonds, rubies and pearls. That is the kind of a man the mayor of Council Bluffs is. A reporter interviewed him yesterday with the hope of getting points on municipal business, and was not disappointed. The note book man first asked whether Council Bluffs got a revenue from saloons. "Yes, Council Bluffs gets $400 a year from each of its fifty saloons. I do not find the saloon men opposed to paying. I am informed that two or three are not paying, and have sent word by the police that if the money is not in when I return they must close. The ordinance licenses the selling of beverages not prohibited by law. The state supreme court has not yet passed on the constitutionality of the new prohibition law, and we do not assume to say what beverages are prohibited. The saloon men know that while they may public sentiment in the city is on their side, and so generally have paid license just as before July 4. They prefer to pay rather than get in a quarrel with the city. Pottawattamie county gave a large majority against the prohibition amendment—I understand Woodbury county is that way—and our grand jury do not indict liquor sellers." "Does Council Bluffs' debt exceed the five per cent constitutional limit?" "Yes, and no. Our valuation is $4,000,000 on property really worth $16,000,000, and we have a bonded municipal debt proper of $160,000. The water-works are owned by a company, not by the city. The new issue of something over $200,000 sewer and paving bonds, part of which are not yet sold because we do not need the money, would exceed the constitutional limit. But I have the opinion of the attorney-general and members of the supreme court that these bonds are not a city debt within the meaning of the constitutional limit. The city has a lien on the lots abutting on the streets that are sewered and paved, and the city, in effect, only guarantee the bonds issued to pay for the work, which, in the end, will be paid by the owners of the lots that are improved by paving and sewerage." "We did you find the market for city bonds in New York?" "I had to go outside the dealers and bankers to sell them. When I found the men who had their own money to put in I made sales. One man took $90,000. The trouble with Iowa bonds is this: The assessment only shows about one-quarter of the real value of the property in a town; in many cases not that. The capitalists ask what is the assessed value of property in the city offering bonds, and what the present bonded indebtedness is. Every city in Iowa is bonded beyond the legal limit, directly or indirectly, and it is because the assessed value does not show the real value of the property in a town. So much must be raised by tax, and if there is a low assessment there must be a high levy. The capitalist will look at the city's ability to pay, and the high tax levy looks bad. It is had to convince him that the assessment is only 25 or 30 per cent of the real value. All this hurts the sale of Iowa securities. While New York cities sell their securities bearing 3 and 4 per cent, Iowa cities are glad to sell at 7 per cent. Yet Iowa stands high in the favor of eastern capitalists. One thing that would help would be a law requiring Iowa insurance companies to invest in Iowa securities. Other states do that way, and it makes a market for home securities."

Telephone Opera in Belgium. Under this head we recorded last week the successful transmission of instrumental music from Brussels to Antwerp. Intelligence now reaches us of an opera played in Brussels being heard by the king and queen of the Belgians at Ostend. Six microphones on the Van Rysselberghe systems had been placed in front of the footlights, facing the performers. Two similar instruments were also fitted, one on either side of the conductor's desk, at the height of the musical instruments in the orchestra; and for future occasions it is determined to add a double microphone in the prompter's box. All these microphones were actuated by a single Faure accumulator placed under the steps with the microphones coils, the latter being all mounted in quantity, and really forming but one and the same transmitting instrument. As in the case of the experiments recorded last week, the circuit was formed by one of the overhead wires of the Bell Telephone company, leading from the central office to the northern terminus, where it joined the state telegraph line to the Ostend station, which was in direct communication with two Bell receiving instruments, fixed in the drawing room of the royal chalet. M. Berlin, engineer, who had directed the installation with M. Van Rysselberghe, remained at Ostend, while the latter gentleman went backward and forward from the Monnaie theater (the Brussels opera house) to the telegram office at the northern terminus watching how the instruments worked. These had been placed in the theater during the day by M. Mourion's men in charge of the foreman, Hobbs. The experiment is reported to have again succeeded beyond expectation, and on the following day M. Van Rysselberghe had the honor of being received by the Queen who is known to be an assiduous opera goer as well as an accomplished musician. Her Majesty spoke of having heard perfectly the details of the first and last acts of "Faust," and made some valuable suggestions for a permanent installation.

Tattooing Among Alaska Indians. A man who had passed much time trapping and hunting in Alaska says: Although the Yukon Indians have abandoned many of their old customs, under the teaching of occasional missionaries, is different from any I ever saw or heard of. Instead of pricking the stuff in with sharpened bones or needles, they make a paste out of charcoal and grease, soak a thread in it, punch a needle through the flesh so that it comes out at a different hole from the one where it entered, and then draw the thread through under the skin. The operation is painful for the flesh swells up and looks very much inflamed. Men tattoo only their hands and wrists with pictures of the nobler animals or fish, but the women tattoo their faces also. These latter begin the process when they are quite young, making birds, turtles or some other insignificant things on their hands and wrists, while they draw lines of different kinds on their chins and the lower part of their cheeks. As a rule this tattooing is done entirely in blue, but now and then there is an Indian who has dotted red spots through the blue.

Why He Went Into Saloons. From the Merchant Traveler. "My, my," said a temperance advocate to a friend of his whom he met coming out of a saloon. "I didn't know you went into such places." "Ah, indeed? Then you have learned something this morning." "Yes, and I am sorry I have learned it." "I don't think it very wrong." "Ah, my friend, that is where the harm is. Your finer senses are blunted by such associations, and the demon drink is changed in your sight to a beautiful stream, whose song transforms you into a beast. Why, dear friend, oh, why, do you go into those places?" "Why, really, old friend, I can't say, unless it is that the drunken saloon-keepers have become so aristocratic they won't bring it out to a customer and let him drink it on the street. I'm bound to have it, so you see I've got to go in after it." "Wm. Burchmaster, a young carpenter of Burlington, 24 years of age, was swinging at the poor farm on the 2nd with a daughter of the steward. The swing was hung on a heavy timber between two trees. The timber snapped in two, and the jagged end of one piece struck the young man on the top of the head, crushing the skull and producing death soon after. The young girl was thrown in an opposite direction and was not injured."
