WEAVER MUST GO. JIM LAIRD'S days are numbered.

VOTE for William G. Whitmore for the legislature.

THE season of nailing campaign lies is nearly over.

As yet no scandal has been discovered against Belva Lockwood.

THE "funeral directors" are a lively fight for the coronership.

CHARLES H. BROWN will carry Douglas county by an overwhelming majority.

NEW YORK never went back on a Jim for president yet, and it is not likely to do so this year.

They say that Belva Lockwood used to whip her husband, but this ought not to count against her.

THE wire-pullers will monopolize the work of Tuesday and the wires will have to go it alone Tuesday night.

AN Iowa man is advertising for a lost parrot. We haven't heard of any hawk-stump speaker disappearing.

JOHN BAUMER is wasting his time in trying to be elected to the legislature in the face of his unsavory record in that body.

The fiercest part of the fight on next Tuesday will be between the candidates for coroner. The question is who shall bury us?

It is feared that the St. John scandal will defeat the prohibitionist candidate for president. It is certainly an overdose of coldwater.

Nobody can have any reason to complain of Nebraska falls except candidates who have been put up to be knocked down.

BRECHER has the advantage over other campaign speakers. He can deliver a political-religious harangue to-morrow and call it gospel.

NO MAN in Nebraska has a better legislative record than Charles H. Brown, and the people of the first district propose to elect him as the successor of Congressman Weaver.

The president will leave Washington for New York on Monday to vote. It is to be hoped that the party workers at the polls will treat Chester rather humanely.

The enthusiastic republican feeling in Lemars, Iowa, plainly indicates that the majority of the English colony there located have forgotten the existence of a Golden Club.

THERE seems to be every likelihood that the New York city democracy will be so taken up in watching their mayors run that they will forget all about the Buffalo horse.

THERE is no truth in the rumor that some candidates were nominated by the late county convention merely for the purpose of giving the committee an object of assessment.

THE truly good Christian candidate will attend church to-morrow and pray for success. The others will go into the library and study up Jefferson's manual in anticipation of future glory.

MAUD S. and Jay-Eye-See have been trying to lower their record all summer. If they could only accomplish the feat with the ease of some of the Douglas county legislative candidates what phenomenal time would be made.

In the death of Frederick Kapp, the distinguished German scholar, this country lost a staunch friend. The revolution of 1847, in which he participated, caused him to take refuge in New York, where he resided several years practicing law and devoting his leisure time to historical writings. Among the productions of his pen one might mention "The Slavery Question in America," "History of Slavery in the United States," "Lives of Generals Stenben and Kalb," "History of German Emigration to America," and several other books of worth. On his return to his native country in 1870 he was immediately chosen to a seat in the Prussian lower house and the German Reichstag. It was due to his energy that the first collection of works pertaining to America can be found in the Reichstag library to-day.

NEBRASKA IN THE NEXT CONGRESS.

The question that the people of Nebraska are to decide next Tuesday is whether they are to be represented in the next congress, or whether the corporations, that have their headquarters in New York and Boston, shall represent them in the national legislature by their own attorneys and creatures. This and this alone is the issue upon which the people of this state are divided. The frantic appeals in behalf of A. J. Weaver and James Laird, because they are candidates of the republican party, are intended to divert attention from the real issue. Honest republicans who place the welfare of the state above party success cannot be deluded by appeals to stand by the republican ticket simply because it is a presidential year. If there was any danger to republican supremacy in the defeat of Weaver and Laird republicans might do violence to their personal convictions, but there is no such danger to be apprehended from the election of Charles H. Brown and J. H. Stickle.

The election of a president of the United States by the house of representatives in case no candidate should receive a majority of the entire electoral college will devolve upon the present congress, and not upon the next. The presidential electors will meet in December to cast their votes in their respective states, and in February the returns are to be opened in joint convention of the two houses, and there they will be canvassed and counted. Should either Blaine or Cleveland not have a majority of the electoral college, the present delegation of Nebraska, composed of Valentine, Weaver and Laird, will have the casting of one vote for this state for the next president. Each state in the Union is upon an equal footing, New York, for instance, having only one vote the same as Rhode Island or Nevada.

If there are still any republicans who delude themselves with the idea that the next congress will have something to do with the election of the next president they should be undeceived. The next congress will be purely a legislative body, and we defy any republican leader or paper to name a single political issue, outside of the election of speaker or clerk of the house, upon which there will be a strictly party line division in the next congress. Now the last republican congress was presided over by Mr. Keifer, of Ohio, who was not only a man of mediocre ability, but a subservient tool of the great corporations and capitalists—a man utterly devoid of principle, veracity and decency. When his term expired his own party retired him and he will never be heard of again Carlisle. The present speaker of the house, is a democrat, but no man can charge him with dishonesty, incompetency, or subserviency to the corporate interests. The only difference in the rule of Keifer and that of Carlisle is that under the former the chairman of each committee was a republican, and the latter a democrat. Nebraska reaped the advantage of Keifer's rule in Valentine's chairmanship and Nye's six dollar clerkship. Possibly there may have been a messenger or clerk of some folding room, who originally hailed from Nebraska, employed by Keifer, and there all the benefits so far as this state is concerned ended. Does it make any difference to the people of Nebraska whether the next house of representatives will employ three or four political deadbeats, from the republican or democratic fold, who hang around our principal towns? On the questions that most vitally concern our people the parties will not be divided in the next house on strict party lines any more than they are in the present house.

On the tariff issue Randall stands aside by side with Pig Iron Kelly, and Senator Van Wyck ranges himself by the side of Carlisle. There are republican revenue reformers and democratic protectionists, and republican high tariff men.

On the railway issue and the regulation of interstate commerce no party division can possibly be made. Under Keifer, the railway committee was packed with corporation attorneys, and every bill presented was promptly pigeon-holed. Under Carlisle the committee was fairly selected, but during its labors the members were manipulated by the monopoly lobby, and it has failed to afford remedies for the grievances under which the people suffer.

Should the people of Nebraska be misrepresented by Weaver and Laird for the next two years simply because they are republicans? Shall they ratify the nominations made by the gravel traders of the B. & M. and the bulldozers of Jim Laird? Shall they stultify themselves by ratifying the nomination of Weaver in the face of the notorious fact that he is the choice of a combination of corporation henchmen bossed by Thurston and the political syndicate which has its headquarters in the Omaha custom house? Two years ago there might have been good reason for submission to the political dictatorship of the railroad bosses, because the present delegation in congress might have had to choose the president of the senate, but such is not the case to-day. If Blaine and Logan are elected the republican party with its executive head and republican senate will have just as much control of the machinery of government as it ever had. We have stated before and repeat now that the country survived a democratic congress under the last term of Grant. The rebel brigadiers captured one wing of the capital two years ago, but the government at Washington still lives, and the stars and

A Strong Endorsement.

Mr. J. E. Riley, candidate on the democratic and anti-monopoly ticket for the legislature, receives the following strong endorsement from his home paper, the Morning Telegram of Plattburg, New York, of which city his father is mayor: "We learn by Omaha papers that J. E. Riley is a candidate for the Nebraska legislature. We shall be surprised if he does not call him to the post on for which he has been named. Mr. Riley is a man who commands respect in all his undertakings. Commencing life on a farm, he has by untiring energy and perseverance, worked his way through college, paying his own expenses by teaching during the winter season. Since he graduated he has been actively engaged in business. Settling in Omaha about three years since, we do not doubt that he has been successful in his honesty, integrity and intelligent enterprise that he exhibited while struggling without means to acquire a liberal education. He belonged to a class of men who are not spoiled by education. He represents the highest type of business man and would be an able and judicious arbitrator between conflicting interests requiring legislative regulation. If the people of Omaha appreciate his character and ability, good men of all parties will see to it that he is elected."

THE STOWAWAY.

The Trouble Steamships Have with People Who Try to Steal Rides.

From the San Francisco Alta. "Yes," said an ex-mate of one of the line steamers, who was on duty at the Alta yesterday, "stowaways are great annoyances, especially to the officers of sea-going vessels; and it sometimes happens that their presence on shipboard is the cause of much trouble, expense, and frequently disaster. "I suppose some of your experiences in this line would prove interesting to the public, would they not?" asked his reporter. "Well," he replied, "I don't know how interesting it might be to the public to read about such experiences, but I do know that some of those blasted freeriders have made it very interesting for me before now. "I would be very averse to relating some of these experiences!" "No," replied he, "not if my name can be left in its pristine obscurity." On being assured that he would be given the following interesting bits of history from his life as a sailor on the high seas: "I hardly know where to begin," said he, striking his gaiter, and thoughtfully, "but I guess my experience on this coast are about as peculiar as any." "The general supposition," he continued, "is that all stowaways crawl off into some obscure and unfrequented part of the vessel and stay there until the ship is well out to sea. This is a wide misconception of the ways of the average stowaway, although such a plan is sometimes adopted by them. "We are not so much bothered now as formerly, owing to the strict rules adopted to thwart them. Their usual and most successful plan is to manage in some way to get on board a few hours before the ship starts, and then stay out of sight as much as possible until the passenger begins to disembark. They are then come boldly out and mingle among the passengers, no one knowing but that they have tickets. On this end of the line when tickets are taken up it is too late to put the stowaways ashore, and the captain is compelled to take them to the first port which happens to be Astoria a distance of 500 miles. Sometimes they are put into the coal bunkers and made to work their passage; but this does not usually pan out satisfactorily, as they get sea sick. The dear public is acutely at fault again in the matter of the class of stowaways we have. They honestly believe that these troublesome individuals are of the genus tramp—ragged, hungry and dirty. In fact, however, such is not the case; for nine out of ten are well-dressed, well-fed and evidently of that class of individuals who 'travel on shape,' or, more properly, 'cheek.' "Are you ever troubled with female bummers of this class?" interrupted the reporter. "Yes, but not near as often as you might think. I remember one case in particular, where the culprit was a young and rather good looking woman. The captain was very angry and made her think he was going to put her ashore on the bleak Oregon coast. She of course resorted to tears and supplication, and the result was the passengers made up a note and paid her fare to San Francisco."

YESTERDAY was one of the greatest memorial days among the Lutherans. It is the anniversary of that celebrated day in 1517 on which Martin Luther nailed up his ninety-five theses against the doctrine of indulgences on the door of the castle church at Wittenberg. It is generally called "Reformation day" and on it was taken the first practical step towards a separation from the Church of Rome which is now religiously followed by upwards of 50,000,000 Lutherans.

THE republican state nominees are groaning under the heavy assessments which they have been compelled to pay. Had the state convention put an acceptable ticket in the field it would not have been necessary to tax the candidates to the extent of twenty-five per cent. of their salary.

THE ex rebel general Marmaduke, who is now running for governor of Missouri, is likely to be buried in St. Louis by 20,000 republican majority and the Germans will superintend the interment. Still we are told by democratic journals that the Germans have deserted the republican ranks.

TELEPHONE managers seem to imagine they are bank chasers. Information just comes from Council Bluffs that the head of the telephone office there is accused of embezzlement and but a short time ago the Lincoln manager skipped by the light of the moon.

THERE has not been an announcement as far as we know of a grand rally on Sunday next, but undoubtedly in Chicago and other moral places they will have one on the "grand sacred concert" plan.

IT is now asserted by the democratic press with the enthusiasm of having "gained a point" that the late Charles J. Folger would have opposed Blaine if he had lived. Very fortunately the republican party does not have to go to graveyards for support.

THERE seems to be about as much anxiety among democrats as to whether Roxie Conkling will announce his preference between now and Tuesday as there is about the result of the New York election.

BRECHER has showed his consistency in one single instance in the present campaign. He is opposed to Joy in this world but undoubtedly he is in friendly accord with joy in the next.

THE most malicious campaign lie that has so far been circulated is that an Omaha editor has wagered $1,000 on election. It ought to be nailed at once.

THE FALLS CITY MYSTERY.

Arrest of Two Men Charged With Smothering Mrs. Stroder. The mysterious death of Mrs. Carrie Stroder in Falls City, on the night of the 23d is being thoroughly investigated by the coroner, and two arrests have been made. Mrs. S. was a laundress who loved to stimulate her muscle with frequent bowls of whisky. Sunday afternoon the husband discovered the "little brown jug" from which she drew her liquid provender, and smashed it. For this deliberate assault on her rights and liberty, Mrs. S. threatened to sue for damages, and shortly thereafter she was found dead in her room. The investigation by the coroner showed she had been smothered, by what means is not fully known. She had evidently tried to get to bed as she had nothing on her person but her underclothes. There were no marks of violence on her person. The two men arrested on the strength of the testimony before the coroner are George W. Thompson, a disolute sewing machine peddler who had occasionally slept in the room, and a crosby named Herbert Glenn, a bartender at Meckler's saloon. They were in the room that night and hastily left it at an early hour in the morning. The preliminary examination will be held to-day.

Cuticura

Miss Boynton's Case of Skin and Blood Disease. The Most Remarkable Cure on Record.

I have been afflicted for one year and nine months with what the doctors called rupa. I was taken with it in my arms and body, my feet became so swollen that I was perfectly helpless, sores broke out on my body and face, my appetite left me, I could not sleep night or day, and soon became so weakened that I longed to die. In this condition after trying various remedies, I engaged two homeopathic physicians, Dr. J. M. and Dr. J. W., and after their treatment a year and a half, and failed to get any relief. My friends then advised me to try Cuticura, and I did so. I used it for a few weeks, and I feel like a new man. My skin is now clear, my blood is pure, and I am able to do my usual work.
