PAINTING THE SKY.

The Democrats Celebrate Whether or no and Make Night Hideous for Republicans.

In accordance with the flaming posters scattered about Saturday announcing that the democrats would in the evening "paint the sky," there was a general hurrah. Some of the most prominent and level-headed of the party thought such a celebration was a little too premature, and would have nothing to do with it, but a goodly number decorated their houses and places of business. Bonfires were started up in the streets and for several hours there was the firing of shot guns and revolvers, the sending up of rockets, the glare of red lights, the hoarse shouts of tired throats, and the unearthly howling of innumerable tin horns. There were crowds of people on the main streets, but there was little to see, though much to hear. There seemed no method or definite arrangements, but simply a general confused yell and hurrah. A so-called procession was formed, but it was like the rest of the rejoicing—decidedly informal. A few hundred of a motley crowd of boys and men went through the streets with bands of music howling and hooting, and seemed determined only on making as much noise as possible. The only charitable construction to be placed on their actions was that their enthusiasm swept away their judgment. There were a few with torches, a few with Chinese lanterns, a great many with brooms, a dozen horseback, a good many armed with tin horns, a few men, a great many boys and a few foolish fellows costumed in ridiculous Mother Hubbards, and wearing yells of long hair, and bearing a banner, "The Audubon Club." This was probably intended as a sharp take-off on the fact that some worthy women took part in a republican parade, but it was an insult to the respectable wives, daughters and sisters of respectable citizens, and such an insult as was uncalculated for and inexcusable. The respectable portion of the democratic party must have been ashamed of some of the rowdy features of the parade. Many of the decorations and illuminations along the streets were beautiful, and the enthusiasm of democrats was such as to convince lookers-on that they really felt that they had something to exult over, and that victory was surely theirs. The demonstration was got up in short notice, and hence did not compare favorably with previous efforts. One of the features of the parade was the "shot-gun brigade." Composed of thirty men, under command of A. C. Graham and Mart Hardin. They kept firing paper shells, and in all discharged 3000. Great care was taken to prevent accidents, and luckily no harm resulted, though this part of the proceeding was very risky. The music was furnished by the Union Pacific and the Bavarian and the Independent bands, three in all.

IOWA ITEMS.

Davenport voted by a considerable majority to buy a park.

The vote of Buena Vista county shows a population of 11,000.

Anderson's new opera house in Iowa Falls will comfortably seat 1,000 people.

A barbed wire company is being organized in Waterloo with a capital of $120,000.

Des Moines registered 8,205 voters. The total vote of Polk county in 1880 was 8,172.

A man named Sutliff, living on a farm in Mills county, suicided last week. He had been ill for some time, and despairing of recovery violently ended his troubles.

Mrs. John Halverson, of Sioux City, was seriously injured by a runaway team last week. She was thrown from the wagon to the ground, sustaining fractures of both limbs.

N. A. Baldwin, a former employe of the Burlington road, was recently convicted at Mt. Pleasant of embezzlement, and sentenced to ten and a half years in the penitentiary.

Owen Kimball, a boy of 18, left his home in Miles, Jackson county, about a week ago, and it is the opinion of physicians that unless he returns soon his mother will either die or become insane through grief and anxiety.

J. S. Monk, an attorney formerly of Ottawa, but now of Chicago, has been presented with a gold watch by the home-owners of Monona county for his successful legal services in their behalf in what is known as the "homestead cases."

Oskaloosa has received another car load of colored men, who have been given work in the mines at that place and at Knoxville Junction. This work of Supt. McNeil, in shipping in the colored men, and throwing the white miners out of employment is condemned by the better citizens of Oskaloosa. It is said that one cannot walk the streets of that city after dark without being subjected to insults by colored toughs.

The Sioux City Journal of Saturday says: An affair of too revolting a nature to be more than alluded to was the talk of the street for a few minutes yesterday. It was the election of the New York election. Mrs. Louisa Madden filed complaint in Justice Mosseau's court, charging her husband, William Madden, with rape on their adopted daughter, Carrie Ferman, a little eight-year-old girl. The justice at first discredited the wife's story, knowing that there had been trouble and talk of divorce between Madden and his wife. It was decided that an investigation be made by surgeons. Dr. Frazee was called, but he declined to act alone in so important a matter, and Dr. Knott went with him to assist in the examination. The surgeons reported that the person of a little girl had been violated, which they, it is understood, indicated, and throwing the white miners out of employment is condemned by the better citizens of Oskaloosa. It is said that one cannot walk the streets of that city after dark without being subjected to insults by colored toughs.

The Women's Christian association recently donated us a neat and comfortable parlor. Some additional games have been added to that room. It now affords an attractive place where any young man is welcome to come with his friends and entertain them as he would in his own home.

The newspapers still take a lively interest in our advancement, and in a friendly way bring our work frequently before the public.

Mr. C. G. Baldwin, of Des Moines, state secretary Y. M. C. A., was with us a few days to help work up the finances. Everywhere the people responded heartily. This is an encouragement to the finance committee, and to all identified with the association.

We extend our thanks to all who have in any way aided us during the quarter, and trust that we may always have their continued support and co-operation.

The next quarter will be months of hard work but more encouraging, as we are beginning to see the fruits of our labor, and practical results usually bring satisfaction. P. J. MONTGOMERY, President. BARRY CURTIS, General Secretary.

BURGLARS BUSY.

The Gang Still Plundering Residences and Succeeding in Avoiding Detection.

The gang of thieves seem to be still sneaking into residences and thus far they seem to escape arrest. Saturday morning it was discovered that some time during the night the fellows had been through J. F. Hart's residence at the corner of Fifth avenue and Eighth street, and carried away a number of valuables. Among the plunder was an overcoat, a dress coat and vest, but these were found afterward in the care of Chas. Eisenman's residence, where they evidently preferred to clothing. At Mr. Eisenman's they got his pocketbook containing $125 in currency and a number of checks. The checks they left on the floor, and also a $10 gold piece which they overlooked in tossing aside the papers. They also got a silver watch and gold chain, besides some articles of lesser value.

The next programme in favor is folded over with two broad hammered-silver bands on white ground. The design is striking and taking, while its companion, with bands of hammered brass, is not nearly so popular. Thus runs the taste of the public.

For well secret society balls, the paper makers have gone the proper thing. The programmes are generally plain white cards of heavy paper, with rounded or square corners. The beveled edge in these may be plain or gilt. In the center of the outside the embossed figure of prominent emblems of the society are placed in silver, gold and bronze. These designs are very neat and beautiful.

The firemen will have a wide range of artistic programmes to choose from. On this same white card a fireman's hat or an engine, with horses on the run, is embossed with gold or silver. Another design most striking and elegantly executed is that of a burning interior seen through the charred edges of a picture. The figures are a fireman, who has dropped his hose to grasp the child a woman is lifting to him. The curling smoke shadows the scene. This is lithographed in beautiful tints. Three other designs with this one complete the set.

For masquerades the designs are plentiful as the stars, and each one is prettier than the last. The leader is the usual white card with a lithographed figure of a page, gentleman in the costume of 76, flower girl, etc.

In the way of programmes for fancy dress parties, the designer has racked his brains to some effect. A pretty conceit is a folded glove in all the fashionable shades. Another new one is a satin sachet, hand-painted on a heavy cream-colored card-board. Another sachet beveled the whole card neatly. The satin is of plain bright color, and is the background for the embossed figures of a flower girl and her attendant. A card with a half etched figure of a girl holding a small folded card bearing on its outside the legend, "Order of the dance," is among the neat and less expensive cards.

Unless the party is to be recherche in the extreme one can hardly choose amiss among the legion of lovely programmes shown. The figures of the price follow the fashionable modes of the design upward, and the country of the school-house dance may be as appropriately adorned with programmes as the swell charity ball.

THE LATEST DANCES.

The Different Steps That Will be Fashionable the Coming Winter.

White society in all its varied phases takes deep interest in the amusements that dot each winter season with bright spots, and nights to be remembered, few people pay attention to anything more than the pure personal enjoyments of these pleasures. In the way of dancing parties, their styles, changes, and especially new figures, everybody is interested. Ask the ordinary society man where the change in the dances originates, and he vaguely answers, "Paris." To find the source of truth in this reply the head of a favorite dancing academy in this city was interviewed last evening, seated in her cozy parlor, the lady answered the question quite fully.

"You should know that in New York there are held the monthly meetings of professors of dancing. The head of this society is a member of similar societies in Paris and elsewhere. New dances are introduced elsewhere are reported to this meeting and a practical illustration of the step or figure is given, the professors standing in line and learning it. If it is considered a desirable acquisition or worthy of living it is at once sent to all other members of the association. Thus with the better class of dancing schools, a new step comes out simultaneously in all the cities. There is much of advantage in this, as formerly, and to some extent
