SUEING ON THE BOND.

The Case of Nelson Against Rasmussen Before the Court.

A Suit Full of Serious Questions-The Plaintiff's Sorrowful Tale,

In the district court, before Judge Wakeley, the case of Mrs. Lena Nelson against Rasmussen and his suretics on a of Nebraska. liquor license bond executed under the Slocumb law was resumed yesterday morning. This is the first suit of its kind ever tried or brought in this tribunal and the progress of the case is marked with many intricate legal questions, points that would naturally arise from different constructions of the statute law and also that result from the manner licenses are issued by the license board of the city.

The plaintiff in the action yesterday afternoon took the stand in her own behalf and told as pitiful a tale as was ever related to a jury. Mrs. Nelson was born in Scandinavia and gave her testimony in broken English.

THE PLAINTIFF'S TESTIMONY. She was married to Mr. Nelson in 1871. At that time he was a sober, temperate man, seldom taking even a glass of beer. He was industrous, working hard at his trade, that of tailoring and earning $20 per week. They lived happily together for about eleven years. In October of 1882 he began drinking and the habit so grew on him that in February of '84 he had become unable to work, from the effect of drink. He had always provided well for his family until he took to drink when his wife and children were often in and food and clothing were given them atrong by this neighbors.

habit fastened itself flannels, him that them by friends were spirited away by him and pawned for drink. One of their children, she insinuated, had died that the winter. winter from want and proper care, as she was confined to her bed at that time with rheumatism. She had gone to Rasmussen's saloon and requested the defendant to sell her husband no more drink, but he responded only "That will do, that will do," meaning he wanted to hear no more from her. Matters grew worse with her husband until the latter part of February he disappeared from the city and has never been heard of since.

The line of the defense so far as it has been manifested will be to prove that the plaintiff's husband was a drunkard prior to October of 1883 and that he obtained drink from other saloens also.

LEGAL QUESTIONS INVOLVED. When the license bond was offered in board of Omaha, was no license, and consequently there was no bond. The license was issued without authority of will make a difference of from $15 to $10 a law and did not protect the saloonkeepers, the very object of a bond. Judge Wakely held, however, that the license the bond in evidence.

ODDS AND ENDS.

Criminal and Court Items-Commissioners of Insanity-Matters of Minor Importance,

The BEE some weeks ago published the details of a suit brought by Mrs. Lizzle Stone, alias Morgan, vs. Mrs. Alice Morgan, the former asking that the latter be bound over to keep the peace. Both women claim the same husband, and the lucky, or unlucky, object of so much conjugal bliss has, it appears, divided his attentions between the two, thus arousing their jealousy for his fense and was continued until Monday favors. Lizzle avers that Alice carries a knife which she means to kill her with, and the evidence was such that the defendant was required to give bonds. The case of James B. Patton the telegraph eradtor who sued a ! um mings and three of his force for false imprisonment came up before Judge Beneke Thursday afternoon, and after a careful examination the prisoners were discharged. Patton has returned to the employ of the Western Union.

The board of commissioners of insanity has two cases for investigation on hand. One is that of John F. Potter, alleged by his wife to be insane, which is strongly fought by himself and friends; and the other is that of the man Hensel, who was arrested at the depot while uncoup ling cars, and proved to be demented.

Buff-lo Bill's Show Goes Down in the 'Father of Waters.'

All the Men, Women and Many Valuable Effects Saved,

Buffalo Bill, who started out in May last with the Wuld West show, met with quite quite an accident on Wednesday last. For reasons unknown the news never found its way into the Associated press and has become known only through a telegram received by Mr Nate Salabury, of Denver, from one of the combination. The following account is taken from the Denver News of the 11th instant:

Mr. Nate Salsbury, of 'Salsbury's Troubadours, who is also one of the principal stockholders in the Buffalo Bill combination, received dispatches yesterday stating that the entire show, of which W. F. Cody ("Buffalo Bill") is manager, had received a ducking in the Mississippi at a point near Rodney, Miss., the steam-boat which the combination owns, and by which all their effects were being transported south, having sunk. Mr. Salabury's information was very meagre, the dispatches neglecting to state how the accident occurred, and giving only the barest details. It is pretty certain, however, from word received, that all the elk, buffalo, mountain sheep, burros and most of the personal effects of the company are sunk in the river, but none of the members lost their lives. Every human being in the big combination is safe. All the valuable horses, mules, the band wagon and the old Deadwood stage coach were also saved.

A DISPATCH RECEIVED BY MR. BALSBURY later in the day stated that the accident would in no way interefere with the orthcoming engagement of the combination at New Orleans, where Mr. Salsbury has a race track prepared, a grand stand the east. They will remain a day torest and erected and other preparations made charge of the menagarie part of the show are untiring in theis efforts and have such reliable sources to draw from that the lost animals can be easily and quickly replaced. He remarks in passing that it is an exceedingly cheerless and inclement day when Bill Cody gets left. Mr. Salsbury places the loss to be, at a rough estimate, not far from $25,000. Everything that was not valuable and important to the success of the show appears to have been saved and the accident might in a great many ways be much worse than it is.

The sinking of such a big show with

THE CRIES OF MANY ANIMALS. wild and tame on a steamboat at night, must have been more spectacular in its effects than a dozen ordinary performances by the combination, and would form a spectacle more easily imagined than described. Raports from the region where the accident occurred, show that there have been heavy rains and very bad weather on that pact of the river.

The accident probably occurred pretty near the shore, and the great number of able portions of the property. There is fortunately money enough and brains enough employed in the enterprise to render the disaster less serious than it would have been under most ordinary circumstances.
