There are fewer laboring men and mechanics out of employment in Omaha than in cities of half the population.

The weather prophets who predicted that we should have no cold weather seem to have been a little previous.

There is no lack of aspirants for the senatorial seat of Mr. Blair, of New Hampshire. The woods are full of 'em.

CLEVELAND doesn't do much talking. Perhaps he is afraid that if he opens his mouth too much he will put his foot in it.

OMAHA seems to have forgotten all about the state fair. It looks now as if Lincoln is to have a walk-away with the capital prize.

There is at least one branch of industry that is not affected by the general depression, and that is democratic slate-making.

The statesman of Arbor Lodge will bob up serenely at Lincoln to-day in anticipation of being made chief soup dispenser of the Nebraska democracy.

The ice crop is an assured success. As the railroads will not be called upon to move it, the harvesters will be enabled to realize something from it.

This cold weather makes the democrats feel more like wearing their stockings Christmas eve than hanging them up in expectation of their being filled by their political Santa Claus.

We would like to know if the cold wave flag was unfurled from the post-office building in time to give the public warning of the Manitoba wave that has struck us amidships, as it were.

To-morrow the democratic convocation will convolve itself at Lincoln. Dr. Miller will presently discover whether he is a bigger man than J. Sterling Morton and the democratic state committee.

CAPTAIN HERMAN feels very grateful for the suggestion of ex-Contingent Congressman P. O. Hawes relative to the senate restaurant. It is a bigger thing than the New York postoffice pie-stand.

It will be a cold day when Dr. Miller gets left. The signal service thermometer in the editorial rooms of the Herald will probably indicate zero to-morrow when the doctor looks at it, prior to the democratic convocation at Lincoln.

The United States Senate restaurant is estimated to be worth ten thousand dollars a year, and is controlled by the vice-president. Tom Hendricks will probably keep that valuable perquisite in the family.

NOTWITHSTANDING the general depression Omaha is to-day the most prosperous city of its size in the United States. There is no use of croaking. We are doing well enough considering the condition of affairs in other cities.

THE coming Christmas will be one on which to especially remember the poor. The business depression has intensified their needs and sufferings, and the charitable can do a world of good this winter without going far to seek opportunities.

It is not often that a man has the pleasure of reading his obituary before he dies. Kosuth, however, has been afforded that pleasure, and he knows what the liberty-loving press and people of the United States really think of him. He can now die happy. Although 82 years of age he is in good health, living at Turin, and he may become a centenarian.

A MINOR incident of Kosuth's visit to this country in 1851 illustrates the way in which fashions in dress are sometimes originated. The eloquent Hungarian wore a soft felt hat, which became fashionable for young men, being reproduced in the shops under the name of the Kosuth hat. Until that time felt hats were almost unknown in this country, and, in Europe, as Herbers Spencer has pointed out, they were worn only by a few political agitators.

NEW YORK has a constitutional provision in regard to the state census similar to that of Nebraska. Under this provision the census of New York state is taken every ten years. It was taken in 1850 and again in 1875, and will be taken again in 1885, thus alternating at intervals of five years with the national census. The population of the state in 1870 was 4,382,759, and in 1880 was 5,082,881, an increase in the ten years of about 700,000. Nebraska's first state census will be taken in 1885.

THE NICARAGUA CANAL.

The proposed Nicaragua canal treaty has directed public attention to Nicaragua, about which country there seems to be very little known by the people of the United States. It is not, as many people suppose, one of the revolutionary republics of Central America, but on the contrary is a constitutional republic, and a peaceful nation. The president is elected every four years, and the election and transfer of power take place in an orderly manner as in the United States. The salary is $300 per month, and the office is at present filled by Dr. Adam Cardenas, a man of high ability. Nicaragua has a house of representatives and a senate modeled after our national legislature. It has no debt, and has a government revenue of $2,000,000. There is within the republic a railroad thirty-three miles long, which is under government control, in which respect the Nicaragua republic is somewhat in advance of the United States. There are 300,000 inhabitants, and the people are mostly Indians and negroes or of mixed descent. There are 8,300 pupils in school, a regular army of 700 men, and a militia of 9,000. The area of the republic is about equal to that of North Carolina. The principal products are coffee, cocoa, indigo, india rubber, cattle, hides, and fine woods, of all descriptions. The thermometer ranges from 75 to 80 degrees along the proposed canal and the climate is said to be one of the healthiest in the world. The passage will be 145 miles, 120 of which is in Lake Nicaragua, necessitating but twenty-five miles of excavation. The lake is forty miles long, with a depth of ten or twelve fathoms. It is estimated the canal will not cost over $50,000,000.

The treaty provides that the United States shall have the right of way for a ship canal, to connect the two oceans, Nicaragua to protect the employes, and exempt from duty all articles of every description employed in construction. The United States is to furnish the money and complete the canal within ten years from the date of the ratification of the treaty. The canal is to be controlled by a board of managers, six in number, each country appointing three. The ships of all nations are to be permitted to go through the canal upon payment of a certain toll, but the goods which they carry shall be exempt from duty, except that a discrimination as to toll may be made in favor of coasters of the United States and Nicaragua. The territory a mile and a quarter wide on each side of the canal will be under the joint management of the two countries, but Nicaragua will continue to have jurisdiction of the inhabitants within that strip. No sovereignty is to be acquired by the United States. The division of the net profits of the tolls will be two-thirds to the United States and one-third to Nicaragua.

It is but natural that England should find reason to protest against this country entering into any such scheme, but the declaration of the London press that the treaty is a direct violation of the Clayton-Bulwer treaty on the ground that the United States will acquire territorial sovereignty, and that no provision is made of all the world's trade is without substantial foundation. It matters not what England may say, but it so happens that this country acquires no sovereignty and the treaty gives to the world's commerce every reasonable accommodation. The trouble with John Bull, however, is that he sees in the proposed canal a formidable rival to the Suez canal, which has done so much to divert commerce from this country. The advantages to be gained by the Nicaragua canal are patent to all. The water route from New York to San Francisco will be shortened seventy-five days, twenty-seven days to Hong Kong, thirty-four to Shanghai, and fifty-two to Calcutta. It will give the sailing vessels of the United States opportunity to come into competition with the transcontinental railroads, whose exorbitant rates would necessarily be reduced. It will be seen that the advantages to be derived from this result alone would be incalculable to the producers of this country. Our merchant shipping would be revived, and at the same time our commercial relations with the countries of South America would become more intimate and profitable. If honestly built and fairly conducted it seems to us that the Nicaragua canal cannot help being a profitable enterprise, and satisfactory not only to the two republics directly interested, but to all the world beside.

In several of the large eastern cities the streets are comfortably heated by small stoves. No fuel is carried, as the fires are attended to at the stables and the charge lasts over the entire trip, the conductor being only required to shake the stove when starting on his return. The Chicago papers are now demanding that the street cars in that city be heated. There is no reason why they should not be, except the expense which the corporations naturally object to. It is to be hoped that the Omaha street-car company will be enterprising enough to heat its cars. The expense would be more than counterbalanced by the receipts from increased travel. At present a large number of persons prefer to keep warm by walking rather than to ride in an ice-box on wheels.

SOME time ago the city council concluded to abandon the practice of publishing the monthly appropriation ordinance. The Bee said nothing about it at the time, because it might have been charged that we were interested in the publication of the Bee was then the official paper. Now that this charge can no longer be made, we do say that the taxpayees of Omaha are entitled to know every penny appropriated by the city council. The ordinance should be published every month, let it cost what it may. The greatest safety for the taxpayers is publicity of everything relating to the expenditure of public money.

The voice of Ohio still heard throughout the land. She expects her usual share of offices, although the president-elect didn't come from that state this time. Governor Hoadly is the latest candidate from that commonwealth for a cabinet position. The governor thinks he would make an excellent attorney general, and has written a letter to a prominent democrat at Washington to convince Cleveland of that fact and otherwise boom him for the place. The Cleveland Leader's Washington correspondent says the governor might as well understand first as last that the coal oil crowd has gone back upon him, that he will not be their candidate for attorney general; and they are understood to be the ministers plenipotentiary and envoys extraordinary to the state of Ohio during the coming administration.

It has long been the darling ambition of Dr. George B. Loring's benevolent and bucolic heart to have a department of agriculture created, under the charge of secretary of agriculture, whose beneficent task it should be to make the waste places of Arizona blossom like the rose, and people the pastures of Indiana with a breed of hogs that are capable of eating shadows and can be seen even when they approach the observer "end on." It now seems as if that ambition would be realized, but, inasmuch as the initials of the secretary of agriculture's name will not be George B. Loring, the good doctor's interest in the subject is not so keen as it was a few weeks ago.—Philadelphia Record.

It is quite likely, however, that a doctor will be the lucky man after all, and his first name is Geo. It is almost unnecessary to say that we refer to Dr. Miller, the editor of the Omaha Herald.

JAY Gould's prediction that 1885 will be a money-making year does not seem to be received with much enthusiasm or faith by the cool-headed philosophers of the press. The Philadelphia Record says:

Mr. Jay Gould sees a revival of business ahead and a boom in securities. So fascinated is he by the prospect that he is absent-mindedly unloading stocks upon the people who sit at his feet and learn financial wisdom whenever their Gamaliel stops on their toes. Some one ought to jog this good man's elbow, or his family should seek the appointment of a guardian for his person and estate, or else the first thing they know he will have disposed of all his holdings before that boom comes.

The example having been set by the New York Times, it has become the fashion among the metropolitan papers to steal treaties. It has been discovered that it is no trick at all. The New York Tribune on Thursday last captured the Nicaragua treaty while the Herald gobbled up the San Domingo document. The United States senate will probably give up the idea of keeping such documents secret, if enterprising newspapers continue to publish them in advance of their ratification or rejection.

KING L. OROLO, of Belgium, is contributing $400,000 a year to African missions out of his own private purse. If Leopold would spend that amount of money among his poor and destitute subjects we venture that the recording angel would give him more credit in the heavenly record of good deeds. Charitable begins at home, and there is nothing so noble as charity; and probably King Leopold can find quite as good a missionary field in Belgium as in Africa.

NEW YORK state cannot complain of a lack of political excitement this year. No sooner had the presidential count, which occupied everybody's attention, been concluded, than the senatorial contest was begun, and it is warming up every day as the session of the legislature approaches. Arthur, Evarts and Morton are the most prominent candidates, but the dark horse may come in ahead on the home stretch.

BOB INGERSOLL thinks President Cleveland "will investigate the national office from the peak of the ridge pole to the floor of the coal cellar. He will rout the army of sinecurists that have been holding the parlor floors and letting the actual workers rot in the attic. Whether he finds the former few or many, that will be the extent of the change." This, however, may be one of the mistakes of Ingersoll.

THE Omaha board of trade ought to hold some more meetings to discuss the city charter and amendments. Only two weeks remain before the legislature assembles, and so far only two or three subjects have been discussed. All the important changes needed in the charter should be thoroughly discussed and agreed upon.

It is rumored that President Cleveland will retain Hazen at the head of the signal service. The probabilities, however, are there is no foundation for the rumor, and that Hazen will have to go.

SENATOR BOYCE, of New York, on "Cleveland,"

"How about Cleveland?"

"Oh, he is full of resolves, and he thinks he can sail the old ship right along through smooth waters and feed every passenger on the best market all round without the least sort of trouble. Just wait a while. He hasn't commenced keeping hotel yet, and when he does he will find every democrat from Maine to Texas wants a front parlor with a bath attached, and if they are put off with a six-floor attic, or are told that the house is full, there is going to be music of the Wagnerian style. It is all right, but I'm afraid about carrying out a policy to suit

AN OLD-TIME MYSTERY.

A Suit in District Court Reveals Exciting Scenes of Long Ago.

The case of Theiring vs. Theiring, now on the docket of the district court, will call to the memory of all old residents of Sarp county a singular incident of the earlier days.

Fourteen years ago there lived on a farm, in the southeastern part of the county, two brothers—Frederick and Claus Theiring, the former still residing here, and being well and favorably known as one of the foremost men of the county. The brothers were owners of a great many acres of land in this vicinity.

One bright Sunday morning, in the fall of 1869, Claus, the younger brother, left the house with an ax in his hands, with which he was going to shave the bark from some fence posts that had been ignited by a prairie fire. He was several times that day, but never afterward. When he failed to return home that night his brother was alarmed and searching parties were hastily organized. Every foot of land in that part of the county was gone over by the searchers, but to no avail. The only result was the finding of the ax, he carried when he left home. This was found under a haystack. At the time there were many theories as to the strange affair, but they all amounted to nothing, and the event is shrouded in as deep mystery to-day as ever. There were vague rumors of murder, and some went so far as to assert that relatives of the missing man were interested peculiarly in his absence, but to the credit of those relatives, such a theory was never generally believed. There were also hints of a woman in the case. Long before his flight from home and friends Claus had acted very strangely, so as to lead many of the neighbors to believe his mind was affected. The opinion of this class was that he wandered away in a delirium, fell into the river, and was drowned.

The suit as law referred to is brought by Mr. Frederick Theiring, who prays for the partition of a large amount of Sarp county lands, title to which is now vested in the two brothers. The petition will probably be granted at the special term of the district court, to be held next Tuesday. At the time of the disappearance of the ax the case was reported by the Herald as a sensation of the hour, and many old settlers will remember the excitement attending it.

"Wanted." Chicago News.

The St. Louis Globe-Democrat of yesterday had a special telegram from Chicago, which said that a gentleman in this city had received a letter from Dr. Geo. L. Miller, of Omaha, in which the doctor made use of the following significant words: "Allow me to add that when I shall have been fully installed in the cabinet of Governor Cleveland, I hope you will not hesitate to accept an invitation to my Washington residence. From this the Globe-Democrat surmises that the Omaha statesman has received positive notification that he will be wanted at Washington for the next four years. We decline to endorse the Globe-Democrat's surmise until we clearly understand what it means by "wanted."

THE largest cattle ranch in the United States under one management is that of Richard King, of Texas. It comprises upwards of 800,000 acres, all under fence, and nearly 200,000 head of cattle, horses and sheep. This ranch has been owned by my Washington correspondent, and Dutch capitalists, but the successful competitor is the United States Land and Investment company of New York city, who have just concluded a purchase at $6,500,000 for the entire property. The company anticipate an annual income of nearly $1,500,000 from this source, as the increase of cattle is about 85 per cent. An indication of a more settled condition of financial affairs, the manager says that the company's first mortgage 5 per cent bonds are being rapidly sought at 102 and interest, and that the feeling now shown by American capitalists in this class of investment property is growing daily.

Scarcely twenty-five years ago the most powerful piece of artillery was a sixty-eight pounder, throwing its projectile with a velocity of 1,600 feet per second. Now the weights of guns have increased from five to one hundred tons, the velocity from 1,600 to 2,600 feet per second, the energies from 1,000 tons to over 25,000, and the range from sixty-eight pounds to 2,000 pounds.
