WITH the Irish and the Arabs the English now have their hands full.

THE Irish allies in Egypt are taking the conceit out of the English troops.

HARDLY ten per cent. of the bills now before the legislature are worthy of consideration by that body.

THE British lion has had his tail twisted out of joint by the false prophet. As a tail twister El Mahdi is a success.

TOM HENDRICKS is not doing quite so much talking as he was. He has probably learned something since his second visit to Cleveland.

IT is suspected that the threatened socialist uprising in Pittsburg is nothing more than a sensational scare—an escape of natural gas from the socialistic windpipes.

IT takes a bushel of corn to pay for a thimbleful of corn-juice in Nebraska. Perhaps the Omaha Republican will brand this statement as a libel on the state, but it is true all the same.

NEARLY 350 bills have been introduced in the Nebraska legislature, and the session has more than half expired. It is about time to stop introducing bills so that some of those now before the house can be considered and acted upon.

VANDERVOORT has denounced Jeff. Davis in a speech at Utica, N. Y. This is a bad dose for the old rebel, and he will probably lie right down and die. When Vandervoort opens his mouth he can knock a man out with one blow.

SENATOR CHACE, of Rhode Island, has never appointed while in the house a cadet to West Point or Annapolis, nor voted for an army appropriation bill, and probably never will. The reason is that he is a Quaker and does not believe in war.

HON. WILLIAM R. MORRISON has received the democratic caucus nomination for United States senator from Illinois. Logan will probably be the choice of the republicans. Balloting will begin on next Tuesday. The race will be nip and tuck from start to finish.

THE Pennsylvania legislature passed one bill after being four weeks in session and it was promptly vetoed by the governor. This is making a little better headway than the Nebraska legislature, which has not yet passed a single bill, although 340 have been introduced.

MR. CLEVELAND is said to be in search of a policy, and for that reason he has catechised Messrs. Carlisle and Randall. We would suggest that honesty is the best policy, but perhaps some agent will endeavor to convince him that, in this age of dynamite and cranks, a life insurance policy is the best.

THE New Orleans Times-Democrat makes a point upon the state of Ohio, where a portion of the press has been most bitter in abusing the south as the "home of murder," by reference to the murder statistics of 1884. It appears that Ohio stands at the head of the list, with 189 murders to its credit, outstripping even Texas itself.

SENATOR-ELECT EVARTS presented to the senate a set of credentials as long as the moral law. Of course everybody would suppose that documents coming from such a red-tape source would be perfect in every respect, but strange to say they have been found deficient in one of the important requirements. They are not signed by the governor or countersigned by the secretary of state.

THERE is not much prospect of the passage of a national bankruptcy bill at this session of congress. It is buried beneath so many other measures on the speaker's table that it can only be reached by a two-third vote, so that it will be seen that a determined minority can prevent its being taken up until it is reached in the regular order of business. Could it be taken up at once it would be passed, as there is no doubt that a majority favor the measure.

MR. BURCHARD, director of the United States mint, is not all disturbed by the political revolution which will cause the grand army of republican office holders to evacuate their positions in the near future. Under the law creating the office of director of the mint, that official is appointed for a term of five years, and can be removed only for good and sufficient reasons, and then only with the consent of the senate. As Brother Burchard was appointed only a year ago he feel pretty solid. If he is any relation to the Rev. Triple R. Burchard the Democrats ought not attempt to oust him.

A RAID IN DISGUISE.

The state medical college ring not only asks the legislature to turn over to it all the available dissecting material in Nebraska, but by another bill, ingeniously worded, it expects to control the money appropriated for the purpose of erecting an agricultural college. A bill known as H. R. No. 13, introduced by Holmes, calls for an appropriation of $75,000 to provide for the erection of two buildings for the use of the industrial and scientific departments of the University of Nebraska. From the wording of this bill the inference would be drawn that these proposed buildings are intended for the exclusive use of the industrial and scientific departments, but by reference to the report of the chancelor and the biennial report of the board of regents the true inwardness of the scheme is divulged. In these reports it is stated that $75,000 of the university funds could be very advantageously expended in erecting buildings, the one to cost $50,000 for the industrial school, in which accommodations are to be made for this medical department, and the other to cost $25,000 for the chemical laboratory. The managers of the medical school are evidently deterred from directly asking an appropriation for their institution through fear that the so-called granger element in the legislature will not sustain such a waste of public money for something for which there is no demand, and particularly at a time when the state has no money to waste, but dodging behind the agricultural college scheme they hope to secure the appropriation and then devote it to the erection of a medical college building. If, however, the expenditure of state funds for a medical college would stop with the completion of this building it would not be so bad, but at every legislature we will be called upon to make appropriations for that institution, as the professors cannot afford after this year to work without salary. It is estimated that the cost of a complete faculty and the running expenses of the school will amount to nearly $25,000 a year. This is adding a burden upon the people against which they will certainly protest. If this medical department were necessary, or if there were the slightest demand for its existance, there would be some excuse for thus investing the public funds. We have too many doctors, there being one to every 500 of our population, and the ranks of the profession are constantly increased by graduates from schools that are far superior to anything that ever can be made out of this medical department of the state university. All the money that can be spared at present is needed for state institutions that are of far more importance than a medical school, If the state university needs bracing up in the other departments the people will of course have no objections to reasonable expenditures for that purpose, but it is to be hoped that no money will be thrown away upon departments for which there is no demand. The medical college ring is simply attempting to make a raid in disguise on the state treasury.

THAT CORN PROBLEM.

What good has Van Wyck ever done the state to affect the evil which he inflicted when he represented that we were so railroad-ridden and poverty-striken that 150 bushels of corn would not purchase one ton of coal?—Omaha Republican.

"When farmer Gere and farmer Nye have fully exposed their knowledge of farming facts and figures, by ridiculing Van Wyck's assertion that it took 150 bushels of corn to buy a ton of hard coal in Nebraska, we will inform them that they need not go 100 miles from Lincoln to find any number of places where corn has sold this winter for 10 cents a bushel, and hard coal for $15 a ton. And then, when they have hired a small boy to do an example in arithmetic, they will find themselves looking supremely ridiculous in their ignorance of matters in their own state.—Fairmont Signal.

What Senator Van Wyck said is literally true, but he has been purposely misconstrued by the Omaha Republican and other railroad organs, which was not to be unexpected. Now, let us see what the Senator actually did say. Here is his assertion, taken from his speech, which appears in full in the Congressional Record, pages 828 and 829, January 17:

"In Kansas and Nebraska fifty bushels of corn will not purchase one ton of soft coal; one hundred and fifty bushels will not buy one ton of hard coal."

It will be seen by a little figuring, such as is given by the Fairmont Signal, and reproduced above, that Senator Van Wyck knew what he was talking about. We know that last fall corn sold in some places as low as 8 cents a bushel. Now corn sells the lowest at interior points, and at those same points coal sells the dearest. Hard coal at $12 a ton, which is the average price at interior towns, would swallow up 150 bushels of corn at eight cents a bushel, and it would require eighty-seven and one-half bushels of corn at the same price to buy a ton of Wyoming soft coal at $7 a ton. We would advise the arithmetician of the Republican to take a few more lessons before he attempts to solve another corn and coal problem.

JUDGE Lynch is still abroad in the land, his latest victims being three murderers at Audubon, Iowa. But very little fault can be found with the people of Audubon for taking the law into their own hands, for if there ever was a cold-blooded murder the hanging of old man Jellison, by his son and on-in-law and another man, was one. There was no doubt whatever in this case as the son confessed the deed, and just before the mob, after killing his two confederates, took him out and hung him he reiterated his confession. The people had become incensed at the law's delay, and a change of venue which had been granted in the case incited them to execute the prisoners before they were removed to another county. Justice has been done in this case, and the tax payers have been saved a big bill of expense. It is to be regretted that justice has to be administered in that way, but lynching will continue to be popular so long as murderers are allowed to escape punishment at the hands of the law. Adequate justice, however, could not have been dealt out in this case in any other way because in Iowa the extreme penalty for murder is life imprisonment. If there had been capital punishment in Iowa the people of Audubon would probably have allowed the law to take its course provided that they felt that the murderers would surely have answered for their crimes upon the scaffold.

THE FALL OF KHARTOUM.

The recent victory of the British troops at Metemneh has been completely wiped out by the fall of Khartoum. The Arabs, after having given General Stewart a good fight, retreated, and it now looks as if they did so to draw him into a trap, but failing in this they concentrated their forces upon Khartoum, the objective point of the British expedition, and captured that stronghold together with Chinese Gordon and the small body of men that remained faithful to him. Col. Wilson, upon pushing up the Nile with the British relief, found Khartoum, much to his surprise, in the possession of the Mahdi, and he was forced to retreat. Thus has the British expedition for Gordon's relief proved a failure at the last moment. The truthis that the English have underestimated the strength and fighting qualities of the Arabs, and the home government now entertains fears for the safety of Wolseley and Stewart. The overwhelming disaster has thrown all England into feverish excitement, and the situation was at once made the subject of a cabinet meeting. In all probability, however, England will push reinforcements to the front and continue the war to the bitter end, as the government is bound to retrieve the disaster to the English arms. In the campaign of the future, however, the British will be very careful not to underestimate the enemy, and they will probably recognize the importance of the fact that the Arabs are at home and know every inch of the ground. It would seem that the Egyptian problem is now farther from solution than ever, as it is not likely that the Mahdi, elated with his success, will yield in any particular. The capture of Khartoum will attract to his standard a host of new followers, and he may at once undertake to drive the English out of the country by an aggressive warfare. He will not be content to act on the defensive. In that event the English government may well have serious fears for the troops that have penetrated the Egyptian country.

STATISTICS show that married men live longer than bachelors, and it is now claimed that the discovery has been made that matrimony is to a great extent a preventive of cholera. The Paris Weekly Bulletin and Municipal Statistician has compiled a table, showing that out of 1,643 cholera deaths, which was the ratio per 100,000 of the male sex, 1,333 were single, and only 310 married. The proportion of deaths, taking the whole range of ages from twenty-five to seventy-five, is nearly 4½ unmarried men to one married. Of the victims between the ages of twenty-five and thirty 51 were single and only 18 married. From thirty to thirty-five 78 were single men and 21 married. From forty to forty-five 152 single and but 45 married men died. From fifty to fifty-five 167 single and only thirty-seven married men fell victims to the scourge. Dr. Bertillon, a French physician, in commenting on these statistics, says: "The social position of a certain number of single men, and especially their mode of life, since a large number of them are obliged (to live in common), explains, perhaps, this surprising difference." An additional reason may be found in the fact that married men are more regular in their habits, and generally more careful of their health, on account of their wives, who watch over them with tender care, and at the first approach of illness provide simple and effective remedies which they know so well how to prescribe, or insist on calling a physician before threatened disease has obtained a firm hold on the patient. These same statistics show that the ratio of mortality among females is much lower than among males, the proportion being given as 379 to 561. Thus it will be seen that the women manage to keep themselves alive and their husbands also. The moral of all this is so obvious that it would be superfluous to point it out. We venture to say, however, that as the cholera threatens an invasion into this country this year there will be an unusual number of marriages between now and the gentle spring-time.

THE St. Paul Pioneer Press expresses the hope that the defeat of the toper's permit bill will not discourage its introducer from further efforts for the amelioration of Minnesota morals, and it accordingly suggests, lest he should for a moment be at a loss for an idea, that he champion a law against treating similar to the one passed by the Nebraskal egislature two years ago. The Nebraska act, however, is a dead letter. It provides for the punishment by fine or imprisonment, or both, of any person treating or offering to treat another person, or accepting or offering to accept any treat or gift of any intoxicating drink whatever in any saloon or public place where such liquors are kept for sale. The Pioneer Press maintains that the passage of such an act in Minnesota would place public tippling on an entirely different basis from its present one. If a man wanted to drink he could to so, and to any extent that might seem to him desirable; but he would also be relieved from any feeling of obligation to ask every Tom, Dick and Harry within sound of his voice to imbibe at his expense—a thing which hundreds of men do every day under mental protest rather than to appear "mean." Then, too, if a man became intoxicated every one would know that it was his own fault, as he could no longer plead the old excuse that "the boys asked him, and he didn't like to refuse." In fine, the law would introduce the custom that prevails in nearly every city on the European continent, of every man ordering what he wants and paying for what he gets STEVE ELKINS as an all-round politician has but few equals. What he lacks in the essential elements of campaign management he makes up with a superabundance of cheek. Although his plans in behalf of Blaine miscarried, Mr. Elkins is now devoting his talent and energy in booming Ex-Senator Davis, of West Virginia, for a place in Cleveland's cabinet. That Mr. Elkins should at this late day turn round and work for the elevation of a democrat may surprise some people, but when it is understood that Mr. Elkins is the husband of the daughter of Mr. Davis it will at once be seen where the bright gazelle comes in.

GOVERNOR HILL'S plan of restricting the coming New York state census to a count of population, to be compiled by the county clerks, proves a fruitful topic of discussion; the democrats applaud it as an economical move, while the republicans say the economy is all on the outside, declaring that the agriculturists have a right to know the statistics of their crops and cattle. By the way, something definite ought to be done by the Nebraska legislature to properly provide for the taking of the census this year. The bill that has been already introduced is altogether too indefinite.

MINNEAPOLIS and St. Paul are in the midst of a lively discussion over the formation of a state fair grounds and state park, half way between the two cities, each to contain 200 acres and the latter to embrace the famous falls of Minnehaha. Ten years ago the cities were fifteen miles apart. Now the park, if formed, will be the only neutral ground between them.

WHATEVER may be said derogatory to the character of Paddy Ryan is more than counterbalanced by the respect that he has for his mother's opinion. He is credited with saying that he was nerved up to his contest with John L. Sullivan by reflecting what his mother would have thought of him if he "hadn't stood up before that snoozer."

Dynamite does not seem to do half the damage in English politics that one short alliterative sentence did in America. The London terrorists should get Dr. Burchard to make a speech.—[Chicago Herald.

We await the arrival of the Congressional Record with unfeigned anxiety, for we are almost dead to know whether it is true, as rumored, that Freedom shrieked when Tom Ochiltree was bounced out of the United States senate chamber.

Colonel Spooner, the new senator from Wisconsin, is a small man with light hair, an almost boyish complexion, a clean shaven face and his diminutive appearance makes one think of the remark Colonel Thomas H. Benton once made concerning Stephen A Douglas: "His coat tail is to near the ground, sir."

The noted journalist Peter C. Bliss, died in a New York hospital February 1st. Bliss was well known, a short time ago, as a journalist, traveler, scholar, and diplomat, and his death was the remote result of injuries inflicted by Lopez, dictator of Paraguay, who tortured Bliss to extract state secrets while Bliss was secretary of legation.

The announcement that Mr. Samuel J. Randall contemplates another southern tour would seem calculated to elicit another series of melancholic yawps from the gifted Louisville editor, to whom, in a moment of melting tenderness, the Chesterfield of the Atlanta Constitution applied the endearing epithet of "the star-eyed jackass of the prairies."—[Chicago News.

The Plattsmouth Herald rises in double-leaded lines "to congratulate the city of Platttmouth and its enterprising citizens over the auspicious outlook for the coming year. With the opening of the year the Plattsmouth canning company has been organized with a capital of thirty thousand dollars, every dollar of which is taken, and the company will open out and operate one of the largest institutions of the kind to be found in the west. This is a business boom for the new year of no small proportions. It is the establishment of a new industry in our midst that will grow and expand year by year and make a new impress upon the business of Plattsmouth. When local capitalists and business men join hands and invest thirty thousand dollars in a new enterprise of this kind, the signs of the times are hopeful."

The Necessity of Food Inspection.

Philadelphia Call.

The absolute necessity for a system of food inspection in large cities has been made emphatically manifest by the poisoning of a whole family from drinking tea that had been adulterated or otherwise tampered with, and the death of two of the victims. Tea is an article of food which offers special advantages for dishonest dealers, who add to their profits by adulteration, but there are many other products which admit of being dealt with in the same way. Only official inspection under a rigorous system can remedy this matter. The penalty for food adulterations is already prescribed; what remains to be done is to adopt measures to detect the crime, in order that the penalty may be enforced. All food adulterators should be promptly and severely punished, but they must first be caught. Let food inspection be established.

A Point for Preachers.

Globe Democrat.

As the organ of constant communication between the clergy and the laity of St. Louis and the country, the Globe-Democrat finds it necessary to remind its brethren of the pulpit that they run entirely too much to the use of italics in their communications. Italics are to writing what profanity is to conversation—an effort to give emphasis, which betokens a weak vocabulary. The right word will always emphasise itself; it is the only lack of that right word that calls italics to its aid. A sentence that needs underscoring needs re-writing.

MRS. Charles Tracey, of Kingsbridge, Ky., has become the mother of the smallest "midget" born this century.
