Friday Morning, Feb. 6. The Grand Conclave of the Knights of Pythias of Nebraska.

> Exemplification of the Secret Work -The Dance and the Banquet.

Yesterday was memorable in the an nals of Pythianism in the state of Nebrasks. The event around which much of the interest centred was the arrival of John Van Valkenberg, of Fort Madison, came for the stated purpose of exemplifying the secret work of all the Pythian the history of the state has a supreme grand chancellor visited Nebraska, that being in the year 1869, when the first grand lodge of the state was instituted in Omaha. Accordingly the loyal Knights of Pythias determined to hearld the arrival of the supreme chancellor for the second time stepping into the preclucts of the Gate City, with as much

He heard that the authorities had become cognizant of the fact of his "crooked deal," and even Gang Wednesday Night. understood, as he confidingly told a friend, that the sheriff was searching for him with a warrant for his arrest. For these reasons, with a good deal of trepl dation he determined to leave Omahs. He has not been seen here since.

THE CHARITY FAIR.

The Fourth Evening of the Lagies Benovolent Fair,

The benevolent society's fair was well attended last night and the hall was thronged with strangers. Many books were filled with chances duing the evening. One of the many beautiful articles, put up to be raffled during the remainder of the fair, was a bran, new crisp $100 bill. The glee club, which was expected to give a few vocal selections during the evening, failed to strike the right train and did not sing. Organized Bands of Young Thieves-"Nothing to Eat,"

YOUTHFUL BANDITS

"Dldn't have no money and we wanted to buy something to eat," was George Howard, just got out of jail a few the explanation volunteered by one of a days since, and when he is out upon the streets look out for some kind of funny quartette of boys who were arrested last business. George wouldn't steal himself, night on a charge of larceny, in response oh, no; but he has a way of stirring up number, and representing about half the to a reporter's quary. The boys names Thompson, William Johnson. They had been hanging around Koster's hall during the afternoon, and had stolen a piece of carpet and coat belonging to a collector for J. A. Fuller & Co. The carpet they immediately sold to the Douglas street second-hand man, Brown.

A TRIPLE THEFT. The coat was recovered late last night by Officer Whalen. The history of the theft is remarkable, and reads like one of the exploits of the "Artful Dodger" type. The coat had been stolen early in the evening by a sneak thief, name unknown. He was detected in the act and threw the coat into a corner and could be discovered the boys under arrest had determined to complete the work of stealing, and by bribing a small colored boy, the coat was purloined.
Before they could dispose of it, however, it was taken forcibly from them by some piratically inclined small-pox developed, this time at a gentus, while the ringleader of the gang was absent, unable to muster his forces. TRADE PICKING UP.

A Noticeable Increase in Trade During the Past Few Days.

Since the weather began to moderate there has been an increase in all branches of trade, barring, perhaps, the coal trade. Ladies have been able to get out upon the streets, and because of the long and uninterrupted cold snap, there were many purchases to make. It is an agreeable change to the merchants of this city, and heir faces are now all wreathed in smiles. The cold snap gave them all an opportunity to take inventory, go through and sort up their stocks thoroughly and now they are prepared to receive their customers in the best possible manner. Notwithstanding the duliness of trade throughout the country and the great hue and cry about hard times, the merchants of Omaha are looking for, and doubtless will have, a good spring trade.

A $1,000 ROBBERY.

Gang Wednesday Night.

The Back Door Carelessly Left Open and the Night Raiders Have An Easy Job.

Yesterday morning W. B. Gring, suctloneer, gave notice at police headquarters that his store, near the corner of Douglas and Fifteenth street, had been entered during the night and robbed of $1,000 worth of watches and jewelry.

Two men sleep up stairs over the store and in order to reach their apartments it is necessary for them to pass through the store. One of them went up stairs to bed about 10 o'clock at night [and as his partner had not yet turned in he left the back door of the store open for him. It seems that the partner did not come in at all during the night and the door remained unlocked.

By this means the burglars found easy access to the place and they must have smiled with a great deal of satisfaction when they found how conviently matters had been arranged for them. In the front part of the store was a show case, which Mr. Gring claimed contained $1,000 worth of watches and jewelry. The doors of this case were locked and the burglars "blew" it, or broke a glass in one end of it, stripped it of its contents and quietly took their departure.

Sometime during the night the man who was sleeping up stairs heard a noise and went down into the store and looked around, but saw no one. He returned to his bed but still left open the back door and of course the gang couldn't let such an opportunity as that pass.

There seems to be something very funny about this robbery. Why a man should leave $1,000 worth of watches and sewelry in a show case is a mystery. What til a late hour and the Rebecca's well had was the use of locking the show case doors? Why not paste a sign upon the glass of the case, "please do not touch these goods, Mr. Burglar." It would be just about as safe to pile the goods up on the side-walk outside and draw a chalk mark around them.

Another strange thing is that any sane man should leave a store door unlocked all night. People who are so careless a o leave store doors unlocked, thereby inviting crime, must expect to be robbed Burglars are looking for just such chumps nal officer of the United States, in regard to the weather for January: "On the 26th a storm developed in Nebraska. It began to move southeast-erly, accompanied by rain and snow, but on the 27th changed its course to a northeasterly direction. As this storm spproached the coast of the middle Atlantic states it developed considerable energy, causing violent gales from the south Atlantic states to Nova Scotia. It disappeared on the 29th. Following this storm came a cold wave, which appeared in the northwest on the 27th. It moved southeasterly and then easterly, causing a fall in temperature of 200 to 309, and disappeared off the Atlantic coast on the 29th. The month ended with cloudy weather and precipitation in nearly all districts."
