DR. MILLER prescribes a milk diet for the readers of the Herald.

NEBRASKA will have no more Valentines to send to congress after the 4th of March.

If Dr. Miller gets into the cabinet we are a Millerite; but if he does not, then we are for Morton.

The legislature may be a bore, but that is no reason why it should invest a hundred thousand dollars in boring for salt.

Under the caption of "What are we here for?" the Bee furnishes some spicy reading for the democratic Flanagan of Nebraska.

UNCLE SAM has unveiled his white elephant, the Washington monument. It is 560 feet high, and lies over any other monument in the world.

It will be a great relief when the two legislative bodies at Washington and Lincoln fold up their tents and return to their beloved constituents.

We wonder by what name Mr. Huntington will call Senator Van Wyck in his future correspondence. Perhaps he will adopt Nye's epithet of "idiot."

It is not so much a question in Nebraska as to who will get a cabinet office as it is who will be state veterinary surgeon and state superintendent of census.

It is mentioned as a remarkable fact that there is only one lawyer in the Indiana penitentiary. It is evident that Indiana lawyers stand by each other.

The lower house of the Illinois legislature consists of 153 members, and 101 employes. That is not quite so bad as the Nebraska senate, which has only 33 members, while it has 76 employes.

Now that we are to have a state census taken we want a reliable enumeration. For that reason we hope that the great lightning calculator, Brad Slaughter, who is pulling the wires for appointment as superintendent, will be left out in the cold.

Iowa has not peeped lately on the cabinet question. Perhaps her democratic statesmen have been assured that when the distribution of bureaus take place that state will not be forgotten. Two bureaus in the hand are worth a cabinet position in the bush.

OUR own gallant Colonel Colby, from the state of Beatrice, hero of many a militia campaign, was prancing around the Washington monument on dedication day in brass buttons and epaulettes as one of the aids to the grand marshal. Col. Colby in all his grandeur loomed up and lacked only six inches of being as high as the monument.

In Washington the birthday of the Father of his Country is observed to-day, while in Omaha it will not be celebrated until Monday. The principal celebrants in Omaha are the bankers, who, when a holiday comes on a Sunday, collect on Saturday their bills which fall due on Monday. It is a very handy thing to have a holiday once in awhile.

It is becoming quite popular among the democrats to hold primary elections to decide their preferences for candidates for office, particularly the postoffice. The democrats of Centralia, Illinois, recently expressed their choice in this way, and so have the democrats of Etahla, Alabama, and other places. Isn't it about time for the democrats of Omaha to hold such an election? Here is a grand opportunity for the straw-fund who has had nothing to do since the presidential campaign.

THERE seems to have been an erroneous impression created concerning the attitude of Senator Metz in regard to the Slocumb law. He assures us that he is not attempting to have that law repealed, but is only trying to have it amended so that the jurisdiction of the city will be extended over the two-mile belt, and that certain acts of the authorities, such for instance as the receiving of the license money in quarterly installments, and exempting wholesale dealers, may be legalized. Mr. Metz at this juncture is making an effort to have the minimum license fixed at $500, but this idea, as we are informed, has been abandoned. In this connection we would suggest, if the law is amended so as to make the quarterly payments legal, that it be further amended so as to provide a premium in cases where the yearly license of $1,000 is paid in advance. This would be an inducement to a large number of liquor dealers to take out a yearly license and would be an advantage in many respects.

ANOTHER RAILROAD REFORM.

House Bill No. 190 is a bill compelling railroads to build and maintain depots in towns of 500 or more inhabitants. The bill is a good one as far as it goes--for the 500 inhabitants. But it goes not far enough. Railroads should be compelled to build in towns of 1,000 inhabitants at least one depot and establish and maintain a free lunch counter, the supplies for which should be open at all times for legislative inspection. In towns of 1,500 inhabitants, in addition to the foregoing, the railroads should be compelled to furnish and maintain a sufficient number of vehicles to convey any of the 1,500 inhabitants from the depot to their respective residences. In towns of 2,000 inhabitants the railroads should be compelled to keep at least one shab bodied African for each fifty inhabitants or fraction thereof, and in proportion to the increased number of inhabitants the railroads should be compelled to improve accommodations in the proper ratio. If this bill should become a law, there is nothing more certain that the towns along the lines of the railroads would be a favored land, except that there would be few towns through which railroads would care particularly to run. House Bill 190 is the work of a genius--Omaha Herald.

If there is any sense or wit in the above sickly attempt of the Herald to make fun of a much-needed law we fail to see it. The Herald seems to forget that a place having 500 inhabitants is a pretty good-sized town in Nebraska, and it overlooks the important fact that a railroad is a public servant, and that it cannot always do as it pleases. The passage of this law will prevent such a discriminating and unjust course as that pursued by the B. & M. against the town of Blue Springs, a place of 1,500 inhabitants. The B. & M., because Blue Springs would not deed to the Lincoln Land company--which is a ring of town-lot speculators, composed principally of railroad officials--a large tract of valuable lands, refused to build a depot there or stop its trains in the town. Blue Springs to-day has no depot, and the trains run through the town without stopping. If a railroad can thus attempt to ruin any town against which it may have some spite, it is high time such a law as house bill No. 190 should be passed and enforced. Such an article as the Herald publishes on this subject is an insult to the intelligence of its readers.

WHEN the bill to teach little children in the common schools the anatomy of drunkenness was presented to the Pennsylvania legislature there was surprise over the multitude of petitions from all quarters of the state praying for the passage of the measure. The popular furor for a bill like this could not be accounted for. But, as we learn from the Philadelphia Record, what was a shrewdly suspected turned out to be true. The petitions that were apparently so spontaneous were the industrious work of enterprising book agents with an eye to business. Books giving a smattering of scientific information concerning the effects of spirituous liquors on the human system have been introduced into the common schools of other states by popular and adroit agents whose object is to widen the market. So innocent was the Pennsylvania senate in regard to the methods used in pushing the bill that it passed that body without a word of comment. A similar bill has been passed by the Nebraska legislature. Is it possible that this measure was quietly pushed through by "enterprising book agents with an eye to business"? It would not surprise us in the least, for the school book agent is up to all sorts of deep-laid schemes, and he is as liable to pull the wool over the eyes of the Nebraska law-makers as he is over those of the Solons of Pennsylvania.

In connection with the approaching inauguration of President Cleveland, two papers promised for the March Harper's will have special interest. One is the treasure of the library of Mr. Tilden in a good-sized book, bound in calf, filled up in the handwriting of Thomas Jefferson. It is the financial diary of the great man, kept by him from January 1, 1791, while he was secretary of state, up to 1803, covering thus the first two years of his presidency. Among its entries is a careful summary of all his expenses from March 1, 1801, to March 1, 1802, showing an expenditure of $32,681 84, the various elements of which are given in detail. Jefferson had as great a dislike of presents as Mr. Cleveland, and even insisted on paying the duty on certain wine procured from the Spanish minister, who had imported it duty free for his own use. He also paid sixteen cents a pound for a monster cheese that was evidently sent him as a present. The interesting paper drawn from the material of this diary is from the pen of the Hon. John Bigelow.

The Oregon legislature, which has been balloting for United States senator for about two weeks, has finally adjourned without an election, and the governor holds until the next session of the legislature, two years hence. The chances are that the democrats with their patronage will then be able to elect a senator for the remaining four years. The republicans have only themselves to blame for this result. Their leading candidate, Mr. Hirsch, who was a member of the legislature, came within one vote of being elected early in the contest, but he was too modest to vote for himself, and hence he failed. Modesty may be a good thing, but there is such a thing as being altogether too modest, especially in politics.

ACCORDING to the Chicago Tribune the Messrs. Oliver brothers, proprietors of the great chilled iron plow works at South Bend, Indiana, are bound to move their works to Indianapolis or some other city, because they have been annoyed and damaged through political influence upon their employes, who number from 1,000 to 1,500 men, principally of Polish birth. At this distance it looks a great deal more feasible for the Messrs. Oliver brothers to remove their workmen if they are troublesome than it does to move we would suggest to them that Omaha is a good place to locate in. We can assure them that here they can make all the plows that they want to without any interferences from politics and their political preferences will have no weight with the farmers of Iowa, Nebraska, Kansas and other agricultural states where plows are in most demand. All that they will require of the Oliver brothers is that they will attend strictly to business and furnish good plows.

We are indebted to Senator Manderson for a copy of the act for the repeal of the pre-emption and timber culture laws, which we publish in to-day's issue of the Bee. This act was passed by the house, and having been slightly amended by the senate, it now goes back to the house for concurrence, and will probably become a law. It is an important measure, and if adopted will put an end to the frauds that are committed under these laws.

THESE are hard times, but that is no excuse for attempting to pass business college bank notes for lawful currency. Such an attempt cost two young men of Cleveland one hundred dollars in United States bank notes, that being the amount of the fine imposed upon them.

THE ex-communist and cut-throat, Oliver Pain, who is reported to be in command of the Sudan rebels at Metemneh, went from Paris last year openly avowing his intention of joining Emir Madhi's army. The English ought to give him a dose of Pain-killer.

"WHAT ARE WE HERE FOR?" A three-column chapter concerning the factional troubles of Nebraska's democracy appears in the St. Louis Globe-Democrat, under the head of "What Are We Here For?" This compound of fact and fiction will only attract attention because it is the product of a member of the editorial staff of the Omaha Herald, whose editor is a possible cabinet officer, and the head and front of one of the factions of the Nebraska democracy.

The picture drawn by this artist may flatter the vanity of Dr. Miller, but it is an uncomplimentary to his party as it is cruel and unjust to prominent democrats in every section of the state. It is, moreover, grossly incorrect in many essential particulars and exhibits inexcusable ignorance or willful malice on the part of the writer. With a reckless disregard of statistical facts Nebraska is represented as having a population of nearly half a million people, when the census of 1880 gives us 452,000, and the vote of 1884, which was over 134,000, as against 87,000 in 1880 shows an increase of over 60 per cent, which would make the present population of Nebraska nearly three-quarters of a million. Passing by this slight discrepancy we find that the 1389 resident office-holders in Nebraska are credited with drawing salaries amounting to $2,000,000 per annum, which is an absurd exaggeration, because 805 are postmasters, and only forty-six of these have salaries over $1,000. The big prizes, we are told, are the United States marshals and the land offices. This is on a par with the rest of his fiction. The biggest prize in Nebraska among the federal offices is the Internal revenue collectorship, which is worth $4,800 per year, while the majority of land offices are no better than deputyships in the office of the collector, and storekeepers and gaugers. The district attorney receives fully as much as the marshal.

But the interesting point to the Nebraska democracy is embraced in the following account of its factional feuds and other helplessness:

The senators and congressmen are all republicans, so the hungry hound have nothing to expect in that direction. When they turn to their own party they find it in the throes of factional convulsions. In fact, there is no longer a democratic organization in Nebraska. All that is left of the political skeleton are the Miller and the anti-Miller wings, and the Miller hunters are in grave doubt as to which to cling to. About twelve months ago Dr. George L. Miller and J. Sterling Morton were warm friends of years standing. Miller resigned his place on the national democratic committee in Morton's favor, and the latter began to boom up as a party leader. Before that he had been content to pose as the forlorn hope of the democrats for governor each year, going into each fight with the belief that his personal popularity would wipe out the overwhelming republican majority. When the time came to choose delegates to Chicago Morton announced his intention of carrying the state for Bayard on a free-trade platform. Dr. Miller refusing to be a delegate himself, went quietly to work to secure the delegation for Cleveland on a business-like tariff platform. The struggle was short and sharp, and when the roll was called at Chicago Nebraska voted nine for Cleveland and one (Mr. Morton) for Bayard. It is also an open secret that the tariff plank adopted by the convention was conceived not far from the Herald office in Omaha. This was a double knock-down to the vanity of Mr. Morton, from which he has never recovered.

With the above key-note of the factional feud, the associate editor of the Herald begins to use his scalping-knife in a review of the candidates for the various offices, which would indicate that a political intelligence bureau has been opened in the Herald sanctum where office brokerage will be carried on during the coming four years. A few sample bricks from this published memorandum will suffice:

SEWARD, SEWARD COUNTY. The postoffice at Seward is run by Charles E. Van Pelt, whose term expires June next. Van Pelt's salary is $1,700. Charles S. Allen, George M. Wright and J. S. Kittle have taken the field openly.

FELLSBURG, SANCHE COUNTY. There is no stir in Sanché county among the democrats. There are so few of them that to know that there will be no stir enough to around, B. S. Odell is the present postmaster at Fellsburg. His salary is $1,300. Col. L. E. Tappan is the superintendent of the Indian school at Genoa, salary, $1,200. There are no avowed candidates for either position.

THE postoffice at Albia pays $1,000 a year, and is now in charge of L. B. McMannus, whose term expires in July, 1885. The only candidate thus far is S. L. Roberts, a good man, having his politics.

YORK, YORK COUNTY. L. J. Ganly is postmaster at York. His salary is $2,000, and his commission expires in December, 1887. P. L. Whidson, Dexter Abby (relative of Vice-President Hendricks) and A. H. Campbell are aspirants for the place. The plow must be best for Whidson, who is an old democrat and ex-editor. Abby is also a staunch democrat, while Campbell is branded as a renegade republican.

HEBRON, DAVENPORT COUNTY. J. M. Fitzpatrick, postmaster at Hebron, is the only federal officer in Thayer county. His salary is $1,300. Small as it is, there are five men after it--namely, O. H. Scott, M. H. Wells, W. L. Thompson, H. C. Bigelow and J. H. Stichel. The last named gentleman was the fusion candidate for congress in the Second district last fall and was badly snowed under by Congressman Laird. This is the first time Stichel has "peeped" since election day.

KEARNEY, BUFFALO COUNTY. R. M. Grimes is postmaster at Kearney. His salary is $1,000 and his commission expires in 1888. The aspirant for the office is J. C. Morgan, editor of the Buffalo County Courier, an Iowa man, who has been in Nebraska less than a year. P. P. Phillipot, an old line democrat, George E. Smith, who was postmaster eight years ago, and E. R. Watson, a "gunman from de south," Juan Boyle, an other southerner, is an avowed candidate for something, but he has not shown down his hand yet.

MINDEN, KEARNEY COUNTY. Editor Brobst, of the Kearney County Democrat, is a candidate for postmaster at Minden. The salary is $1,200. The present postmaster is John W. Gordon, whose term of office expires June 31, 1885.

NORFOLK, MADISON COUNTY. Norfolk has but one avowed candidate thus far. His name is Alexander Bear, and he wants to be United States marshal at Omaha. Dr. Bear has nothing in particular against Bierbower, the present marshal, but he bankers after his fat salary and easy work. The office pays about $3,500 a year. Bear has a strong opponent in Col. Gallagher, of Omaha. A. J. Thatch, of Madison, would like to be register or receiver of the United States land office at Norfolk. He has no particular objection to either office.

SCHUYLER, CULIAX COUNTY. The present postmaster at Schuyler is James F. Woods, whose lease of official life expires February 7, 1887. Mr. Woods' salary is $1,500. Eight gentlemen have announced themselves as candidates for the place. They are: O. H. Brown, S. W. McClung, Miles Zentmeyer, P. P. Smith, James Hughes, D. F. Davis, E. C. Smith and George E. Saunders. Brown and McClung are doing the most talking, but Zentmeyer has the inside track. He is a Miller man and has been prominent in state politics.

BLAIR, WASHINGTON COUNTY. Nearly every man in Blair who voted the democratic ticket is an aspirant for office, but most of them are quietly awaiting the outcome of the Miller-Morton fight. They don't like to identify themselves with the losing side. These who have spoken for the post-office are F. M. Stanfield, an ex-saloon keeper; W. H. Farnsworth, lawyer; Frank Harman, county treasurer, and E. H. Clark, attorney. The present postmaster at Blair is L. F. Hilton, editor of the Blair Pilot. His salary is $1,700. W. C. Sexton, a saloon man, has designs upon Col. Tucker's place as receiver of the United States land office at Valentine; salary $3,000.

JUNIATA. At Juniata, S. L. Druse has a clean sweep over for the postoffice. Col. E. M. Allen, of Juniata, would like to succeed W. Amjan as receiver of the land office at Grand Island, and draw $3,000 salary. Amjan's commission expires in June. Richard Thompson, editor of the Democrat, has a wistful eye on the McCook land office, but would be willing to emigrate to Grand Island.

NIOBRARA, NIOBRARA COUNTY. The only applicant for the postoffice at Niobrara is E. D. Gorton, who has the solid support of all citizens. The office is worth about $1,000. John C. Santee, editor of the Niobrara News, is now postmaster. John R. Markley is a candidate for Sandford Parker's place as receiver of the Niobrara land office. He has a heavy endorsement. The salary is $3,000. James Rothwell wants the same place, but is not making a very lively canvass. Fred White, of Cedarhoun, a member of the state legislature, is making a still hunt for the register's place in the Niobrara office. The salary is $3,000. The commission of Maj. Chambers expires in June. White thinks that there will be a struggle for the office and he will have to take it himself to save trouble.

BEATRICE, GAGE COUNTY. There are only four federal offices in Gage county, receiver and register of the United States land office, postmaster at Beatrice and United States commissioner. The present receiver of the land office is W. H. Somers; salary and fees, $3,000; commission expires in 1888; applicant for the place, R. H. Mahanna. Register of the land office H. J. Dobb; salary and fees $3,000, commission expires 1887; applicant, A. Hardy. Postmaster, Jacob Dunn; salary $1,900; applicant, G. P. Marvin. Editor Gage County Democrat, Beatrice also has a candidate for the United States district attorney in the person of Judge Hazlett. If Gallagher, of Omaha, secures the marshalship, Hazlett will stand a good show of getting what he is after.

BLOOMINGTON, FRANKLIN COUNTY. There are three federal offices in Bloomington--postmaster and receiver and register of the United States land office. G. W. Switzer's commission as register of the latter will expire in 1887. The most prominent applicant for the place is Thomas F. Ashby, but as the office is worth $3,500 a year, it is not unlikely that some democrat outside of the district will get it. Switzer is faithful, but is a red-hot republican, and expects to be turned out. The commission of the receiver, R. W. Montgomery, expires in June, 1885. F. A. Harman, the "Little Giant of Democracy," is slated for the place. He will make a good officer and take good care of the $3,000 salary. The postmaster is S. S. Pickett. His salary is $800. While Pickett usually votes the republican ticket, he does not meddle much in politics and attends faithfully to business. This may save him, but J. W. Deary says he would not object to having the job himself.

SOUTH PLATE, LINCOLN COUNTY. Rev. H. C. Backerville has gone east, ostensibly for the purpose of publishing a book on theology, but more probably to look after his appointment as commissioner of education. A number of others have gone east from North Plate on "A Fool's Errand."
