The larger part of the Parlor Match company is stopping at the Goss hotel. The Denver train came in yesterday morning on time with a full load of passengers.

A marriage license was issued yesterday to J. T. McManis and Margaret A. Stangler.

J. L. McDonough, Esq., an extensive cattle man of Valley county, came in from St. Louis last night, on route to his home at Ord.

In Judge Schenck's court Thursday Andrew Jensen commenced a suit for forcible entry and detention against Edwin Hartry, for possession of a house on Cummings street.

At the Union Pacific freight house Saturday the receipts from the west were: Corn 58 cars, coal 21, bullion 8, sand 4, ore 3, hogs 9, hay 2, wheat 1, merchandise 7, miscellaneous 4.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Colpater entertained a party of their friends Thursday night at their residence on Douglas street. Dancing was the main feature of a delightful evening's entertainment.

The feast of St. Joseph, the patron of the St. Joseph hospital of this city was celebrated in a solemn manner Thursday at the hospital. Revs. Joannetta, Glauber and Daxecher taking part in the ceremonies.

The members of the Emmet Monument association are making special arrangements for a grand ball at Falconer's hall on Easter night, April 6. The occasion is the annual "blowout" of the organization.

A dog fight on Tenth street last evening promised at one time to lead to a general row among some fifteen or twenty persons. Why it did not do so is not known.

Clement Chase, editor of the Excelsior, has purchased a printing outfit of new type, and hereafter will superintend the mechanical part of the issuance of his paper. Ben Perley Poore has been engaged as Washington correspondent of the journal.

A swan weighing thirty-five pounds and measuring seven feet from tip to tip of wings, was shot the other day on the Platte by Frank Moore, a Union Pacific conductor and by him presented to Mr. Chris. Hansen, who has placed it on exhibition at Hamrod's sixteenth street store.

Marshall Cummings has issued a manifesto to the effect that all loafers must go. All men who are found hanging around saloons and brothels without any visible means of support will be arrested and sent over the hill. The marshal is determined to clean out the vagrants.

Mrs. Kluss, who was acquitted yesterday of the charge of murder, was upon the streets today leading her three little children. These little ones are bright and excited many kind words of sympathy during the long trial of the poor woman. It is learned that they are sadly in need.

Wednesday night Mr. Phillip Boyson leader of the Union Pacific band, was tendered a pleasant surprise entertainment by his friends at his residence in South Omaha. The occasion was his twenty-sixth birthday. Dancing, music and refreshments combined to make the evening of pleasure long to be remembered.

About half-past five o'clock yesterday afternoon the wind suddenly changed to the north and such a cloud of dust as arose about the depot has not been seen for many days. Hats and wrappings flew around generally, while a number of ladies who were crossing the yard were placed in a most disagreeable plight.

Dr. Morgner, who was violently assaulted by Alonzo George a few nights ago, is rapidly recovering from the injuries he received. A reporter learned yesterday that a number of the medical fraternity of the city will unite in securing the prosecution of George for the outrage on their brother physician. George's wounds, it is said, are healing and he will soon be able to appear in court.

A novel method of pocket picking has been reported at this office. A young man in the crush incidental to exit from the Moody meeting the other night, lost his hat which was knocked off by some one in front of him. He very naturally threw up his hands, and while in this position someone snatched his pocket book which was fortunately empty.

The Excelsior is booming with the spring. It now owns its own printing outfit and will to-morrow appear in its new dress, and illustrated with a beautiful four-column design, "When March Winds Blow," by a Chicago artist. The "Sub Rosa" column goes back into Mr. Chase's hands. He has engaged as regular Washington correspondent the famous Ben Perley Poore, who contributes a letter to-morrow. The Excelsior is now one of Omaha's best advertising mediums, as it goes into every family in the city.

The crowds at the Moody meetings have been simply appalling, and the crush and jam which has been experienced in the exits and entries has caused some wonder that there have been no accidents of a serious nature. Officer Tom Pierson has been kept busy during the evening sessions in clearing the sidewalks and keeping back the crowds who seemed determined to force entry, despite the fact that the interior was crowded almost to suffocation. He has succeeded admirably and deserves great credit.

A party of Nebraska just returned from New Orleans tell the big man that at the St. Charles hotel board is $10 per day. The entire city now at night is dark-completely dark-except in localities where there happen to be private electric lights. This is due to the heavy indebtedness of the city to the gas company, which refuses to furnish more until the debt is paid or secured. The street cars are said to be poor and the streets badly paved; indeed, said one of them, they are thirty-five years behind, and a sulky plow operated here with two horses and a boy, three would require five horses and three persons.

In Sherman county are two young girls, both school mares. They live together, being sisters, and have claims, or homesteads, there. Without saying a word to their neighbors they have Nebraska girls packed up their stables and left for Louisiana. One can imagine the surprise of their acquaintances from this section of Nebraska who met them alone in New Orleans, with that great gathering around them. They went alone, found a good stop in place, and are seeing all there is to be seen. Their names is Love, magnificent 'tis true, and they have showed good sense in utilizing this opportunity to learn of the world's products.

Miss Genevieve Ingersoll, of this city, whose histrionic talent is so well and favorably known to the people of Omaha, has accepted an engagement with a New York dramatic company recently organized, and will, at an early day, go to that city. She will take a leading part in Tom Sawyer's dramatization of Mark Twain's (S. S. Clemens) last work. The people of Omaha will watch this, her "first appearance on the stage," with a high hope that she may win that success to which her fine talents, they believe, entitle her.

Do not be deceived; ask for and take only B. H. Douglas's & Sons' Capicium Cough Drops for Coughs, Colds and Sore Throats. D. S. and Trade Mark on every drop.

Twenty-four Italians were shipped yesterday on the east bound C., B. & Q. train to Fontanelle, Ind., where they are to be used for railroad contract purposes. "These Dagoes," as you call them, said the contractor in charge to a reporter, "are capable of doing good work and are well suited for contract labor purposes. They are steady, willing and fairly intelligent, and are not inclined to shirk their tasks as are laborers of some other nationalities. They are generally docile but when they imagine they are slighted or wronged they are terribly rebellious and hard to manage. Once let a 'boss' incur the general hatred of a set of these men working under him and his position becomes a decidedly risky one."

In the county court yesterday the case of O'Connor & Fagan against Edholm & Erickson was on trial. The suit is one brought by plaintiffs for $290 damages for alleged breach of contract on part of defendants in refusing to allow them to occupy a building on Douglas street, for which a bargain had been made. The defense is that the plaintiffs stated when the contract was made that the building was to be used for restaurant purposes, when in reality it was rented with the intention of establishing a saloon.

POLICE COURT.

Usual Routine Work--Driving Out the Vags--A Character.

In the police court yesterday morning, Joseph Reavis, an ex-soldier, was arraigned for drunkenness. "I wasn't intoxicated yer honor," said Joseph. "I can't plead guilty, for I know I'm not."

"Waive examination," said a stentorian voice, from among the audience. Tom Cornick assuaged the impudence of the suggestion, bellowed "order," Judge Weiss shrieked "quiet," and after Marshal Cummings had recovered from the shock and re-lit his stub, the trial proceeded.

Reavis was finally released on a solemn promise never to return.

Barton Hiles next faced the judicial music-box, on a similar charge.

"Hi hadmit has 'ow hi was slightly under the influence, judge--but cahn't you--"

"Five dollars and costs," shrieked the judge.

James Wilson, Chas. Rose, C. E. Watson and Henry Cooper, four vagrants, were given sentences, of various lengths on bread and water, and were allowed to leave town, on penalty of instant seizure and imprisonment if they returned.

"A. F. Van Ormand," called the judge. "Here I am, yer honor, good morning to you," said a tall, lank individual, shuffling to the front.

"You are accused of intoxication. How is it?"

"Not a bit of it, yer honor, not a bit of it."

At this juncture, Mr. V. gathered his breath and told a "whopper," of almost paralyzing ingenuity. "You see, yer honor, I was walking across to the Millard last night, and some fellow cased me with ammonia that had been sprinkled over a handkerchief. I inhaled the whole thing, yer honor, and, of course, I was dizzy. I suppose the officer thought I was drunk and arrested me, but I wasn't. Oh, no, it was only the ammonia."

The judge couldn't quite swallow all this and foud the prisoner $10 and costs.

Van Ormand is a character. He is known from Chicago to Denver and San Francisco as a most persistent gambler and a most prodigious liar.

He is very fond of telling greenhorn acquaintances of his how he is related to this and that dignitary throughout the country, and how he owns thousands and thousands of acres of western ranch property, millions of cattle, etc.

He is a nephew of Gus Stiles, formerly secretary of the Chicago Board of Trade, whose tragic death at the hands of the Sturlita family is well known to Omaha.

Stiles was in Chicago and carrying on his gambling operations, he was continually borrowing money of his dear "nunky." One day Stiles growing disgusted, exclaimed, "See here, Van Ormand, 'your acquaintance is too valuable. The bargain was never made, and shortly afterward Stiles was killed.

Still Persistent.

There has been issued a call for the democratic members of the legislature to meet in Lincoln on the 30th of this month, to consider and decide upon the proper persons to receive the federal appointments in Nebraska. The result of their deliberations will be forwarded to the president as a sort of recommendation or quasi party endorsement of the persons selected in their convention.

County Surveyor Smith has completed a full set of maps of each ward and precinct in the county, showing every city and suburban lot and farm, and has made copies on cloth for the use of the various assessors. The maps are marvellously complete and extensive, the precinct maps being drawn on a scale of four inches to the mile, and the city maps on a still larger scale. The investment cost the county about $100, and will soon pay for itself. The assessors start out with their maps and books on the first of next month.

Officer John Turnbull was engaged yesterday in taking the names of the wholesale liquor dealers in this city who will be required to pay the $1,000 license in accordance with the recent supreme court decision. He says that there will be about thirteen firms and representatives of brewers who will be listed and required to pay the license. Two firms have signified their intention of moving elsewhere, to escape the operation of the law.

Yesterday about three o'clock a team attached to a wagon near the Canfield house, became frightened, in some mysterious manner, and started to run away. The lamp post on the corner of Ninth and Farnam was knocked down and the wagon was badly shattered. At this point one of the horses broke loose. Leaving his less impetuous mate standing by the wrecked vehicle, he dashed wildly up Farnam, near Tenth street colliding with a wagon, throwing it to one side and slightly damaging it. The animal, in a badly excited condition, was captured further up the street.

A RUNAWAY COUPLE.

How a Boy and Girl Sought to be Married by Judge McCulloch.

Wednesday night about half past ten o'clock, as Judge McCulloch, of the county court, was about to retire for the slumbers of the just, he was summoned to meet two young people in the parlor who wished to be married. The genial judge at once produced pen and ink and proceeded to draw up the necessary legal paper. Everything went smoothly until the young girl was asked how old she was.

"I am not quite eighteen," she replied with a smile and blush.

The judge gravely informed the couple that he could not marry them, if the girl was under the age of eighteen. Pleading was of no avail, and slowly and sadly the two went off to the Cozens hotel.

The next day they went over to the Bluffs, where by dint of a little harmless perjury they secured a license and were made man and wife. The young man's name is A. C. Johnson and he hails from the vicinity of Atlantic, Iowa; the young lady comes from the same place but what her name is, or was, could not be learned. The story, in brief, as told by the young man, was that he was working on a farm near the place already indicated, when he fell in love with a neighbor's daughter, with whom he had been more or less intimate since childhood. The marriage union was opposed by the Johnson family, who insisted that the girl was not one of the "f. f. v.'s," and was unworthy to be the bride of a "Johnson." The boy and girl determined to elope, and having heard that Omaha was the paradise for runaway lovers, had set their faces toward the "Gate City." After the little episode chronicled, the marriage was consummated and Mr. and Mrs. J. returned to Atlantic.
