My friend settled himself in his easy chair, and smoking slowly and with are continually being sprung on the game, and the best of us are constantly cheated." He ceased talking, blew a long, thin column of blue smoke high in the warm air of the room, and drank a little Scotch whisky. Then turning his head towards me he said, sorrowfully: "I had a pocket-exhausting game played on me the other day in Kansas City." "Tell me about it," I said.
"I will," he replied, "simply to point a moral, and to impress on you the truth that you should never play poker. Well,

I loved the farmer, and I resolved to take care, good care, of this agricul-tural innocent. I was introduced to Mr. Thompson as a gentleman who had a pretty fancy for poker, and one who would probably accommodate him. Now, I meant to pluck this barnyard pigeon artistically; so I played him as fine as silk. I talked and laughed as though to a timid maiden, for fear he might become slarmed. But the old chapdid not appear to be at all modest or in the lesst skittish. He with queer and agricultural sounding oaths, vociferously asserted that he could beat any man at single handed bor. poker. He was the sucking dove of p'geons! He was keen to play. Clark ook me to one side and warned me that Mr. Thompson was a kloker, and that if I played with him and won I would have to leave town, as he would inform the police of his loss at once. Roller-Skating Nonsence.

Sacremento Bea. A great deal of nonsence is talked of coller-skating. This form of exercise, like every other good thing, is liable to abuse. Excess is of course, to be avoided, but a moderate degree of roller-skating, in a well ventilated and cleanly hall, or in the open air can lojure nobody whose nerves are in a normal condition. It is not an argument against roller-skat ng that some man has been stricken with paralysis while engaged in it, or that a New Yorker died with exhaustion after skating 450 miles in a six days' match. Mea have been stricken with paralysis while walking, and other men baye died from excessive exertion in pedestrianism, rowing, riding and like forms of exercise. But yet no one condems walking, riding or rowing as unhealthful. The hardest esson for young America to learn is moderation in all things. And this is the lesson taught by death from over-exer-
