A motion was made to have the convention move to the Academy of Music, but after much wrangling and a pla'n effort to get control of the convention by persons who figured throughout the subsequent proceedings, the conventien by a large majority refused to go to the Academy of Music, saying that it

The house was jammed with outsiders. and a long scene of confusion and disorder ensued, which became almost in tolerable, when officers were called on to make the "lobby," who were outvoting the delegates, go outside.

A committee on credentials consisting of Brown, Allen, Trott, Tracy, Young and Simpson was appointed, and with large bundle of papers of credentials lef the hall.

A motion was put debarring any man who had been a participant in either the democratic, citizens' or republican convention from a seat in this convention. Upon this motion a scene of noise and confusion followed that need not be described. The matter, after long and loud talking, was quieted by laying aside the whole question until the committee on credentials should report, and it was not mentioned sgain.

Somebody called Mullhall for a speech. He took the stand and said he hoped that when the body adjourned, their action would show that they did not need bayonets to keep them in subjection and order, as had been said of them by the president of the citizens' convention that nominated Jas. E. Boyd. Such a statement was an insult to every man who works, and yet men asked workingmen to vote for the man who did so. He continued, and made a call on the body to say if anyone of them "forgets the murder of Armstrong" four years ago, when Boyd had troops and pumpkin-rollers from Wahoo brought here to help the he closed his high-pitched harangue, and was followed by a Mr. Lewis, who underwis followed by a Mr. Lewis, who under-took to explain the "modus operandi" by which, if he told of the characters of either Boyd or Murphy, he would injure both, and after this great announcement sub-of a Dine Museum whale; others that it and after this great announcement subsided for the time being.

The alarm was quietly given, said Patti, telling a charming fib with of N. C., Joplin, of Ky., Meyer, of say having been heard.

At this stage it was very evident that Murphy had a large majority of the delegates triendly to nim, and the opposition then began a systematic plan of delay, and efforts to adjourn. And for threequarters of an hour pandemonium prevalled among delegates and lobby. Finally the committee on credentials rewrangling over their report and reading it. During this time the police were requested again to clear the lobby, but the yellers stood firm and finally the delegates entitled to seats were declared to be representatives of the following societies: horseshoers, sewer gang, shoemakers, sheetiron workers, plumbers, butchers, warehousemen, box-makers, cornice-workers, colored c'tizens, tailors, U. P. painters, graders, job work, bookbinding, etc., non-union carpenters, U. P. freight house, harnessmakers, molders, U. P. lumbermen, tramsters, brickmakers, U. P. storehouse, printer's delegation, Swedish brotherhood, harnessmakers, Union veteran club, cigar makers, U. P. lumber yard, association of amalgamated workingmen, eigar packers, foundry employes, lumber yard men, boilermakers, pricklayers, tinners, plasterers, blackamitha helpers, shovelers, coopers, U. P.

Upon the announcement that these were all, a howl of complaint again went up and epithets that were unfit to be printed in THE BEE were freely used and pitched about by delegates. The report

Hon. P. F. Murphy said, Gentlemen, I thank you very much for this nomina-tion, and, if elected by the people, I promise to be true to the interests of labor, as I claim I always have been, and to be true to all interests of the city. I claim there are no people in Omaha or any-where else more deeply interested in the preservation of law and order than the laboring men in this city, and I know them sufficiently well to say that they will always be true to the best interests of this city.

Gentlemen, I thank you again for this nomination, and I consider it a very great honor indeed.

The Wonderful Sight Witnessed in the Missouri Yesterday.

A strange sight was witnessed in the waters of the Missouri yesterday-on calculated, indeed, to fill the heart of thee observer with feelings of wonder and dismay. It is nothing less than a meranguthaneum giganteum, -- a genuine river

About eight o'clock yesterday morning the alert denizens of the river bottoms spied, floating far away up the river a huge black object, round and apparently, railroad corporation and do wrong to in length, some forty or fifty feet. The labering men. Continuing in this strain speculation among the ignorant and unsophisticated spectators as to the whatwas the escaped sole of a Council Bluffs Mr. Quinn was called for and willingly girl's shoe; while others were betting even to move toward the river. The interloud and continuous storm of yells and of a more philosophical bent hit upon the and large numbers of people came flocking to the shores of the Big Muddy, to witness the wonderful sight. By the time the zerpent had reached a point about Song.' half a mile above the waterworks, the banks for two miles up and around the river were lined with spectators. Slowly the merangu thaneum giganteum hove into sight. Close inspection (with spy ported, and about one hour was spent in glass) disclosed the fact that it was about fifty feet in length, with a skin very black and covered with scales, each about two feet in superficial area, of an ellipsofdal form, and color, which may be described as a light carulean. Toward the head, the body tapered down considerably, so that at the base of the animal's skull the thickness did not exceed five feet. Two upright ears, of about eighteen inches length, a cavernous and ivory-bedecked mouth huge glassy eyes of a flaming red-completed the main features of the besst's nead. The tail of the animal was about three feet in length, without the blue scales, and traversed up and down by finny bars, and terminating in an ar-

MAPLESON'S EXPENSES. Col. Mapleson's profits on his western trip have been very small. The traveling expenses alone since leaving St. Louis have amounted to $20,000. Then, too the fact of Pattl having to sing so often in the place of Nevada has largely diminshed the profits. While the receipts bave always been very large, the expenses have been correspondingly high.
