

SERENADE.

Hon. J. E. Boyd Serenaded Last Night by A. O. H. Citizens.

Procession, Music and Speech.

Last evening the A. O. H. society, composed of Irish voters met in the Hibernian hall, and with their band of music marched in procession to the residence of Hon. J. E. Boyd, mayor-elect of Omaha.

Upon arriving at the home of their friend, the band discoursed several inspiring airs, when the object of their compliment appeared and substantially said:

MR. BOYD'S SPEECH.

Gentlemen: The presence of so many men and such a demonstration as I see before me touches my heart and I would be less than human if I failed to appreciate and acknowledge them.

The battle is over; the smoke has cleared off and we can now calmly look over the field which yesterday the opposing forces met. On the one side were gathered those who favored the suppression of riot and disorder and the protection of laboring men in their peaceful employment and pursuits. On the other side were those--in part at least--who held opposite views. The issue yesterday was, shall men who wish to work be protected or shall they be maltreated and driven from their work, their tools thrown into the ditch and special policemen sent there to protect them, be beaten and driven away.

This issue was exaggerated and harped upon, and many men were made mad and desperate against the man who has always been the friend of the laboring man. For thirteen years I have worked and know what the word means in all its senses and applications. I have always labored and hired laboring men and I defy any man to point to a single instance of oppression by me of the laboring man. [Here the speaker was cheered lustily.]

Because three years ago I called on the governor of the state of Nebraska to aid me to suppress a riot and protect the laboring man, I must be no longer remembered. Three years have passed and I still think I did my duty and made the prosperity of to-day possible. I did not make a mistake [very emphatically]; if so it was of the head and because of a want of better judgment.

In another part of yesterday's battle-field were some men who called themselves democrats, but who are democrats only in name. They were always laboring and hired laboring men and I defy any man to point to a single instance of oppression by me of the laboring man. [Here the speaker was cheered lustily.]

Mr. Boyd would not speak of the mode and weapons used to compass his defeat, except to say that he believed that some acted on the principle that declares all is fair in war and politics. He would say that he did not use a dollar except for legitimate purposes in this campaign, and anyone who says the contrary states an untruth. He had believed all the time that he would be elected, and had not a moment but honorable means to secure the fulfillment of his wish and belief. He should soon enter on the duties of the office, and would do so free from any promise to any man, and his future actions must be judged by his past. He wished once more to thank his friends who had so honored him by this demonstration, and regretted that his house was too small to invite all of them in, but hoped at some other time to reciprocate their kindness.

THE COURTS.

Little Doing in the District Court and Habeas Corpus in the County Court--The Usual Police Record.

DISTRICT COURT.

In Judge Wakely's court yesterday the case of Kimball vs. the city of Omaha (really contractor McGarlock) was on trial and not ended when the hour of adjournment arrived.

COUNTY COURT.

In the case of Welch vs. Patterson, a suit for $40 for work done, a motion to quash the summons was heard and sustained, and an alias summons ordered and the trial set for the 13th of April. Two cases of habeas corpus were before Judge McCulloch yesterday: the one, that of Albie Gilmore, the cyprian and alleged watch snatcher, the other that of Rich James, alias Lambert, her paramour and his companion. The facts are briefly these: A man was walking on the street and got into conversation with the woman, separated from her and at once discovered that his watch had been taken. He filed complaint and procured a warrant for her arrest, which was executed. After the arrest, perhaps the next day, the fellow, Lambert, approached the loser of the watch, asked if he was the person who lost it and upon being informed that he was, told him he could take him to a person who would restore it. The two went to that person, the watch was produced and the owner told that he could get it if he would agree not to prosecute the woman who was in jail on the charge of having stolen it. These terms were not, it appears, accepted; at any rate the case was heard before Judge Benke, and both parties went on to abide the action of the grand jury. Bail was not given and the parties are now before the county court on a habeas corpus. The first question that arose was if the judge would open the case so as to admit the production of the transcript of the police court. Upon this the county court decided that the showing made by the papers returned to the court would be the only thing admitted in the shape of testimony. The Lambert case being under consideration was argued yesterday evening and the police admitted that there is in the paper many evidence tending to show a probability of offence that will warrant the holding of the accused. Judge McCulloch reserved his opinion in the Lambert's case till 11 o'clock this morning, at which time he will deliver it, and then at once hear the woman Gilmore's case, in which it is likely the same point will arise.

POLICE COURT.

In the police court yesterday a few drunks were fined and some sent to jail. A woman was sent to jail as an insane person. Her name is given as Marie Kanston. Hanson, J. C. Prentzel for disturbing the peace, and several other cases will be heard to-day. One of these is that of Ed. Cook for stealing a pair of shoes from Terrill & Cook.

A VALUED SOUVENIR.

That Told Good News to the Country.

A gentleman of this city has in his possession an "Extra" of the Daily Republican about eight inches long and the width of this column, dated April 10, 1865.

A copy of this valued souvenir is here, with given, with tells its own great story:

GLORIOUS NEWS!!!

SURRENDER OF LEE'S ARMY!!!

COMES TO GRANT'S TERMS!!!

OFFICIAL DISPATCHES AND CORRESPONDENCE

IN THE EVENING PAPER!

WAR DEPARTMENT, WASHINGTON, April 8.

To Major-General Dix, New York City: This department has received the official report of the surrender of the army of General Lee and his army to General Grant, on the terms proposed by General Grant. Details will be given as speedily as possible.

(Signed) EDWIN M. STANTON, Sec'y of War.

There is, as will be noticed a discrepancy between the date of the above dispatch to General Dix and the facts of the case; that is, the surrender of General Lee's army occurred Sunday, April 9, and not April 8. Either this is an error of the types, or it may be accounted for on the theory that General Grant, who had been negotiating with Lee, upon the subject of his surrender since April 7th, kept the war department advised of the practical agreement to surrender on the day preceding the actual laying down of arms by the Confederates at Appomattox.

This "Extra," aside from its value as a monumental reminder of a day that will live in American history through coming centuries, has especial value at this time when the great soldier, whose bearing at that period so pregnant with great events, who the admiration of the world, lies in torture at death's door, soon to be beyond the lines where the flash of battle will be seen no more.

The cases of Ainscow vs. Anderson, forcible entry; Stitzel vs. Schwack, for indebitment; and the notorious case of Elton vs. Flannigan, for the possession of land (the latter on change of venue from Justice Anderson), were before Justice Stenberger yesterday for trial or to be set for trial.

A lady from Finland was at the depot yesterday and testified her gratitude for some courtesy and kindness, which she could not speak of, being ignorant of English, by getting down and screwing on the floor, notwithstanding the efforts of Depot Agent Ostrom to prevent it. She was en route to Carbon, Wyoming.

Yesterday was chiefly remarkable for the number of thirty men about town whose pocket pieces did not jingle so numerously and as recklessly as on Tuesday. Johnny Hall says their subterfuges and "gilded sine" in the shape of stories to secure just one taper off were amusing if not so harassing and vexing.

DIED.

WICKBAEK--At 11:30, Wednesday, April 8, Omaha, Michael Wickbaek, in the 66th year of his age. He remains will be buried to-morrow at 11 a. m., from the German Catholic church.

THOMAS--On yesterday, April 8, at 10:30 a. m., in U. S. City, the wife of G. Thomas, Esq., departed this life. Funeral notice hereafter.

An Emperor's Musical Skill. London World.

The handle-plano, the successor of the barrel organ, is the invention of the famous harmonium-maker, Debain, of the Place Lafayette, Paris; and a very good story I know in connection with its invention. The pianist, Ascher, who had the title of pianist to the Empress Eugenie, was asked to play the handle-plano for her majesty. While he was announced and kept waiting a few minutes, he heard some one in the next room playing most brilliantly difficulties of no common order. "Who is that?" he asked the aide-de-camp. "Ah, l'Empereur's amuse," said General Fleury. Bigre! the Emperor! When it was always supposed that the Emperor did not know one of two pieces from the other, or took two for two pieces the same piece played twice, there was room enough for surprise. But when Ascher was ushered into the Emperor's presence, he saw the Emperor turning the handle of a new piano, and performing as brilliantly as the distinguished meisters les Italiens do in our streets to the delight of the area princesses.

Proof Against Intoxication. New York Times.

"Don't you know," said a gentleman in a bar room to a very seedy-looking party who was about to drink a glass of steaming hot whiskey, "that the strong fumes of that hot liquor are very intoxicating? Two or three such glasses will make you terribly drunk."

"No they won't."

"Why won't they?"

The Irish National League of Iowa.

A LARGE AND ENTHUSIASTIC MEETING AT DES MOINES, APRIL 8.--The state meeting of the Irish National League of Iowa was held here to-day with a large attendance. The reports of the secretary and treasurer showed affairs in a flourishing condition. A letter was read from Patrick Egan, president of the National League, regretting his inability to be present.

The committee on resolutions reported as follows: Resolved, That this convention, composed of representatives of the Irish National League of Iowa, heartily endorses and affirms the platform and resolutions of the Irish National League convention, held at Boston, Mass., August 14, 1884.

Resolved, That the Irish National League of Iowa express its unqualified approval of the course pursued by Charles Stewart Parnell and the Irish parliamentary party under his leadership, and pledges itself to support them by every moral and material aid in the contest, and we therefore heartily commend the parliamentary party to the generosity of our countrymen.

Resolved, That we approve the renewal and extension of the National League of America, and we recognize that Ireland has been and is governed by social and moral foreign lepers, and we therefore heartily commend the parliamentary party to the generosity of our countrymen.

Resolved, That we approve the renewal and extension of the National League of America, and we recognize that Ireland has been and is governed by social and moral foreign lepers, and we therefore heartily commend the parliamentary party to the generosity of our countrymen.

the latter being the son of her husband. If the union of the son and the widow be blessed with a girl babe, the little one would certainly be the old gentleman's grandchild. In this instance, however, the old man being son-in-law to the son, he, in addition to being his grandfather, is a half-brother to the infant and the child is half-sister to its grandmother. In case the daughter, who married the widower, should have a boy, he would at once become his grandmother's half-brother and her brother-in-law at the same time.
