shan't be so badly Pretty. Wealthy Don't you think so, now?

A Talk with the Richest Woman in the State of Texas-The Interesting Story of a Foundling.

Philadelphia Call. A notable little woman is staying at one of the hotels in New York city, prior to her departers for Europe in tew days. She has beed styled "the Texas Cattle Queen," but this is a misnomer. She is a Texas planter. She is from near Houston, petite and pretty, young, and she is said to be the wealthest woman in the southwest. Dark, lustrous eyes, and a piquant countenance and manner indicate her creole, Franch and Spanish parentage. She dresses fashlonably and in good taste, and, so far as appearances go, she might have been born and bred in New York. Her education began at the Moravian school in Bethlehem, Pa. Her story, as reluct-antly told by her in answer to question-ng, runs in an interesting fashion.

"I was left an orphan at twelve, and had to look after my father's plantation. I was married at thirteen, and at seventeen I was a widow. Since then I have looked after myself. Successfully? Oh, yes, I suppose so. I have two large plantations and raise cotton, corn and ogar cane. Then I own some property in Houston—one of the opera houses, orado. These skins are alternately ef some stores and a hotel. I had a fight the male and female coon, thus producing over the hotel. They wanted to make an effect that is well nigh dazzling, for it out that there was a mortgage on it ahead should be understood that the hues of of mine. Attorney-General Brewster was my lawyer, and he's just won the differ radically, yet each is startlingly case. I'll make about $40,000 on it. I thought at one time I'd move north. I Col. Of course, once in overcoat President Cleveland thanked a while they get lively and ride through the donor cordially, and said that he town shouting and firing off their pistols at signs and chimneys, but we don't bagrudge them a little fun now and then. Their work is hard enough. Do they ever kill anybody? Oh, sometimes, of course, people get hit by stray shots when the boys are on their rackets; but that's only accidental, you know. It doesn't amount to anything in Texas. People north have such funny ideas. Now, which had you rather do, steal a horse in Arkansas or kill a man in Texas? Neither? Well, I'll tell you; it's six of one and half a dozen of the other. Horses don't amount to much in Arkan sas, and men don't in Texas. They look after the horse thieves sharp in Texas, however. They never get farther than

"Last night I was going out with a One day I was standing in front of one long did he gaze that finally the tanner of my buildings in Houston when a fight began in the street. A friend of mine and Wooliffe—you've heard of Wooliffe—were fighting. Wooliffe got out his revolver first and hit my friend. Then my friend fired and missid. Wooliffe had the next shot and would have killed him sura. There was a big crowd around but nobody moved, and I jumped in front of Wooliffe and called out:

"For God's sake, isn't there a man "Wooliffe shoved his revolver up a little and the ball went over my head. He said afterward that seeing a girl jump in so quick he couldn't help raising his platel a little. Then the crowd came in and separated the men. My friend gave me the revolver I always carry. He said I saved his life. "I don't know how the newspapers hear about me. I know a good many people here, though. The jewelers all know me. I have a passion for jewels, and they say my collection is a fine one. I've just come from Philadelphia. I bought the Muir diamonds there this visit, and a beautiful cameo for $1,000. You see this ring? That blg stone there looks like a lemon-colored diamond doesn't it? Now, hold it to the light. Wouldn't you think it was a ruby? They call it the 'hidden light.' They are found only in North Carolina, and I believe there are only a few-three or four -good ones in the country. Their being so rare, I suppose, is what makes them worth more than any other gem of the same size. "Neglecting business? Oh, no. You see down there we buy everything early in the season, and then there's no more paying to be done, nor any money com-ing in until the crop is gathered. I keep one set of books myself, and nobody could get the best of me if he wanted to. I have a good superintendent too. I pay him $200 a month. I might get him for $150, but I'd cather pay $200; then he won't have to steal from me. I den't know whether it's because I'm such a good planter or because all the people help me every way they can, but for the last three years I've taken the $500 prize for hav-

Sealskins have of late been dyed even darker than before. Four or five years ago the fashion of dark fors set in in Paris, and London had to follow, although there was considerable opposition to the departir g from the ways of England. The public demanded the darker goods and then the larger ones had ultimately to exert themselves in the same direction. For some inexplicable reason at tempts are now being made to produce a surface even darker than has yet been Then, too, they can bring their pictures there for sale, if they want to. MRS. TILTON AT HOME, Surrounded by Luxury and Refinement-Unvisited by Her Husband or Mr. Beecher.

New York Letter in Nashville Union. Once in awhile the question is heard, 'What has become of Mrs. Tilton'" The little woman, who was a few years ago the most widely known American woman in the world, lives with her aged mother, with the greatest skill and care, under the Mrs. Morse, on Pacific street, in Brooklyn, in comfort and quiet. Ever since the remarkable scandal trial she has lived in habited a garret, taken in sewing for a living or lived in any of the poor ways rumor frequently declared she did. Mrs Morse, her mother, is the wife of the veteran Judge Morse, one of the first presidents of the Union ferry company and now a retired honored member of the same wealthy corporation.

The home of Mrs. Tilton with her mother is one of taste, refinement and elegance. Many of the pictures that were made famous by the oft repeated yarns in the court rooms of how Theodore, in his night shirt, used to go around the house rehanging them at all hours of the night, are to be seen on the walls of her present brown stone home. In the boys' bed room is a life sized photograph of their father, taken when a very young man, with his arms folded, his head dropped upon his breast, his eyes closed and his postical locks curling upon his neck lee attitude and the factal expression say: "Look at me and do aught but ad mire me if you can." Rare books and various art works embellish and beautify the home. Mrs. Tilton is still the same quiet, plous little woman that she always was, only a shade or two sadder and much older. She has a rare faculty of trying to be always cheerful and believes fully in the efficiency of prayer, and that what "God wills He will," and His creatures must follow His law to be saved hereafter. Her hair is snow-white, her figure a little more robust and rounded, although still childish in stature and

Mr. Tilton has never stepped across that threshold since the trial. Certainly not Mr. Beecher. It would not be very well for either one to make the attempt. The two sons, Carroll and Ralph, are young men now, both occupying good clerkships, and live with their mother. Carroll, the elder, is a Tilton in look and nature. Ralph is a mother's boy, a fine, promising young character. two daughters are both married and both mothers. Alice, the younger, lives in Chicago. Mrs. Tilton visited her not long since. That Mrs. Tilton was "forsaken by her friends," as the newspapers would have it four and five years ago, is not true either. The fact is, there is more intellectual company entertained in Mrs. Tilton's house in the course of a year than that of a dozen families—"best families"—all told. Nothing would be pleasanter to Mrs. Tiiton than to know that the outside world had forgotten her. To a certain extent it has, but still she has a large circle of friends.
