The Department Rifle Range Will No be Removed From Fort Onaha.

The Rifle Contest in August-Gen Breck's Arrival,

It has been definitely decided that the department rifle range will not be removed this year to any point west-and In all probability it will be kept here for a number of years to come. Last week Maj. Henry received notice from Washington that an appropriation of $1,000 had been allowed for the purpose of placing the new range in order for the coming contest, and accordingly the work of making the necessary im-provements are already in progress, su-perintended by Lieuts. True and Robinon, under the supervision of Maj. Henry. This appropriation will cover the cost of pits, firing stands, targets, etc. It is expected that the work will pro-gress rapidly, and that the range will be ready for use very shortly. The department rifle shooting contest will commence the first week in August, closing about the 21st. At that time the department shooting will commence at Fort Snelling, Minn. "I think it would be a good idea" said Major Henry in conversation with a re-porter yesierday, "to call the attention of the merchants attention of the merchants and the people of Omaha to this department refle practice, and see if some little interest in the event couldn't be stirred up. I think it would be a good offered by the government. The contest will bring over 100 soldiers to Omaha and will benefit the railroads, as well as think that our business men ought to take some interest in the affair and allow the riflemen to shoot for prizes of local offering."

The idea is a good one and it is to be hoped that some public spirited genius will take it up and carry it into execution. The interest of the contest, would no doubt, be greatly enhanced if such local prizes were offered.

These trips were not confined to any territory in particular, but were extended or limited at the pleasure or doubt, be greatly enhanced if such of himself. By these processes he had made considerable money, which he invested in property in the northern portion of Mercer county, near Sheakley-ville. Although he had no settled home, he seemed to profess the place and when he seemed to prefer this place, and when not on the road spent a great deal of his time there. Just how he lost the title to the nostrum is not and never will be known, as Davis, after entering the alms house, was very taciturn concerning his business and would never mention any facts of the case. It is supposed, however, that he gave the receipt to other parties with the understanding that he was to have an interest in the business. As he began to dabble in financial speculations on a large scale and failed, his affairs became very much mixed up and the sheriff finally sold his goods for debt. Davis disappeared and was found several days afterward roaming through the woods a lunatic. A large gash across his throatseemed to imply that he had attempted suicide, and his clothes and boots were in a very bad condition. After his capture he became morose and sullen, rarely speaking, and moping around. For a period of two months at a time he would not speak a word, and then would talk only of his early history or of trifling affairs. KEELY'S NEW ENGINE.

He Runs It with the Newly Discovered Power For an Hour,

Inventor Keely's workshops, on Twentieth street, above Master, were crowded yesterday afternoon by a number of gentlemen, who gathered to witness experiment with Mr. Keely's newest discovery. Among the number were Messra, Shaw, Jessup and Collier, of this city, and Messrs. Boyd, Elliott and Green, of package to indicate contents or sender. Address New York. When the curiosity seekers DR. JAMES, No. 204Washington St., Chicago, Ill. crowded into the room where the new apparatus stood there was scarcely room left for Mr. Keely to move around. The "Inter-etheric liberator" and the latest engine were the attractions. The former stood upon a pedestal, and rested upon a bed of plate-glass one inch in thickness. It was connected with the engine by fine steel tubes, and the aperture through which the power was transmitted was about as large as a good sized needle is thick, The engine consists of a sphere resting upon two uprights. At one end of the axle was a small pulley wheel, over which the belt passed. The ontire apparatus was apart, and the various pieces were strewn over the floor when the gentleman entered. Mr. Keely proceeded to put the "liberator" together in their presence, and a half-hour was consumed in this. At about 3 o'clock the inventor admitted a pint of air into a wrought steel tube, and this was then passed into the liberator, where its power was multiplied fifteen times over in a second. The air was passed through the stored in a wrought-steel cylinder. The gauges showed a pressure of 8500 pounds to the square inch, and the tube seemed to expand. The engine was started and run for an hour or more. Planks were put under it and pressed sgainst it to decrease the speed, but there was no perceptible lessening of the revolutions. After this lever was lifted, with two stout gentlemen sitting upon it, and the gauges showed a pressure of 22,000 and the bullets were splattered like so much mud upon an icon target. Mr. Keely said that in about two months he expected to have his completed engine, now building, ready. Then he would take out his patents and his work would be finished. He said that he had full control of the great power and could use it at will.
