

LINCOLN.

Incidents of the Day at the Capital of the State.

One More Commencement Passes at the State University.

Young Orators Point the Horizons of their Research in Glowing Colours—The Cornerstone.

THE DAY AT LINCOLN.

COMMENCEMENT EXERCISES. Reported by THE BEE'S BUREAU.

LINCOLN, Neb., June 10.—Commencement day opened up finely with a pleasant breeze and the small boys seeming to enjoy the day nearly as well as they do the Fourth of July. A few minutes before 10 o'clock the students marched from the university to the opera house, headed by a band. The opera house had already become well filled and within a few minutes after the students were seated it was impossible to find a seat.

After invocation, Edward J. Churchill delivered an oration, taking for his subject "John C. Calhoun, the great exponent of the questions which died with the last cause, of the perpetuation of human slavery and states rights." Mr. Churchill showed conclusively what has already been proven, that slavery and the constitution could not work together; that one or the other must go and it went. A large portion of his oration was eulogistic. His manner and delivery were fair, but his seeming ill-maturity rather interfered with his memory.

At the close of the oration at the opera house, honorary degrees were conferred upon H. H. Wilson and the Hon. Allen W. Field, both of Lincoln. The oration of Hamilton C. Eddy on "Culture," was good. Mr. Eddy is a quiet, clear, and rather pleasant speaker. Mary L. Jones read a very forcible oration on "The Influence of the English Ballad," showing how rapidly the ballad had risen in influence until now the most popular and latest poems of our best authors were ballads. Miss Jones managed her subject well and manifested a thorough acquaintance with poems, ballads, and their authors.

Conway G. McMillan, next yet out of his teens, paid a glowing tribute to the wonderful Scotch poet Robert Burns. Mr. McMillan was classical in his thoughts and very flowery in his language, adding new laurels to his name on his graduating day.

The strongest oration delivered during the entire commencement exercises was that of Amos G. Warren, bearing upon the social, political and religious questions and positions of the present day. His first burst of eloquence was to the effect that no reformation, civil, political or religious was ever conceived or established except by enthusiasts. He claimed there was no such thing as a contented citizen, and that the only way to progress was through the suffering of the masses.

Mrs. Grace B. Dales, after which the degrees were conferred upon the graduates by the chancellor. Upon the stage was the chancellor, presiding, the board of regents and Gov. Dawes.

THE CORNERSTONE Laid.

After the exercises at the opera house a large number of the audience adjourned to the university, where the ceremony of laying the cornerstone of the central laboratory took place. After invocation by the Rev. Gregory a short address was delivered by the chancellor. He alluded to the past, the happy present, and a strong hope for the future of an institution which could and would, with proper support, do an amount of good, be the pride of the people and honor of the state.

A brief address was then delivered by A. W. Field, speaker of the house of representatives and a son of the university, who spoke in glowing terms of the great good it could accomplish, and urged strongly upon the university to build up a strong institution, and mentioned among some facts connected with the university that its library was number four in the list of states, but began counting from the bottom, Delaware, West Virginia and Arkansas being the three below. Then followed the address of Prof. Hanson, "The Endowment of Research," a paper which was a poem by Prof. Lucius A. Sherman. The address by Bishop Worthington, D. D., was not delivered, from the fact that the reverend gentleman was not in the city.

The closing address in behalf of the regents to the governor, read by the Hon. H. G. Correll, briefly the early days of the university; its struggles and victories, until it has become not only one of the permanent institutions of the state but one which every citizen has reason to feel proud of. The benediction was pronounced, filling and the crowd dispersed, the students going to the residence of the chancellor for lunch. The following documents were placed in the corner-stone: An act of the legislature authorizing and providing for the erection of the building; catalogue of the university for 1885; Biennial report of the regents to the governor; Biennial report of the chancellor to the regents; the chancellor's inaugural address; programme of the commencement exercises and a copy of the Lincoln daily papers.

The reception given by Chancellor Manott in the senate chamber to-night was a grand affair. Those receiving were: first of all, Lieut. Denny, of the United States army, and Lieut. Superintendent of Public Instruction W. M. Jones and wife; the Hon. C. H. Gare and wife; Chancellor Manott and wife; his excellency Governor Dawes and wife. The clerk's and the president's desks were elaborately decorated with flowers of the choicest kind. The ladies and gentlemen were elegantly attired. While receptions originally are supposed to be quite formal, this one was quite to the contrary and every one present seemed pleased and felt that they were welcomed, as they certainly were.

REGENTS AT WORK.

The regents held a short session in the afternoon, examining bills and vouchers. The resignation of Col. E. P. Savage, superintendent of the state agricultural park, was read and will probably be accepted to-day, and it is thought that A. W. Wing, professor of agriculture, will take charge of the farm, thus saving to the state $1,500 a year. The regents
