HE SQUANDERED MILLIONS.
The Romantic Career of a Man Who Has Just Been Buried in Nashville.

A man with a history was buried here Sunday, says a Nashville telegram. Before the war one of the richest of the rich, he was the son of the south was "Hawley" Hill. He was known all along the Mississippi and Ohio rivers from New Orleans to Pittsburgh. His plantations extended for miles along the river, and were filled by thousands of slaves. When he died his estate was worth about $3,000,000. His only son inherited this vast wealth. Like all young men of that day who had rich fathers he was given the benefit of a European education, and for years traveled the continent with a private tutor. He had been bountifully supplied with money, but when his father's death threw his wealth into his possession his extravagance knew no bounds. The son of a rich southerner, he had carried letters which placed him on terms of intimacy with the nobility. Few men of title could boast as ample a fortune and none could excel him in lavishness. It was in the theatrical world, however, that he attracted most attention. The leading lights of the Parisian stage were eager to claim his friendship, for it meant valuable presents. Costly gifts of diamonds and jewelry to some favored actors were a common thing, and the man who had been a millionaire in the French capital. One upper in particular, which he gave to the art world of Paris, is said to have cost between $8,000 and $10,000. With Patti and other famous singers he was on terms of familiarity, and in his later days nothing gave him more pleasure than to recount anecdotes of his social intercourse with them. Few men were more competent as critics in matters of music and art.

Even his colossal fortune could not stand such drains, and when the war came it swept away the remnants. From a millionaire he became a pauper, and descended to a dependent on his relatives for the absolute necessities of life. In his wild career of extravagance he met and married an actress, an Italian lady. The union was not a happy one. She was a Catholic, and about three years ago instituted proceedings in New York for a separation. The case attracted great attention at the time, and column after column of the daily press was filled with accounts of the marriage and the particular details of the proceedings. His name alone was a guarantee of the absolute necessities of life. In his wild career of extravagance he met and married an actress, an Italian lady. The union was not a happy one. She was a Catholic, and about three years ago instituted proceedings in New York for a separation. The case attracted great attention at the time, and column after column of the daily press was filled with accounts of the marriage and the particular details of the proceedings.

A MAN OF MONEY.
The Individual Arrested by Officer Burdiah—The Ohio Defaulter.

Monday night Officer Burdiah, acting upon a pointer given him by an outsider, arrested a man by the name of A. J. Collins, who had considerable money on his person. It appears that Collins is a stranger here, having arrived in Omaha but a short time since and having fallen into the company of a fair but frail young lady who hails from Des Moines. They were out buggy riding and having a good time during the day, and the young lady soon became cognizant of the fact that Collins had plenty of money about his person. He gave her $500 and shortly after she left him to go, as is alleged, to Des Moines.

About this time Officer Dick Burdiah arrested Collins, partly for the good of the person himself, and partly because he believed the man to be a crook who was wanted in Ohio. A circular had been received from Cincinnati, Ohio, asking for the arrest of one J. F. Collins, who is a defaulting agent for the Adams Express company and the Pittsburg, Cincinnati & St. Louis railroad. He left Cadiz, Ohio, in last December and has not been seen since. The likeness of the man arrested last night is very similar to that of the man who is wanted in Ohio, but the ages of the two individuals are very evidently not the same. This man, A. J. Collins, who by the way had $1,372.60 on his person when arrested, is evidently over 40 years of age, while the Ohio man is 28 years old.

Yesterday morning the representatives of the Adams Express company called at the jail, and after a brief inspection, decided that he was not the man wanted by the company. Collins was released, and allowed to spend the balance of his money in riotous living if he so chooses.

A BEAUTIFUL TOWN
ELEGANTLY LOCATED
Large Lots at Reasonable Prices.
A Good Investment
South Omaha

Since the completion of the new pack and slaughter houses, South Omaha is making a wonderful and rapid growth. Besides the large pork and beef house erected by Hammond & Co., other dealers have commenced the erection of similar institutions and still others are contemplated for near future. Several dwellings have been built and twenty or thirty are now building. Employment is now furnished to about hundred and fifty families, and conservative estimates place the figure at eight hundred to one thousand families that will find employment there a year hence. This of great inducements to laboring men to seek homes now while they are cheap. Spectators will also find it to their advantage to purchase at present prices. The company have made no change from the original prices, but speculators who first purchased lots have realized them at splendid profits, in some cases double the purchase price. If in so short a time handsome profits are made, what will be the result when everything is fully developed? In the few other cities that are filled with a first class cattle market, for have been made by investors in real estate and the same is certain to follow in South Omaha. While the whole city of Omaha will be greatly benefitted by the growth and development of the cattle interest, South Omaha lots will enhance in value more rapidly than any other by reason of the proximity to the works.

Lightning Rod Agents in Washington.
Chicago Herald.

It was an unhappy day for the United States government when the great monument to Washington's memory received a stroke of lightning. The intelligence of the stroke was promptly conveyed to all parts of the country by telegraph, and in less than ten thousand lightning rod agents were on the way to the capital. Several hundred of them are already on the ground, and others make as good time as the condition of the roads will permit. One man, now in the northern part of New Mexico with his wagon, has telegraphed ahead that he is coming with the only lightning destroyer on earth, and demanding that nothing be done until he arrives, and the probability is that if they wait for him all the other residents in the country will be there by that time.

The crisis is one which makes the little difficulty that Mr. Gladstone has been having seem insignificant in comparison. An office seeker, when thrown down the front steps three or four times, is generally in a subdued frame of mind, but the lightning rod agent is so hardened to treatment of that kind that he only becomes the more persistent. One or two cabinet meetings have been held to consider the subject and Mr. Garland has called for an opinion on the matter by the government putting up a rod without advertising for proposals. Although there is no authority for such an act in the constitution, it is believed that the emergency is one justifying war, and that Mr. Manning or General Endicott will take the law in their own hands, declare a state of siege and buy a rod in the open market as a military necessity, ordering a few companies of regulars to the capital to protect themselves from the consequences.

No more unfortunate circumstance could have occurred just at this juncture. The office-seekers have been appeased in part, and such as have not received what they wanted have been given "stand off" until after the close of the summer resort season. All these lightning rod men will now have to be provided for. If they cannot sell a rod and get a note for twenty dollars in payment, which they can easily raise to two hundred and negotiate in Baltimore, they will want offices.

If they cannot get offices they will be bedeviled by the treasury clerks, and no man can hold the end under the double infliction of office-seekers and lightning rod agent the new administration will need the considerable forbearance of the American people.

A Baby sea Lion.
Washington Post.

The happy family of sea-lions at Athletic park were made all the happier Wednesday by an addition to their number. Capt. Eastman had been expecting the new arrival for some days, and was not surprised when he noticed the little one for the first time yesterday morning. It is the first sea-lion born in the Atlantic states. The little fellow himself took very kindly to his new surroundings, and was much satisfied with the cool grass on which he was lying as if he had been among the icebergs of the Arctic zone, with the thermometer 60 degrees below zero. Fifteen minutes after his birth he was quietly taking his breakfast, while his mother lazily brushed the flies from him with her front fin. He is about two feet long, with a well-proportioned body. He displays a remarkable degree of vitality, and makes the most frantic efforts to amuse himself, hopping around on the ground, rolling over and going through a number of antics with wonderful rapidity. He has a remarkable appetite for one so young, and is almost constantly nonplussed at her mother's breast. At the time of his birth his mother's home was a pen of limited dimensions, and the captain determined to move her into a larger one which he had just constructed. He attempted to accomplish this by making friends with the cub, who seemed equally determined to extend his acquaintance, and was willingly at the captain's call. The mother, however, objected, and each time the little fellow advanced she would take him up gently by the neck and carry him back again. The captain finally accomplished his purpose by placing the cages between the mother and himself and pushing them gently forward. Last night mother and child were doing well, and when viewed by the light of a lantern looked up in mild surprise. The cub was at his everlasting meal, which he did not allow the intruder to interrupt for any length of time, and which only ceased when he fell into a sound sleep. The captain expects another addition to his family within the next few days.

Ob, Sleep, it is a Blessed Thing.
The weary sufferer from sleepless nights and dyspeptic pains knows from bitter experience the wretchedness caused by lack of sleep. But Mr. E. K. McConeky, of Hellam, Pa., pleasantly writes: "Brown's Iron Bitters relieved my dyspeptic symptoms, and gave me refreshing sleep." Sleepless sufferers or anybody else can buy Brown's Iron Bitters for a dollar a bottle at any good druggist.

Odd Case of Mistaken Identity.
An extraordinary case of mistaken identity occurred in Paris last month. A woman saw at the morgue a body which she thought she recognized as the father of a girl working near her at a perfumer's. The girl came, recognized her father, and his clothing also, and swooned away. Coming to she fetched a brother and two sisters, who all worked in Paris. They all signed the formal declaration as to identity. The body had been found at Mendon, near which their father often worked. The children started for Creteil, his home, to learn when he had been buried, and when they returned they found him outside his door, and greatly astonished to learn that he had been found dead at the morgue.

When Baby was sick, we gave her Castoria.
When she was a Child, she cried for Castoria.
When she became Miss, she clung to Castoria.
When she had Children, she gave them Castoria.
