BILL NYE'S ORATION. He Speaks to Americans of Their Fourth of July Privileges.

[Original] FELLOW CITIZENS:—One hundred and nine years have now passed since our forefathers desired all men to be free and equal and began to hold out inducements for the oppressed of other climes to come here and help us kill off the Indians.

It has been a great success. It has been thoroughly demonstrated to a dying world that all men are fully equal to all other men, if not more so.

We rejoice that the idea of freedom suggested itself to our forefathers. Otherwise we would all be in Canada to-day. Now only a part of us are there.

Let us not speak lightly of Canada, for some of our largest moneyed men are there. While we would not care to be a part of Canada, it is a good province to smuggle into or smuggle out of.

One hundred and nine years ago the king of Great Britain made the great mistake of his life. I only regret that he did not live to see it as we see it to-day.

Had he been less overbearing toward the infant colony, the young men of America would have been drinking alkali water in Egypt to-day.

That is the reason I very rarely go to a crowded head when I am in trouble. I seek out some tender hearted and unselfish pawnbroker and tell him all.

There is one cloud, fellow-citizens, which I see with my prophetic eye, just climbing the distant horizon of our national existence. Sooner or later it will darken the brightest day for us.

That is the reason I very rarely go to a crowded head when I am in trouble. I seek out some tender hearted and unselfish pawnbroker and tell him all.

A QUACK'S MISTAKE. A Novel Method for Curing Consumption That Did Not Work.

Philadelphia Times. A party of men sat in the wine room of the Continental hotel last night, telling stories. One of the number was a young doctor, who is a resident physician at the Pennsylvania hospital, and had just returned from a vacation trip to the caves of Luray.

"I am too young in the profession to give you any startling experiences of my own, but I can relate a curious incident that occurred in Virginia during my visit there. It happened in Rockbridge county, not many miles from Lexington, and was told to me by a thoroughly respectable and veracious citizen.

"I was walking along a long, bare, individual crowd into town and engaged two rooms in the leading hotel. That night he visited the local printing office, and the next morning the town was flooded with dodgers announcing the arrival of Dr. Surecure, who guaranteed to cure all cases of consumption by his great and improved compressed air treatment.

"I explained to him that I was not a consumptive, but he simply called to investigate his method of treatment out of curiosity. He was very urbane and accommodating. He explained to me in scientific language that consumption was simply a collapse and drying up of the air cells of the lungs, and that the only thing needed to restore the breathing apparatus to its normal state was the opening of these cells.

"The doctor had hardly finished his exposition before a young man, with the countenance of the fallen stevedore in the eastern end of the market, entered. He told the doctor that he wanted a dose of compressed air. The doctor conducted him to the adjoining room and told him to divest himself of everything with the exception of his undershirt.

"Then he tried to open the door, but he couldn't budge it. Then he looked alarmed and got me to help him, but our combined strength didn't move it. Then we called in a colored porter and our united efforts opened the door with a rush and landed us in a heap in the corner. Looking into the compartment, we saw a balloon-like, flesh colored object lying on the floor. I looked at the doctor for an explanation.

"My God! he gasped, 'I have adjusted the pump to exhaust the air, and, damnation! the pump, which will bear about five minutes, and could hear the wind rush in with a shrill whistle. Then we waited for two minutes, and the doctor said: 'You can bet that the air is inflating his lungs like a balloon.'

THE VALUE OF A HORSE-FORK. Country Home.

In a barn of any dimension, allowing ingress of a two-horse load, proper arrangements should be made to expedite unloading and moving away hay. True it is that most persons farming on a large scale have the proper appliances for saving time and labor, but there are many who do not go beyond a pitchfork and kill both time and themselves in the really futile effort to save money or perhaps from lack of progressiveness.

A good horse hay-fork will unload in one day what it would take half a dozen men to handle with common forks; and this, if being run on a track running along under the peak of the barn, can be so arranged as to dump enormous forklfuls almost at the place desired.

There are about 800 women practicing medicine in this country, and they are succeeding admirably.
