ECZEMA.
For the benefit of suffering humanity, I deem it only my duty to give this unsolicited testimony and the old time treatment healed up, but it had only been driven into the system by the use of potash and mercury, and in March, 1882, it broke out in my throat, and concentrated into what some of the doctors called cancer, eating through my cheek, destroying the roof of my mouth and upper lip, then attacked my tongue, palate and lower lip, destroying the palate and under lip entirely and half my tongue, eating out to the top of my left cheek bone and up to the left eye. I could not eat any solid food, but subsisted on liquids, and my tongue was so far gone I could not talk. Such was my wretched helpless condition the first of last October, 1884, when my friends commenced giving me Swift's Specific. In less than a month the eating places stopped and healing commenced, and the fearful aperture in my cheek has been close and firmly knitted together. A process of a new under lip is progressing finely, and the tongue which was almost destroyed is being recovered, and it seems that nature is supplying a new tongue. I can talk so that my friends can readily understand me, and can also eat solid food again. If any doubt these facts, I would refer the to Hon. John H. Traylor, state senator of this district, and to Dr. T. S. Bradfield of LaGrange, Ga.

PIRATE LAFITTE.

The Exploits of a Celebrated Dare-Devil and His Gang.

Tales of Buccaneers Who Preceded Them—Thirty-three Hung at One Time—Sad Death of Theodora Burr Alston.

New Orleans Times-Democrat.

They were sad dare-devils, those old buccaneers, who sailed about among the West India islands, through the bright waters of the Gulf of Mexico and along the south Atlantic sea coast. They thought nothing of going up the deeper rivers to the plantations of rice and indigo and, after loading their vessels would pillage and burn the residences, then depart leaving the poor planters to deplore the ruin of their homesteads and the loss of their crops. It was also dangerous to go by sea from southern ports to New York, as was shown by the case of Mrs Alston. She was Thedora, the only daughter of distinguished Aaron Burr, a lovely and accomplished woman, who married Gov. Alston of South Carolina. When her father was to be tried for high treason, Mrs. Alston gathered up all the handsome family silver plate, and with her husband's consent, set off in a ship for New York, where it was to be sold for her father's benefit. But alas! neither vessel nor lady was ever heard of again, and as there was no storm to have occasioned disaster, the pirates were always supposed to have captured and destroyed them. Governor Alston offered large rewards for information, but no tidings of Mrs. Alston's fate ever reached him, and it was only many years after that one of the miscreants made a dying confession and admitted the facts, stating that he had ever been haunted by the remembrance of the crime. The pirates had had spies in Charleston, who notified them of the sailing of the ship with the valuable silverwear aboard; they had laid in wait for her, taken possession of her on the high seas and made the unfortunate passengers and crew "walk the plank." Mrs. Alston had refused to have her eyes blindfolded; with the most heroic courage and composure, all dressed in white, her beautiful face raised to heaven and the Bible clasped to her heart, she bravely stepped forward into eternity.

A DESPERATE BUCCANEER.

Another story which dates still further back into the past is the fate of Steed Bonnet, a desperate robber. His depredations, and interruptions to commerce, made him a terror to the coast of Carolina, until at length Governor Sir Nathaniel Johnson fitted out a sloop-of-war and sent Colonel William Rhett in pursuit of him. They met him at the mouth of Cape Fear river, where an engagement took place. The pirate's ship was boarded and captured, and he, and those of his crew who remained alive, were taken to Charleston, where they were tried and condemned. So one pleasant, sunshiny morning in November, 1818, Steed Bonnet and thirty-two of his men were hanged at White Point Garden. This public garden forms the southern point of Charleston, at the confluence of the Cooper and Ashley rivers, and has been called the Battery ever since the revolutionary war, when an earthwork was erected there, and cannon mounted, which were expected to drive back the British if they succeeded in passing Fort Moultrie. Most happily, however, they were never called into action, as the English were defeated. When the summer months come, this cool, pleasant promenade is the resort of fashion, and I have often thought of those wretched pirates who expiated their crimes upon the spot where now young girls laugh and children play. How near each other are pain and pleasure! Thus the place which is haunted by the memory of death is also dedicated to pleasure, for the lights and shadows are ever intermingled in the warp and woof of life.

LAFITTE.

The last of the buccaneers was the celebrated Lafitte, who for many years carried on his illicit traffic in defiance of the government. His crew of smugglers and pirates occupied the Bay of Barataria, where they had fortified an island. A price was set upon his head, but it is said that he was frequently seen in New Orlerns, and had friends, and even a banker, who received him and his ill gotten gains "under the rose." There are so many lakes and bayous along the coast of Louisiana and Mississippi that the light, swift crafts of the pirates could always elude pursuit and slip away into some inlet or behind an island, when they found an enemy on their track. All the Spanish fishermen, who were inimical to the United States, were in their pay, and gave notice by private signals where there was danger to be apprehended, and so they enjoyed comparative immunity from the consequences of their misdeeds.

This daring robber deserves our praise for his patriotism, however, for when the English came to attack New Orleans, in 1815, Sir Edward Pakenham, the commander of their forces, offered Lafitte a big reward if he would assist his army by showing them the passes to the city, which none knew so well as the skillful pilot. But Lafitte refused his bribe and sent word to General Jackson that if he would insure him and his men a free pardon for past offenses, they would come up and help him to defend the city. As they were known to have brave hearts and to be skillful artillerists, Governor Claiborne willingly granted this request, and so Lafitte, his men and his guns arrived and did good service in the day of our necessity.

It is not known where Lafitte died, but Domingo, his lieutenant, lies in the old St. Louis cemetery, which is situated between Conti and St. Louis streets, with this extraordinary epitaph upon his tomb: "Sans Peur, et Sans Reproche." The first part of the quotation might doubtless have been truly applied to him, but the latter portion of the sentence is such a comical sarcasm that if it were put there by an enemy it is positively a cruel satire; if in good faith by a friend, it must have caused the dust of Chevalier Bayard, of whom these words were first spoken, to stir with indignation in his grave.

Range Facilities for Governing Price.

Rocky Mountain Husbandman.

The sole reason why stock cattle are worth so much more in Montana than they are in the states, is because they can be grown here at much less expense. The cost of pasturing and feeding stock in the states is such that at the present prices of beef they cannot go beyond that point. Neither are they likely to go beyond what they have been selling for in Montana for the past two years, since they can be laid down here from the states at a less figure, and, although states cattle do not in any way compare with our Montana cattle in size, quality or condition, and there are considerable chances to take with them the first winter, buyers continue to purchase and ship them in preference to going beyond the ruling prices for our natives. We can, therefore, see but little show for stock cattle to advance. Herds that happen to be well located, that have rather control of a certain range, of course are worth more than those that have to be moved, and we would not be surprised to see herds sold with range privileges at $40 per head before another year, and as time advances may be worth more. But on the plains where there is no exclusive privilege, where an owner can not by owning water or land privileges control a certain tract of country, we may consider that cattle have reached the top notch, for in such localities our range facilities, owing to the driving in of herds, will be lessened, and this alone governs the price. To get big prices in the future there will have to be a land and range consideration and localities where by the nature of the country exclusive control is given are comparatively few.

WILL RETURN TO ENGLAND.

Mrs. Dudley Since Her Acquittal—Rossa Says it Was a Farce.

New York Special to the Boston Globe.

Mrs. Dudley, who was acquitted on the ground of insanity, on the charge of having shot O'Donovan Rossa with intent to kill, was seen by the Globe correspondent to-day. She was in good spirits, and felt, she said, highly grateful of the opportunity offered her to give Rossa a dressing out. This, she said, pleased her more than the fact of her acquittal. It is understood that she will not be sent to an asylum, but will be sent back to England in charge of some friends, who have just arrived here to take her in charge.

O'Donovan Rossa was called upon later, and asked what he thought of the verdict.

"It's just as I expected,' he replied; "the trial was a farce from the beginning to the end, and was nothing more than a burlesque on justice."

He said he would not have appeared against the woman, and was subpœnased twice before he consented to appear. He expressed the belief that the woman was no more insane than he was, and that her attempt on his life was the outcome of a well-planned and a deep-laid conspiracy. He had not the slightest doubt but her mission to this country was for the sole purpose of taking his life.

THE ART OF SWINDLING

A Very Clever Game Worked by a Dangerous Class of Sharps—An Expose.

From time to time citizens of Omaha have received a certain class of mysterious letters, over which they have doubtless puzzled in trying to ascertain the objects for which the missives were written. A prominent business man got one through the mails the other day and turned it over to United States Deputy Marshal Allan. It reads as follows:

NEW YORK.

Dear Sir: No doubt when you receive this letter you will say it is some trap set for you to get you into trouble; but such is not the case, I promise you this, as true as there is a God in heaven, I obtained your name through a friend of mine who passed through your place, and this is all I know of you; and, on my solemn oath, I speak the plain, candid truth; and I swear, before the Almighty God in heaven, my purpose is far from harming you, either in word, look or action; and should you make up your mind to answer this letter, I will give you my word and honor, that no person, man, woman or child, shall ever hear from my mouth the least thing that ever passes between us, and I will keep this promise as sacred as I would my oath before God in heaven.

I will be plain with you. I am dealing in articles, paper goods—1s, 2s, 5s, 10s and 20s—(do you understand?) I cannot be plainer until I know your heart is true to me; then I will send you full and plain particulars that I mean you right, and will satisfy and convince you that I can furnish you with a fine, safe and a profitable article, that can be used in any manner and for all purposes, and no danger.

Now understand me, fair and square: I ask no money in advance, nor do I want it. I want to give you plain and positive proofs that, should you need my assistance, I can and will help you out of any money or business troubles you may be in, and no matter to what extent; and no person on the face of God's earth need ever be the wiser for it, unless you betray me; and as my intentions are square and upright to you, and as I never have or will harm you by word, look or action, I ask you, before heaven, as a man of honor and principle, not to expose or betray me. And if I have made a mistake in sending you this letter, I ask you to forgive me, and let the matter rest where it is, for my intentions are as upright to you as heaven itself. For a man can have honor and principle no matter what his business may be in this world. So do not harm me. For my motto in this life is, and always has been, if you can't do a fellow being some good, do him no harm, no matter what his calling may be.

Now a word of advice in regard to this business. There are some unprincipled men in this city advertising goods the same as mine. But before God and man they are far from it. They will send you circulars and promise all kinds of things, and should you be foolish enough to send them money, that is the last you will hear of them or your money. And there are other firms here dealing in green goods of a very poor quality, and not safe to handle. Now I am not writing this letter through malice or selfishness to get your trade, but to warn you against them. Should you at any time receive their circular (as these people have their agents going from one state to another getting storekeepers' names (and in fact names of people in all kinds of business) and should you make up your mind to write and place confidence in me, with a view of trading with me, I will take it as a matter of honor and strict friendship between us, if you will notify me if these people send their circulars to you, as I will not, under any consideration, trade with any person who has anything to do with them, and time will prove they are not reliable men to trade with, and this is the Almighty God's honest truth, as I am the only person who can furnish you with a safe and profitable article that will stand a critical test, and I will prove each and every promise I have given you before I will expect to receive one dollar.

Now a word of advice, if you receive word from any person in this town about this business, let me know at once, and send me their letters, if you do not do this then I will not sell you any goods. I am the principal dealer, and if you trade with others you will get them from second hands, and they will cost you more. Now bear in mind, I ask you as a friend not to answer any letters or circulars until you notify me; I will then inform you if they are reliable men and if they are employed as my agents; this is important, if you wish to trade with me, as you will find me upright and honorable in business, but will not be responsible if you correspond with my agents if you do not notify me and send me their letters.

I will, as a test of honor and confidance on your part, request the return of this letter. I will know then you mean me no harm, for it will not answer any communications unless it is returned to me.

I will not deviate from this rule and on my sacred oath and honor before God and man, I will return yours. Yours in honor and friendship, W. R. ROBERTS, 147 Delaney street, N. Y.

This letter is one of a class of circular letters which are constantly being sent out all over the country, and which are employed in the operation of one of the most clever confidence games known in the "royal art" of swindling.

A reporter who was talking, to-day, with Mr. E. D. Steadman, special agent of the treasury department at Washington, and now in this city, gleaned from his conversation an idea of how the plan was worked.

"This letter," said Mr. Steadman, "is well adapted to deceive the unwary. At a casual glance one would think that it was a scheme to sell the recipient of the letter counterfeit money. Such is not the case, however. Let me illustrate how the plan is worked, by giving you an actual example. A business man in Iowa received one of these circulars and immediately wrote to the address given at the bottom of the letter, which, of course, was a fictitious one. He was told to come to New York and register at a certain hotel. He did so, and shortly after his arrival was called upon by two men, who showed him a lot of money which they pretended was counterfeit, but which was really good money. The merchant at once decided to purchase a lot of counterfeit money, and turned over all the cash he had. The supposed counterfeit money was placed in a satchel, and the two strangers escorted their victim to the depot, to see him off. On the way down, the satchels were exchanged and the victim was given one without any money, either genuine or counterfeit in it. When too late, he discovered that he had been duped. This game, which is extensively worked by confidence sharps, is known as the bundle or boodle game. One of the greatest points of its successful operation is that the victim is ashamed or afraid to tell the police how he has been duped, because he knows that he was engaged in a criminal operation, in bargaining to buy counterfeit money."

Sir Julius Vogel, the colonial treasurer of New Zealand, has made his financial statement. He estimates the revenue for the year 1885-86 at $20,650,000 and the expenditures at $20,500,000.

A Japanese inventor has just made from sea-weed a paper transparent enough to be submitted for window glass.

At a recent flower fete and kermesse held in the Bois at Paris, about $40,000 was taken at the gates in one day.

Town Lots in Denver Junction Weld County, Colorado.

Denver Junction is a new town of about 200 inhabitants, laid out in 1884, on the great trunk railway across the continent, at the junction of the Julesburg Branch, 197 miles from Denver. The town is on second bottom land of the Platte River, the finest location between Omaha and Denver, and is surrounded by the best-laying lands west of Kearney Junction, Neb.; climate healthy and bracing; altitude 3,600 feet. Denver Junction bids to become an important point, as the U. P. R. R. Co., are putting up many of their buildings here, while the B. & M. R. R. Co., are expected soon to connect at this place. The present chance for good investments in town lots will scarcely ever be equaled elsewhere. For sale by the lot or block in good terms by

A BEAUTIFUL TOWN
ELEGANTLY LOCATED.
Large Lots at Reasonable Prices.
A Good Investment
South Omaha.

Since the completion of the new packing and slaughter houses, South Omaha is making a wonderful ane rapid growth. Besides the large pork and beef house erected for Hammond & Co., other dealers have commenced the erection of similar institutions and still others are contemplated for the near future. Several dwellings have been built and twenty or thirty are now building. Employment is now furnished to about one hundred and fifty families, and conservative estimates place the figure at eight hundred to one thousand families that will find employment there a year hence. This offers great inducements to laboring men to secure homes now while they are cheap. Speculators will also find it to their advantage to buy at present prices. The company have made no change from the original prices, but some parties who first purchased lots have resold them at splendid profits, in some cases at double the purchase price. If in so short a time handsome profits are made, what will be the result when everything is fully developed? In the few other cities that are favored with a first class cattle market, fortunes have been made by investors in real estate, and the same is certain to follow in South Omaha. While the whole city of Omaha will be greatly benefitted by the growth and development of the cattle interest, South Omaha lots will enhance in value more rapidly than any other by reason of the proximity to the works.
