There has been a little howl started by one of the evening papers to the effect that "the prohibition attorney, Jacob Sims, made Marion Owens the prosecuting witness in the case against Galvin. and now Marion declares he never authorized the use of his name in that connectlen." An examination of the papers on file shows that the case originally was Owens against Farrell, and an amendment to the petition has been filed, making Galvin one of the defendants, it being understood that Galvin had succeeded Farrell in the saloon at Weston. The amendment does not purport to be verified by Owens at all, but by the atbe any war opened on this feature of the case it should be upon him, and not on Owens. The papers themselves show hat Owens' name has not been used without authority.

STILL FIGHTING.

Witnesses Swearing that the Removal of the Cemetery Would Increase the Value of Their Property.

The attempt to get an injunction restraining the cemetery association from Judge Connor here yesterday. Attorneys Scott and Sapp were actively engaged in pressing the claims for an injunction, were te'ng looked after by Attorneys Haldens and Baldwin. The forenoon was spent in a tussle over legal points in the pleadings, and just before noon the case reached a point where the taking of that foul odors and poisonous gases were eyidence began. The examination of constantly arising from Fairview cemewitnesses lasted through the afternoon, In support of the application for an injunction a number of those living in the vicinity of the cemetery, and owning property there, were sworn, and the most essential fact learned from them was that if the cemetery could not be done away with, the value of their property would be enhanced, a fact which has generally been conceded. On cross examination it was developed that each of these had bought property there recently, and that the cemetery was established long ago, and that they knew all about great statesman, Stephen A. Dauglas, and it when they bought and built their facts. The document was handed me to homes there. There was a good deal of read but I discovered that it was illegible and, being very busy, did not take the much in a name, that the old lady in about the drainage, the gases and the time to have it "translated." A MYSTERY.

a Bank Vault.

No Clue to Its Whereabouts,

The report that a shortage of $10,000 had been discovered in the cash balance of the Citizens' bank has caused some SANITARY little stir, and inquiry at the bank has resulted in the following statement of the facts of the case, which is corroborated by the statements of others who have een interested in solving the mystery possible:

Some days ago, when the cashier, Mr. Street, and the clerks of the C.t'zens' bank were making the necessary prepara-tions to commence business for the day, and were placing the cash in place for use that day, they discovered that the amount was short $10,000. It was the first intimation which they had that there was any shortage anywhere, and were com pletely surprised at the discovery. They made diligent search for the missing from Mrs. Davis' store, came up before money in all places in the vaults and Judge Aylesworth. The true names of safes and other receptacles where it the boys proved to be Calvin Campbell might have been become misplaced.
They also notified the directors of the condition of things, and these gentlemen mother of one of the boys, the older one, held a meeting to examine the books to was here, as was also Mr. Campbell, the see if the deficit could be discovered by father of the smaller boy, a little fellow some error in that direction. A Grave Explanation. To the Editor of The BEE,

I desire through your columns to make an explanation of certain matters connected with the present cemetery fight. The man who makes the Hardman It has been charged that in my sffidavit on the slaughter houses I swore that odors arising from decaying animal matter were not injurious to public health, and that in my affidavit on the cemetery I swore as positively that the odors aris-ing from dead bodies were injurious to public health, thus flatly contradicting myself. Now I did nothing of the kind, as the facts will show. I have always maintained, and do now, that odors arising from decaying animal matter cannot originate disease; that the fluids or particles of decomposing animal bodies are capable of producing disease only when taken into the system through the selling any more lots came up before food or water supply. To all the attorfood or water supply. To all the attorneys who have talked with me about the s'aughter houses or Fairview cem t ry the most emphatic language, and yet of while the cemetery association's rights there has been a studied effort to distort my meaning.

Some time during the last week an attorney called at my office with a written affidavit-quite a lengthy documentand asked me to sign it. He claimed 5 tery; that the soil was light and porous, and that when there was a rain fall the | water was carried down through the soil Z into the graves where it became contaminated by decomposing bodies; that it | then filtered into subteranean crevices and caverns and into the wells in the vicinity of the cemetery, where it was likely to produce disease and death. He stated that a number of prominent citizens were moving for an injunction to restrain further interments there and claimed that the affidavit embodied the facts as stated and that ample proofs would be offered to substantiate the doctors were examined at length, but no nearly all the physicians were ready to
