Listen to Your Wife.
 The Manchester Guardian, June 25th, 1885, says: "A 'Window'"
 Looking on the woodland ways! With clumps of rhododendrons and great masses of May blossoms! "There was an interesting group."
 It included one who had been a "Cotton spinner," but was now "Paralyzed!"
 That he could only bear to lie in a reclining position.
 This refers to my case.
 I was first attacked twelve years ago with "Locomotor Ataxy"
 (A paralytic disease of nerve fibres rarely ever cured and was for several years barely able to get about.)
 And for the last five years not able to attend to my business, although
 Many things have been done for me. The last experiment being Nervo stretching. Two years ago I was voted into the Home for Incurables! Near Manchester, in May, 1882.
 I am an "Advocate" for anything in the shape of patent Medicines!
 And made many objections to my dear wife's constant urging to try Hop Bitters, but finally to pacify her—
 I had not quite finished the first bottle when I felt a change come over me. This was Saturday, November 3d. On Sunday morning I felt so strong I said to my room companions, "I was sure I could walk!"
 So started across the floor and back, I hardly knew how to contain myself. I was all over the house. I am gaining strength each week!
 I am now at my own house, and hope soon to be able to earn my own living again. I have been a member of the Manchester "Royal Exchange"
 For nearly thirty years, and was most heartily congratulated on going into the room on Thursday night. Very grateful yours, JOHN BLACKBURN, Manchester (Eng.) Dec. 24, 1884.
 Two years later a perfectly well.

 WILLIAM B. BURNETT, Richard, Iowa, writes, Nov. 21, 1884. I have been afflicted with Hay Fever and Asthma since 1859. I followed your directions and am happy to say that I never slept better in my life. I am glad that I am among the many who can speak so favorably of your remedy.

The Apache Indian Scout.
 Capt. Bourke, in Ousting for August.
 It may serve to give some idea of the courage, boldness and subtlety of these raiders to state that in their dash through Sonora, Arizona, New Mexico and Chihuahua, a distance of not less than 800 miles, they passed at times through localities fairly well settled and close to an aggregate of at least 5,000 troops, — 4,500 Mexican and 500 American. They killed twenty-five persons, Mexican and American, and lost but two—one killed near the Town of Wickenburg, Arizona, and one who fell into the hands of the American troops, of which last much has to be narrated.
 To attempt to catch such a band of Apaches by direct pursuit would be about as hopeless a piece of business as that of catching a wild cat by the tail. All that could be done was to surround the country was alarmed by telegraph; people at exposed points pat upon their guard, while detachments of troops scoured in every direction, hoping, by good luck, to intercept, retard, or finally destroy, the daring marauders. The trail they had made coming up from Mexico could, however, be followed back to the spot where they started, in a military sense, would be the most direct, as it would be the most practical pursuit. The Apache scout troops along as unconcerned as he was when the cold rain or snow of winter chilled his white comrade to the marrow. He finds food, and pretty good food too, where the Caucasian would starve. Knowing the habits of wild animals from his earliest youth, he can catch turkeys, quail, rabbits, doves, or field-mice, and, perhaps, a prairie-dog or two, which will supply him with meat. For some reason he cannot be induced to touch fish, and bacon or any other product of the hog is eaten only under duress; but the flesh of a horse, mule, or jackass, which he has dropped exhausted on the march and been left to die on the trail, is a delicious morsel which the Apache seizes upon whenever possible. The stunted oak growing on the mountain flanks furnishes acorns; the Spanish bayonet, a fruit that, when roasted in the ashes of a camp fire, looks and tastes something like the banana. The whole region of Southern Arizona and Northern Mexico is mated with two varieties of the cactus, nearly every one of which is called upon for its tribute of fruit or seed. The broad leaves and stalks of the century plant — called mesquil — are roasted between hot stones, and the product is rich in saccharine matter and extremely pleasant to the taste. The wild potato and the bulb of the "tule" are found in the damp mountain meadows; and the nest of the ground bee is raised remorselessly for its little store of honey. Sundry water seeds, when ground fine, are rich and nutritious. Walnuts, pecan nuts, and strawberries

The Crop Prospect Immense—Wonderful Growth of Ogallala, the County Seat.

Special Correspondence to the Bee.
 OGALLALA, Neb., July 27.—The season thus far has been unusually wet, not of a continuous rain, but of frequent showers, and then a few warm clear days, causing all kinds of vegetation to obtain an immense growth. Crops of all kinds are very fine. Old eastern farmers, who are at present harvesting their small grain, say that wheat will yield from twenty-five to forty bushels per acre, and oats from forty to seventy-five. Corn is looking very fine with every prospect of an abundant crop. This may seem strange to some who are unacquainted with western yield and vim, as eighteen months ago there was not fifty acres of cultivated ground in the county, and the cattle kings who resided here would not allow any one to say that crops could be raised here. In fact the few who were here did not dare to attempt to raise any crops. If they did so, their crops were mysteriously destroyed, so that no successful attempts were made before 1884.

Ogallala is growing very rapidly, and what a year ago was a few houses, is now a prosperous young city. The prospect of the B. & O. railway coming to this town has given an impetus to real estate and building that is unparalleled.

Messrs. Anderson & Carlson, of St. Paul, Neb., have commenced the erection of a neat bank building to be known as the Bank of Ogallala, this building the second bank in the town, the Keith County Bank having been opened in May, 1884.
 John Linderholm, of Central City, Neb., will commence the erection of a double store brick in a few days.
 Judge Rayner has just completed the erection of a fine business house.
 A. M. Bickely, the new proprietor of the old Spafford hotel, has entirely renovated the building, has built a fine addition, and now occupies one of the best houses west of Omaha.

V. Karlsen & Co., of Gothenburg, Neb., have about completed a building which they will stock with a full line of drugs and medicines, this making the second drug store in town.
 Messrs. Cusack & Co. have opened a flour and feed store, and are doing a thriving business.
 Messrs. Campbell & Mills have opened a commodious bakery and restaurant, and are doing a thriving business. A new lumber yard, making the fourth yard, is about to be opened.
 L. Aufdergarten's $10,000 residence is nearing completion, and when finished will be a credit to the town and county.
 C. E. Stone, one of our pioneer merchants, has just commenced the erection of a commodious dwelling. In fact, Ogallala and Keith county is on a boom and is bound to grow.

The old theory that no rats fell in this section during the spring and summer months, has been effectually exploded, as it should have been years ago.
 Eastern farmers and investors are arriving on every train, and it is an exception when they return without investing in Keith county soil, either in farm, grazing lands or town property.
 Yours occasionally,
 LEX.

The Famous Pony Express.
 Cassell's Family Magazine for August. Twenty years ago settlers starting for the far west, with their heavily laden wagons, knew that the journey would occupy six months of hard travel and might involve many dangers of varied character—chiefly from hostile Indians, prairie fires and rattlesnakes. Once started on that far journey, many a weary month must elapse ere any tidings could reach them from the home they had left.

The latter were strong, swift ponies, selected for the hardiness and great powers of endurance, and the riders were all picked men, experienced scouts and trappers, noted—even in that region of keen, hard-riding men—for courage and good horsemanship; and many a time must both have been tried to the uttermost in the course of those terribly long and awfully lonely rides across the trackless prairie, continually in danger of attack, by day or by night, by wild Indians or highway robbers.

Then pony and man might rest and feed, and rest again, till the return of the messenger with a re-filled letter-bag, which was warranted to accomplish its journey of upwards of 2,000 miles in 240 hours. (The railway on the New York side being already constructed as far as St. Joseph, the station was the starting point to which the Pony Express had to run.)
 This Pony Express was continued for two years, accomplishing its work with amazing regularity, and involving many a feat of splendid riding and wild adventure. It proved, however, a ruinous failure from a commercial point of view, and the company collapsed with a deficit of 200,000 dollars.

The Snapper's Triumph.
 A hungry snapper and unscrupulous sea snapper, with blood-shot eyes, lay on its back on a bench outside the New York oyster house, on the west side of Ninth street below Leucast, says the Philadelphia Press. The animal had been there for three days, a fit object for the attention of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals. A crowd of children teased it by hitting it with sticks and throwing pebbles at it, and the hapless animal rolled its eyes around as if anxious for death to come and end its miseries.

Presently a man with long hair and a slouch hat, accompanied by a lady with a sage-green umbrella and a yellow dress, came ambling down the street seeing lights. The man eyed the snapper and said, "Hallo!" he exclaimed, going up to it. "Here's a snapper! What fun!" And he borrowed the sage-green umbrella and poked the poor fish in the ribs.

"The great thing about a sea-snapper," he continued, "with an air of wisdom, 'is its docility."
 The philosopher gave a hown. His finger was firmly grasped in the snapper's mouth. The snapper clutched his teeth and the man danced. Presently the end of the finger came off, and the man, covered with blood, dashed to the Pennsylvania depot, where the stump was returned (and dressed). He gave the name of Joseph Maglin, said he was 50 years old, and lived at No. 304 Locust street.

The snapper laid on the bench for the remainder of the day. It calmly rolled the pieces of Mr. Maglin's anatomy between its teeth, and after it had ground them up, it was seen eating the contents. It looked happier than before the incident, and there was a humorous twinkle in his eye. An hour after the occurrence a sad-eyed oyster-opener came out of the saloon a pasted placard bearing the word "Dangerous" over its bench. But the snapper's contented look did not abate.
 Mr. Maglin set up all last night, or at least he thought he was, and wondered what there was about a sea snapper that had prompted his curiosity.

Frank Shaw in Chicago.
 Chicago Inter-Ocean.
 One of the most recent comers to Chicago among gambling house owners is Frank Shaw. He hailed originally from Omaha, but came here from Minneapolis. Being broke, Johnny O'Condon on No. 125 Clark street, "loaned" him $5,000, with which he opened, several non-his ago, a house at 109 Adams street. The money was lost, and Shaw went broke, but succeeded in interesting a number of gamblers in a scheme to run an opposition house in Chicago. He had a room, about two weeks ago, opened a room at No. 126 Clark street in time to be closed by the police. Shaw is about forty-two years of age, unmaried, and has made many friends since coming here. The efforts of the police to break up gambling may reduce him again to a state of practical poverty.

 How the Cable Road Strikes Them.
 Chester News.
 "What makes the latest cars go without horses?" said a Chester lady while in the city the other day. "It'll down hill both ways," she asked, following up her query before an answer could be given. "No," replied her companion, "they are now run by the Atlantic cable."

COUNCIL BLUFFS.
 ADDITIONAL LOCAL.
A MURDER NEAR AVOCA.
 A Farmer Has a Fight With His Hired Man, and Killing a Revolver, Shoots and Kills Him Instantly.

This afternoon near Avoca, Iowa, a farmer named O. W. Coffman, had a dispute about work with Jack Mayne, one of his hired men, engaged in the hay-field. Soon after this Coffman settled accounts with Mayne and had another quarrel with him, resulting in a fierce fight. Some witnesses say that Coffman knocked Mayne down, while others maintain that Mayne floored Coffman. However outdoors interfered and separated the two men. Thereupon Coffman, who is a quick-tempered man, drew a revolver and shot Mayne in the back, killing him instantly.
 Coffman was regarded as a quiet and innocuous man. Coffman was arrested and lodged in jail.
 Later—Coffman resides in Avoca. He is quite a prominent man, and owns the opera house in that place. He was not taken to jail, but is being guarded at his house. As usual in such cases there was considerable talk of lynching.

A Small Blaze.
 At 2 o'clock yesterday afternoon fire was discovered on the roof of Conrad Luedendorfer's meat market, next to the Croston house on Main street.
 Capt Hathaway telephoned for the fire department, and Max Mahn with his small hose played onto the roof until the firemen arrived.
 The fire was soon put out. The damage was very slight and no cause for the origin of the fire it seems can be given. Another section of hose burst as soon as water was turned on.
 Dick Ricketts, while helping unload the hose from No. 3, was somewhat hurt in the side, which knocked the wind out of him for a short time.
