

LOCAL BREVIETTES.

—County Clerk Leavitt is reported to be a little better.

—The picnic and dance that was to have been held at Hanson park last night, was seriously interfered with by the rain.

—Sam Wilson, Charles Banks, Ed Barney and F M Glinney, a quartette of boot-blacks, were locked up in the city jail yesterday on a charge of fighting.

—Mattie Scott, a negro girl of tender age, fell in a drunken fit near the corner of Sixth and Farnam yesterday. She was removed to the city jail.

—Sheriff Miller will go to Lincoln this morning with eleven prisoners for the penitentiary, and two candidates for admission into the insane asylum.

—The insurance agents are still at work adjusting the losses of Messrs. Her & Co., sustained by them in the destruction of their oil refinery by fire last week.

—E. H. Cochran, the collector accused by Dr. Seach of appropriating some $76 to his own use has been released on $300 bail, and will have a trial this morning.

Company "H" of the 121st Infantry, sent to Fort Russell, Wyo., some time ago, has been recalled from there and ordered to take station at Fort Fred Steele, Wyo.

—A sneak thief entered the house of J. W. Morse on Farnam street, the other day, (date not exactly known), and made away with about $40 worth of silverware. No clue.

—Tom Ballard, the doleful murderer of Henry Vesperen, now awaiting death in the county jail, is given everything to eat that his appetite craves. The sheriff also allows him to have two drinks of liquor a day.

—Manager Kay of the Athletic park, has secured answers from the St. Joe and Leavenworth clubs, that neither can play here Saturday and Sunday with the U. P. A. It is probable that a game will be arranged for Sunday between the U. P. and Athletic nines.

—Louis Camp, the young man who was charged by Winpear of stealing a lot of candles from him, was tried yesterday afternoon before Judge Stenberg and a jury of three men. After hearing all the evidence, the jury said that Camp was not guilty, therefore the judge released him.

—Sue clever snatched stole several boxes of cigars Tuesday afternoon from the store of Stephens Bros. on Thirteenth street. A young man came in and asking for some tobacco, sent the proprietor to the rear end of the store, and while his attention was thus temporarily diverted, a "pal" walked off with the cigars under his arm.

—J. Yates, a painter working in Gratton & Drummond's carriage factory, sustained a severe cut on his right wrist yesterday, a piece of glass from a broken skylight falling on him. The several arteries were severed. Dr. Hostetter, who was called in, took up the cut arteries and sewed them. The wound is not dangerous, though very painful.

—A Bet man stepped into John A. Freyhan & Co.'s, wholesale liquor and cigar establishment at 801 to 807 Howard street, and was told that since accepting the agency for the Franz-Falk Brewing Co., of Milwaukee, they have had more orders for their popular bottled goods than they were able to fill and the rushing manner in which the goods were being loaded on the wagons abundantly proved the assertion.

—Some days ago a trunk was left by some unknown person in the German Lutheran church on Douglas street. How or why it came to be there is a mystery. Yesterday Officer Whalen took the trunk and opened it. It was filled with clothing and trinkets, evidently belonging to a Swede girl, Mary Anderson, just arrived in this country, and had been shipped recently from Red Oak.

—(Quite an agreeable surprise was given Mr. C. Sumner Tuesday evening in honor of his twentieth anniversary at the residence of Mrs. King, 1108 Cass street. The excelsior band was in attendance and announced the arrival of the party. An orchestra was also on hand to give music for those who would "trip the light fantastic." Through the good management of Miss Lulu King and Thomas H. Love, it was made one of the most enjoyable affairs of the season. Mr. Sumner received many valuable presents; among them a diamond pin, a toilet set, a walking cane and other presents from various friends.

Yesterday morning some malt which was being roasted in the mill of Clark Bros & Co., on Douglas street caught fire in the "roaster," and for a time there was a lively blaze. The fire department called out but the fire was extinguished before they reached the spot. The malt was being ex-ported on board for a gentleman who desired to make porter by a new process. Barring the loss of the malt, several bushels, there was no loss.

The Case Compromised.

Harry Starwood, the dapper young picture agent who was brought back from Papillon by Constable Edgerton Tuesday in company with Miss McGuire, the 15 year old girl whom he had seduced from home has been released. He managed to effect a compromise last night, paying all costs and left the city on one of the evening trains, saying that hereafter he would be strictly to the picture business and leave the girls alone. Meanwhile the girl is at home thinking pensively of her lost love.

In this connection it might be well to state that the girl referred to in yesterday's Bee is not the daughter of Patrick McGuire, though by a curious coincidence the age and name are the same in both cases.

OMAHA'S STREETS.

City Engineer Rosewater Makes Some Pertinent Remarks About Them.

The New System of Naming Which He Proposes—Its Advantages—The Disagreeable Features of the Present System.

—A reporter of the Bee called yesterday upon City Engineer Rosewater, and had an interesting talk with him about the present system of naming and numbering the streets of this city, the evils thereof, and the scheme which he has proposed to do away with them.

"In the first place," said Mr. Rosewater, "a word or two about the present system of naming and numbering the streets. As I take it, streets exist for the convenience of travel; they are named and numbered simply that they may be easily located—so that one can easily find any place on any business or residence street. But in Omaha you will find that the present system subserves any such desirable purpose. Far from it. The streets are all mixed up, and have no uniformity. During the last five years 30,000 people have located in Omaha, and yet I'll venture to say that none of them are at all familiar with the streets of the city, excepting, of course, the few principal ones. A great many additions are made by year being made to the city, so that the situation grows worse and worse. I will venture the assertion that the additions of the city comprise all told sixty or seventy miles of streets; and there is no surveyor in this city who is so entirely familiar with the streets of the city and its additions that he can find every one of them so completely and unambiguously in the present system of naming and numbering.

"Here is a map of the city and its additions. Look how ridiculously some of its streets are laid out. What is Twenty-seventh street in McCormick's addition in Twenty-eighth in Boggs & Hill's addition, Thirtieth in Prospect Place, State in Clark's addition, and Colfax in Bartlett's addition. Take Jackson street—further out it is practically U. S. Grant street, and still further out Middle street. And you could go on all day detecting these ridiculous flaws. Then, the system is very faulty in that the names of many streets are repeated. For example, there are three Centre streets, two or three Pine streets, two or three Walnut and Spruce streets, and so on.

"Admitting, then, that these defects exist, no one will deny, I suppose, that a remedy ought to be applied. My plan, in a few words, is this: Do away with the present system of naming and numbering entirely. Fix upon some central street, as Dodge, running east and west, for the basis of the new system. It would be called Dodge avenue, and all the streets running east and west would be called avenues. The next street south of Dodge, which is now Douglas, would be called Second avenue south, Farnam, Third avenue south, and so on. The next street north of Dodge avenue, now Capitol avenue, would be called Second avenue north, the next one Third avenue north, and so on. The streets running north and south would be numbered, fixing upon one of the lower streets as First street. This system of numbering would be continued as far as the streets running north and south are to be found. Then, if a man told you that he lived at the corner of Twenty-Third street and seventh avenue north, you could, by counting the number of avenues north from Dodge avenue, and the number of streets west from First street, find out where he lived. All the blocks should be in length 304 feet. When it happened that a block is subdivided into sections by cross streets coming in which do not enter the opposite blocks, I would apply the name First Twenty-Third, Second Twenty-Third, etc., to each block as the case might be. This would enable one to determine exactly on what part of a certain block a store was located. The present system of numbering, with a few small modifications, could be used.

"In this way, the present system of naming the streets would be entirely swept away, and a new one substituted. If this plan is adopted, there would not be a street or a locality in the city which a child could not find.

"A great many people object to having a change made in the present system," continued Mr. Rosewater, "on the ground that the citizens have become used to the system of naming the streets, and to have to familiarize themselves with a new set of names would be very inconvenient. Now that is ridiculous. Within the past five years, as I said before, 30,000 people have come to Omaha none of whom are familiar with the present principal streets and practically do not know the city at all. Within the next five years, if the town is to have 100,000 population, there will be 40,000 people who will settle here, making 70,000 people who have practically no knowledge of the city. Now wouldn't it be better to put the matter in the hands of a little inconvenience, in order to have the city's system of streets a correct and simple one, than to allow the last 70,000 people to become used to our present miserable system? Certainly it seems to me that this argument of the inconvenience of the change is a very weak one.

"The new system would be very easily learned, I think. The city could have printed for distribution to all who applied, small lithographed maps of the city, showing all the streets as they are named. In this way the changes would be easily understood, and within six months every man, woman and child in this city would have become acquainted with all the features of the new system."

An Optum Rato.

A "green" policeman was stung Tuesday night into an onion joint on Twelfth street, between Farnam and Douglas, and saw there a lot of "hop heads" enjoying an opium smoke. He went out, and remarked casually on the matter to one of his brethren, who immediately communicated the affair to headquarters. The police decided to sweep down and arrest the proprietor and all the inmates. When they got there, however, all the hop heads but a Mongolian, "Pony Chinaman" and two girls, Belle Sanders and May Vaughn, had fled. They were arrested, but afterwards released on $5 and costs each—the Chinaman $20 and costs. All paid and were released.

The girl Belle Sanders was a miserable wreck from opium-smoking—her skin sallow, constitution and nervous system completely wrecked. Her companion was not addicted to hop and "had gone into the joint," as she explained, "just for fun."

STRUCK BY LIGHTNING.

Robert Thompson Killed Yesterday Morning When on His Way to Work—The Circumstances.

One of the most curious instances of death by lightning-stroke, recorded in local annals, occurred yesterday morning during the severe rain storm.

A few minutes before 7 o'clock, Robert Thompson, an employee in the U. P. tin works started from his home near the waterworks on the bottoms, to go to work at the shops. He had not been on his way more than a few minutes, when he was struck by a bolt of lightning, and fell instantly dead. He was discovered lying on the ground, face upwards, by a passer-by, who at once notified the coroner. The body was at once removed to Drexel & Maul's undertaking rooms where it now awaits interment.

An investigation of the circumstances attending the case discloses a most curious state of affairs. The bolt of lightning must have struck the unfortunate man on the top of the head, for on one side of the crown is a small raw aperture about the size of a bullet hole, while on the right foot, between the second and third toes, is another small hole, where the lightning evidently came out of his body. Outside of these two small wounds there is not a bruise on the whole body, of any kind, nor in fact any discoloration. The peaceful look upon the dead man's face shows that his death must have been instantaneous. His clothing—his coat, trousers and shirt—were torn to tatters, his pants, which were of coarse jean cloth, being ripped into a thousand pieces. His rubber gaiters were also ripped to pieces, while his shoes were so thoroughly torn and scattered, in small pieces, that they could not be found. Near the spot where Thompson fell, also, there was a large hole, a few inches in diameter, and several feet deep, where the bolt penetrated the ground. No insect will be held by Coroner Drexel, as the cause of death is plainly manifest.

A number of physicians and scientific men inspected the body yesterday, and all agree that the case is one of the "strangest" on record. The facts of the slight discoloration of the body, coupled with the complete destruction of the clothing, showing that the fluid must have passed through the clothing, and the absence of discoloration, together with other circumstances, combine to make the case of a singular interest.

Robert Thompson, the victim of the sad calamity, was 41 years of age, and a man of great intelligence and many good parts. He leaves a wife and a family of five children, upon whom the terrible and sudden affliction bears with crushing weight. He has lived in Omaha for a number of years and has been for some time in the employ of the Union Pacific road.

The deceased was a member of the Burns club and the funeral will be held on Saturday under the auspices of that organization. The following call has been issued:

Omaha's Need for a "Black Marlin," and the Efforts that are on Foot to Get One.

The question of securing a patrol wagon for Omaha's police force seems to be something unusually interesting to those most directly concerned. One week ago Councilman Lee introduced a resolution in the city council ordering that a team and wagon of the character named be provided. The resolution was referred to a committee, which reported favorably on it last Tuesday and now has been adopted. At Monday night's meeting of the school board Mr. Long introduced a resolution proposing to appropriate out of the school fund $400 towards the desired convenience. The other members, however, raised a question as to whether the board could legally make such an appropriation. In support of his resolution Mr. Long argued that they had already donated $5,000 towards the erection of a city building and would probably give more in consideration that they are to have a room, set apart, in that building for their use. Then, in view of the fact that more than half of every fine collected at police court goes into the school fund, he thought that the board could well afford to bear half the expense of a patrol outfit. His resolution was referred to a special committee, with instructions to ascertain whether its provisions can be legally complied with or not. It seems to be a generally entertained opinion that Omaha has grown large enough to need the services of a "black marlin," and enough more offenders would be taken in to room pay for it in additional fines. One of the arguments used is that the disgraceful sight of seeing drunken men and women dragged through the streets would be abolished, and the board of health would be able to leave their beats every time they made an arrest. Officers could ring for the wagon, which would go after the prisoners and whirled them to jail in a jiffy.

The Body Identified.

Mrs. Westerford and daughter, who went down to Bellevue Tuesday, returned yesterday. Mrs. Westerford reports that she positively identified the body found at Bellevue Monday night as the body of her son who was drowned while bathing in the river, at this point last week. The body was very much discolored and bloated, and after an inquest was interred at Bellevue. One of the curious points by which the body was identified as that of Westerford's was the fact that the body had six toes on one of his feet, as did Westerford.

The family of the drowned are poor and in straitened circumstances. Their principal support was the son and brother, and now that he has gone their condition is doubly distressing.
