MINOR MENTION.

Specially low prices in Canton flannels at Coeke & Morgan's.

D. A. Benedet has opened up his new sign painting shop at No. 19 Pearl street, over Bushnell's.

The Knights and Ladies of Honor are to meet by moonlight in Falmouth park this evening, if there is a moon.

Judge Aylesworth will probably render his decision to-day in the contest over the chieftainship of the fire department.

The Streetville and Crescent City clubs' base ball game Sunday was won by a score of 32 to 12 in favor of Streetville.

Officer Jack Cusick has laid off the star and is again a citizen. Cusick has been a good officer, but one falling has at times flooded him.

Remember those 50c unaltered shirts at Coeke & Morgan's.

The game of ball between the House-Movers and Expressmen's nines on Sunday resulted in a victory for the Express nine. Score, 3 to 2.

St. John Bros. are receiving carload after carload of Muscatine island water melons, and are distributing them readily, the melons being unusually fine.

R. Liddell, one of the old residents of Washington township, died at his home there on Saturday, at the ripe age of 85 years. The funeral took place yesterday.

The best white shirt ever sold for 50c at Coeke & Morgan's.

A printer who left the Nonpareil about the first of June, on a western trip, arrived here again yesterday, and reports his time from Portland, Oregon, here as twelve days, riding on brakewood a good deal of the way, at that, and stopping three days along the route.

Jerry Collier, of Layton township, is reported as having had a lively time with a horse thief the other night. He was aroused from sleep by hearing the fellow working at the barn, and going out he gave him chase, they exchanging five shots. The fellow got away, and Collier found, on entering the house, that he had two bullet holes through his clothing, but had luckily escaped a scratch.

The whereabouts of Jesse Baldwin, the travelling man who is said to be short in his accounts, are not known yet, but it is claimed that he was seen and recognized working his way west on the Union Pacific road, and that in company with several others was stealing a ride on the trucks of freight trains. If so it would be quite a change for the young man, who was a good deal of a society pet. It seems as if it must be a case of mistaken identity.

There seems a strange streak of circumstances preventing the opening of the August term of the circuit court here. For a week past there have been daily postponements owing to the judge being detained by business elsewhere, and it was certain that the court would open yesterday morning, but the Northwestern train on which the judge was to arrive was detained by a wash-out, and he could not get here. Again it is confidently asserted that the circuit court will be in session to-day.

George R. Beard is now nicely located in his new store, No. 502 Broadway, next to Officer & Pusey's bank, where he has as attractive and well stocked a wall paper house and art store as can be found in this part of the country. The store has been very finely decorated, and the effect as a whole is as pleasing as it is possible for art to make one. Most excellent taste has been shown, and with so attractive quarters, and with an established reputation and business, Beard will doubtless continue to please the public and better himself.

The Democratic League made its first appearance here last evening. It is a small but sprightly evening paper, which expects of course to fill a long felt want. It modestly refrains from declaring who is the publisher or the editor, but it is understood that it is the enterprise of the "Carter Harrison of the Missouri slope," and will be helped out by the able pen of Col. Whiteley, who is a veteran journalist. It is understood that the paper is only to be run during the campaign, and that it will be the organ of the anti-prohibitionists.

Prof. Slattery, who for so long had charge of St. Joseph academy here, returned yesterday from St. Louis, his old home, where he is in the habit of spending his vacations. He will not continue with the academy here, however, having accepted a better position in Osgahton college, in Osgahton. He will still be within easy communication with his Council Bluffs friends, however, which is a cause for congratulation. It is understood that Mr. J. B. Ogehall is to take charge of St. Joseph academy here, and that his daughter will be his assistant.

Henry Kneamyer, the proprietor of the Coy house, the burning of which was recorded in yesterday's Bee, was in Fort Madison at the time of the fire, visiting his parents. He held insurance of $2,000 on the furniture, it being

In the Commercial Union, of London, Gans & Cahoon being the local agents. The building was the property of Col. Cochran, and, as he is at Little Sioux, the exact insurance is not known, but it is pretty fairly covered probably. There are no new revelations concerning the origin of the fire, and of course in the absence of anything else, the theory of incendiarism is set up.

The grey-haired attorney still protests against the attentions being paid to his daughter, and created another street scene near the Baptist church Sunday night. The young couple were walking peacefully along when the old gentleman slipped up behind, and grabbing an umbrella from under the young man's arm began belaboring him with it. There was a brief and lively tussle, accompanied by feminine screams, and then the parties scattered. It is about time that the irate sire learned that where there is a will there is a way, and he ought not to get in the way. He is causing a great deal of notoriety to attach to his family matters, and does not seem to be bettering matters thereby.

Next Sunday, August 23, the saloon keepers are to give a picnic at the park on Graham avenue. Extensive preparations are being made, and good music and other novelties for a good time will be provided. All are cordially invited.

THE POLICEMEN'S PICNIC. A Motley Gathering of Cases in Court.

Yesterday morning there were two peculiarities to the Monday morning police court, one being the amount of fruit gathered in from the saloon men's picnic, and the number of local prisoners, there not being as many non-residents as usual.

Charles Royer was charged with resisting an officer. It seems that he had two beer glasses at the picnic, and was preparing to defend himself with these while the fighting was going on, but Deputy Marshal Bates disarmed him, and turning on Bates he defied arrest. He was placed in the ambulance, however, and on the way to the station he and Bates had another tussle in which Bates used his billy. Besides getting three bumps on the head Royer got fined $29.

"Well, Judge, I guess I'll have to stay a few days with you." "All right, and perhaps if you are so much smarter than the officers you can run the jail."

"I could run it as well as those fellows that are there."

Before the day was out though, Royer had changed his mind, and settled his fine, rather than board it out. He feels more ways than one about the way he was used.

Frank K. Barr was charged with being drunk, and with assaulting a man named Dawson with a beer glass. He could not give anything about it, except that he went to the picnic, and took their words for it. His bill was $14.

Charles Lee was also at the picnic, and pleaded guilty to disturbing the peace by fighting; $9.60.

Will Davis, ditto.

Ladd Clark was fined $2 less, he having indulged in getting drunk merely with the extra of a fight.

Ben Long denied that he was disturbing the peace, or that he assaulted anybody at the picnic. His case was continued for the securing of evidence.

The three men arrested for disturbing the peace in lower Main street, Dalhanty, Peters and Ramsey, were discharged. It seems that Ed Ford, who owns several houses, did not like the way some of his tenants were acting, and he tried to stop the free and easy way with which beer was being brought into one of the houses, and women and men were cavorting about, and so he took it upon himself to clear out the crowd. It seems that all these three did was to pick them up, and that his indignation was probably justifiable, there being little comfort for him in appealing to the tangled tedious processes of the law.

Joe Wright, who was arrested on suspicion of being concerned in the burglarizing of the paint car of the C. B. & Q., was discharged for lack of evidence. The judge gave him a peremptory shot—"You are 26 years old, and have not laid by twenty-five cents. You are not much good to any community, so go, and try in the next twenty-five years to get at least twenty-five cents together."

Mike Stoker, as predicted in yesterday's Bee, was promptly discharged from the charge of picking pockets. It was a great mistake, the fellow whose pocket it was claimed he was about to empty, being an old friend and former employe of his. The alleged victim, who had been acquainted intimately with Stoker for fifteen years, laughed at the idea of his trying to pick his pocket, and the case was dropped.

THE SALOON MEN'S PICNIC.

The Opposition Roused to Fresh Indignation.

The Sunday picnic given by the saloon men of the city has called forth much indignation, and many sharp criticisms are heard on all sides. The prohibitionists and church folks are of course indignant, but this was to be expected, but the indignation is not confined to these by any means. Some of those who have favored a judicious license, and who have advocated the proper regulation of saloons are among those who are disgusted with the way the saloon men are conducting themselves and their business. Some of the saloon men themselves are not endorsing the policy being pursued by the majority, and realize that it is needlessly arousing much opposition to the business.

The saloon men made a very foolish move by their holding of a picnic in the city on Sunday. The affair would have created a quiet opposition had it been an orderly and quiet one, but the effect has been increased by the drunkenness and disorderliness which characterized the actions of many who were in attendance. The saloon men are situated peculiarly in this city at the present time. With a prohibitory law hanging over their heads, and with many urging that their places be closed up tight, in compliance with this law, they are only permitted to run on account of the sentiment of many who claim that a prohibitory law is impracticable, and that it is better to have the saloons run under police regulation. The business just now needs all the friends it can get, and yet the men who are in the business seem to forget this fact, and to conceive the idea that they can do as they please in all respects. By thus doing they are pursuing a suicidal policy, to say the least. They are furnishing their prohibitionist opponents with proofs that the business cannot be regulated, and that the high license men are mistaken in claiming that it can be thus regulated.

The giving of the Sunday picnic, and such a picnic as this proved to be, was virtually a slap in the face to a large portion of the community, and a defiant declaration that no regard is felt for those who have honest scruples against such doings. This has aroused afresh the feeling of opposition, and needlessly so, and the saloon men can blame none but themselves. The picnic perhaps would not of itself have caused so much indignation, had it not been one of a series of events, all of the same character. The attempt of the police to get the saloon men to close at a reasonable hour at night, and to keep closed on Sundays has been a failure, and it seems that there is not a single police regulation which the saloon men will unanimously abide by. There are a few who do, but the majority run quietly and orderly, but there are so many who insist on doing in all things as they please, that the whole business has to suffer alike.

Such utter disregard for law and order as is shown by some of those in the business is doing more against the traffic than all that can be done by prohibitionists can do. When saloons throw open their front doors and have brass bands playing on Sunday night, and then defy the police to stop the hilarity; when a noisy bartender with a noisy crowd about him receives warning from the city marshal to keep more quiet, and responds by telling the officer to go to school; when Sunday picnics are given, and fighting and boisterousness prevail, the saloon men must expect that the opposition to the business will get more followers and fresh vigor. While license men are advocating the idea that the business can be regulated, and while the prohibitionists are denying that it can be regulated, the saloon men are seemingly trying to show that the foolishness of the sort of devil-walk-care policy still being pursued is enough of the others to keep the kettle stirred, and to drive into the opposition camp many who would otherwise be more friendly to them.

Veterans Re-union at Windsor, Vt. No more beautiful grounds, we venture to say, could have been chosen for the fifth annual re-union of the Windsor county veterans of the war for the union than the shady grove and ample meadows of the Hon. Horace Everett just east of the village and on the banks of the Connecticut river. The stand where the exercises were held was erected just south-west of the Everett house, among the huge elms and maples that shade it. A vast crowd attended, a happy day was passed, and when the day closed it was by every soldier joining in the battle cry of Freedom.—Vermont Journal.

Senator Manderson's Cattle Scheme. North Dakota Telegraph. It is astonishing what strange things are brooded in the minds of men, even of great men. Senator Manderson has one of these wonderful schemes, if he is rightly reported by a BEZ interviewer.

Speaking of the differences between the national administration and the stockmen, he is reported thus: "He was of the opinion that national legislation ought to allow the lands of each western state and territory to be under supervision of a commission which should determine the lands which were fit for setting up, and throw them open for immigration. Those lands not immediately available for arable purposes could be used for ranch purposes on such terms that the lease could be cancelled on six months' notice. The settler is not a capable judge of the quality of the land he seeks his life, so far as agricultural pursuits, but is to abide by the decision of a government commission as to where he may settle and where he shall not! Does Senator Manderson suppose that any would-be settler will be led or in any way benefitted by the rulings of such a commission? It is easy to see how and how unreasonably the stockmen would favor the creation of a commission with such powers as Senator Manderson suggests."
